COHASSET HISTORY

Old town records being saved

Preservation funding makes it possible

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

"This is our history. It only makes sense to have it preserved."
Town Clerk Marion Douglas

Deep inside the confines of Town Hall safe in a vault are some of the town's most precious assets: its history.

The Town Clerk is the keeper of the town's records and documents its citizenry's milestones including when babies are born, when teenagers register for vote, when marriages occur, and when they pass away.

Over the past five years, Town Clerk Marion Douglas has led an effort to restore and preserve some of the town's most important records, some of which go back over 275 years. With the help of Community Preservation Act funding, about 50 books of irreplaceable records have been returned to something close to their original state.

"This is our history. It only makes sense to have it preserved," Douglas said in her office last week. Located just a few feet from her desk is the Town Clerk's vault, which holds key information painting the rich information of Cohasset's history and its residents.

A peek into the vault reveals shelves of vivid burgundy and gold books.

"Aren't they beautiful? And now you can finally read them!" Douglas remarked.

The town is required to keep birth, death and marriage records in perpetuity. These "vital" town records date back to 1732 before Cohasset was even

Police rescue 16-year-old 'Lucy'

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

An Australian Shepherd has captured the hearts of Cohasset residents over the past week.

Cohasset police rescued Lucy, a 16-year-old dog, from a remote area off Atlantic Avenue last Thursday. She had been missing from her family, Rustam DeVitre and Virginia Shahinian of Atlantic Avenue, for three weeks.

"It's a miracle she was able to live that long," Shahinian said this week. After spending three nights at the veterinary hospital Lucy is now recovering at home.

Lucy and her family's ordeal began three weeks ago when she and her 15-year-old Australian shepherd sister went out at night to do their business. Shahinian said they usually don't go far because of their age. A few minutes later Millie had come back, but Lucy had not.

Rustam DeVitre went out looking for her with a flashlight, but couldn't find her. He figured she would find her way back in the morning. But she didn't show up on the doorstep in the morning.

The next day DeVitre and Shahinian looked all over for her, through the thick briars behind their house, and even where Lucy was eventually found.

"We clapped, we whistled.

WHAT'S GOING ON HERE?

Commuter rail work begins April 30

What it is:
Tie replacement on the main commuter rail line between the Braintree station and South Station.

What is the impact on Cohasset:
According to Tom Halkin of Mills & Company, on behalf of the Massachusetts Bay Commuter Rail Company, starting April 30, the Greenbush line (from Greenbush to South Station) will not be running on weekends. At the same time the Middleboro/Lakeville and Plymouth/Kingston lines will also not have weekend service. No substitute bus transportation available during the weekend. Passengers are advised to seek alternate routes. All stations along the Greenbush line will be closed Saturdays and Sundays during the construction period. Weekday service will not be interrupted during the project.

What are they doing:
In March, the MBTA resumed the project to replace approximately 57 miles of concrete cross-ties on the Middleborough and Kingston Lines of the Old Colony. The concrete ties are beginning to fail, resulting in safety speed restrictions, which have caused numerous delays. The concrete ties are being replaced with timber cross-ties which have a proven performance record. Rail ties on the Greenbush line will not be replaced, but the concrete ties on the main line between Braintree and Boston will be.

EXTRA IN YOUR MARINER

When will the construction be finished:
According to Halkin, construction would continue from April 30 until December. Then construction would stop for the winter and begin again in March of 2012, at which time the Greenbush line will be halted on the weekends again. The project's anticipated completion date is sometime in 2012.

A Greenbush train rolls into the station during a test run prior to the commuter rail line starting operations in 2007. Due to tie replacement on the commuter rail line between the Braintree station and South Station, Greenbush will not be offering weekend service starting April 30. STAFF FILE PHOTO BY ROBIN CHAN

Old town records being saved

Preservation funding makes it possible

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Deep inside the confines of Town Hall safe in a vault are some of the town's most precious assets: its history.

The Town Clerk is the keeper of the town's records and documents its citizenry's milestones including when babies are born, when teenagers register for vote, when marriages occur, and when they pass away.

Over the past five years, Town Clerk Marion Douglas has led an effort to restore and preserve some of the town's most important records, some of which go back over 275 years. With the help of Community Preservation Act funding, about 50 books of irreplaceable records have been returned to something close to their original state.

"This is our history. It only makes sense to have it preserved."
Town Clerk Marion Douglas

"This is our history. It only makes sense to have it preserved," Douglas said in her office last week. Located just a few feet from her desk is the Town Clerk's vault, which holds key information painting the rich information of Cohasset's history and its residents.

A peek into the vault reveals shelves of vivid burgundy and gold books.

"Aren't they beautiful? And now you can finally read them!" Douglas remarked.

The town is required to keep birth, death and marriage records in perpetuity. These "vital" town records date back to 1732 before Cohasset was even

Police rescue 16-year-old 'Lucy'

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

An Australian Shepherd has captured the hearts of Cohasset residents over the past week.

Cohasset police rescued Lucy, a 16-year-old dog, from a remote area off Atlantic Avenue last Thursday. She had been missing from her family, Rustam DeVitre and Virginia Shahinian of Atlantic Avenue, for three weeks.

"It's a miracle she was able to live that long," Shahinian said this week. After spending three nights at the veterinary hospital Lucy is now recovering at home.

Lucy and her family's ordeal began three weeks ago when she and her 15-year-old Australian shepherd sister went out at night to do their business. Shahinian said they usually don't go far because of their age. A few minutes later Millie had come back, but Lucy had not.

Rustam DeVitre went out looking for her with a flashlight, but couldn't find her. He figured she would find her way back in the morning. But she didn't show up on the doorstep in the morning.

The next day DeVitre and Shahinian looked all over for her, through the thick briars behind their house, and even where Lucy was eventually found.

"We clapped, we whistled.

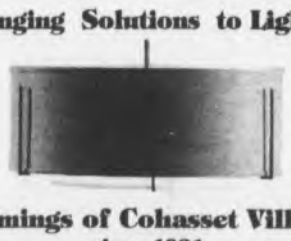
WHAT'S GOING ON HERE?

Commuter rail work begins April 30

What it is:
Tie replacement on the main commuter rail line between the Braintree station and South Station.

What is the impact on Cohasset:
According to Tom Halkin of Mills & Company, on behalf of the Massachusetts Bay Commuter Rail Company, starting April 30, the Greenbush line (from Greenbush to South Station) will not be running on weekends. At the same time the Middleboro/Lakeville and Plymouth/Kingston lines will also not have weekend service. No substitute bus transportation available during the weekend. Passengers are advised to seek alternate routes. All stations along the Greenbush line will be closed Saturdays and Sundays during the construction period. Weekday service will not be interrupted during the project.

What are they doing:
In March, the MBTA resumed the project to replace approximately 57 miles of concrete cross-ties on the Middleborough and Kingston Lines of the Old Colony. The concrete ties are beginning to fail, resulting in safety speed restrictions, which have caused numerous delays. The concrete ties are being replaced with timber cross-ties which have a proven performance record. Rail ties on the Greenbush line will not be replaced, but the concrete ties on the main line between Braintree and Boston will be.



EXTRA IN YOUR MARINER

When will the construction be finished:
According to Halkin, construction would continue from April 30 until December. Then construction would stop for the winter and begin again in March of 2012, at which time the Greenbush line will be halted on the weekends again. The project's anticipated completion date is sometime in 2012.

LUCY

We brought Millie with us to help. Lucy is almost deaf and almost blind and doesn't have a strong sense of smell," Shahinian said. "It's so hard to know where she was – I wish I could ask her!"

An e-mail blast went out to hundreds of residents to be on the lookout for the red merle Australian shepherd. Over the three weeks she was missing from home Shahinian said they received information on four sightings of her near Jerusalem Road and by the common.

"We would race over and look for her," Shahinian said, but she was nowhere to be found.

"Losing Lucy was truly losing a big part of our family, as I could always rely on her to greet me upon any arrival home," said Andrew DeVitre, currently a junior at University of Rhode Island.

Millie, Lucy's canine sister, was taking life without her counterpart hard. Shahinian said she was pacing around the house and her tail wasn't wagging as it usually does.

"The two of them have been side-by-side for their entire lives, so there was an apparent void in Millie's life. She was not as peppy or loving as she usually is," Andrew said.

As the days turned to a week, and then two weeks, and then another, and the weather was cold and stormy, it got harder to believe Lucy could have survived. They thought maybe someone had taken her in or she had passed away.

"An old dog like that I couldn't imagine she was still alive," Shahinian. "We were losing hope."

Yet, at the same time, the family knew what kind of dog Lucy was.

"She's so strong. She's smart as a whip. She has a very Type-A personality. I knew she would never give up," Shahinian said.

And she didn't.

A call came into the Cohasset police station on Thursday (April 14) from a contractor working on a Nichols Road home. He had spotted an animal struggling across Little Harbor. "Thankfully they didn't let it go, they took action and called the police," said a very grateful Shahinian. She still does not know who the caller was.

When officers arrived, they could see an injured dog across Little Harbor on a peninsula that jets out into the body of water.

Officer Patrick Reardon comforts Lucy while she was being checked over at the Hingham Animal Clinic before being moved to the South Coastal Animal Hospital.
COURTESY PHOTO

Officers parked near 400 Atlantic Avenue and trekked close to a half-mile into the woods along the shoreline to get to the dog. Once they arrived, they found Lucy at the bottom of a steep embankment trapped in thick brush and thorns.

The responding officers Patrick Reardon and Sergeant Jeffrey Treanor jumped down the 12-foot embankment and cut the brush and thorns away from the dog freeing her.

Lucy, who had now been missing from her owners for three weeks, was too weak to walk or even bark anymore. She was severely dehydrated, her nose was red raw, her fur matted and she had lost a quarter of her weight.

Officer Reardon carried the dog back through the woods to his cruiser. She was then brought to the Hingham Animal Clinic on Route 3A. Later, Lucy was brought to South Coastal Animal Hospital to go under the care of veterinarian Dr. Grace Strake.

"She was on the brink of death when they found her," Shahinian said. She called Officer Reardon "our angel."

Lucy is slowly but surely coming back to her old self. She came home this past Saturday.

She is having trouble standing up and can't walk for very long, Shahinian said.

"Her spirit is coming back. She's very sweet; her eyes will follow you around the room," Shahinian said. They are utilizing one of her favorite things, treats, to help her get her legs back.

Andrew said it didn't surprise him in the least that Lucy had survived in the wilderness for as long as she did, "Lucy has always been such a strong character."

In fact, while Lucy was missing Andrew never mentally prepared himself to the reality she was gone for good. He never gave up hope she would come home.

"She makes me so happy and makes my home so special – even when she barks super loud in the early hours of the morning, they are barks of love!" Andrew said. He came home from the University of Rhode Island to welcome her back this past weekend as did his sister, Adrina.

But, the happiest member of the family to have Lucy back home is her sister and best friend, Millie.

"Millie was so lost without her. Lucy is completely the alpha dog. Order is now restored. Millie is always by her side," Shahinian said.

Home health aide charged with larceny

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police have summonsed a 48-year-old Scituate woman to court on the charge of larceny over $250 – which is a felony – after she allegedly admitted to taking $550 from an elderly man in Cohasset. The woman was working as a home health aide and had been taking care of the man's wife, police said. The elderly man, who takes $300 a week out of the bank for him and his wife to live on, noticed he had been missing money over the past several weeks and estimated that upwards of $2,000 had been taken. He went to the police.

When police confronted the woman with this allegation at her home in Scituate, she broke down and admitted that she had been stealing from the Cohasset couple over the past month and turned over $120 to police that she had left over from the theft, police said.

OUI arrest

A 33-year-old Marshfield man is facing a drunken driving charge following a traffic stop last Saturday (April 16) at 1:11 a.m. at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Beechwood Street. An officer on patrol sTopped the 2009 Toyota pickup truck headed south on 3A toward Scituate traveling 60 in a 35 mpH zone. The officer observed the pickup weaving all over the road and over the double yellow line. The officer stopped the vehicle and the driver allegedly admitted to having been drinking at an eatery in the Hingham Shipyard. The officer could smell the odor of alcohol from the Marshfield man's breath. The man failed field sobriety tests. He was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol. His car was towed.

Possible scam

The owner of a gym on Route 3A reported to police on Saturday that she may have been the victim of a potential scam. She "googled" a locksmith for her office and the search revealed a company in Cohasset with an address on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. A man showed up, took her credit card out to his car and charged her $150. He pried the door open with a screwdriver, damaging the door, police said. The woman reported that the man acted very nervous, did not have a business card, and there were no markings on his car. She was worried that he had a copy of her credit card and could be a victim of identity theft. Detectives are following up and found the business address he provided did not exist. There is no one listed in the Registry of Motor Vehicles with the name he provided, police said.

Counterfeit

An elderly man stopped by the police station last week because he thought he had received two counterfeit $1 bills at a local supermarket. While the bills were being shown to the detectives, the man left, police said. While it appeared the bills, which had an unusual texture, might have been through the laundry, they were not counterfeit, police said. Police said it would be very unusual to find counterfeit $1 bills, as the penalty is the same for counterfeiting money with higher value.

Unlicensed

A 24-year-old Allston woman is being summonsed for unlicensed operation, police said. An officer on patrol saw a 2001 Chevrolet Astrovan that was headed south on Route 3A make a left into Cohasset Plaza without yielding to oncoming traffic and almost causing an accident. The officer stopped the car in the plaza and further investigation revealed the operator had no license only a Brazilian passport. She is being charged with unlicensed operation and failure to yield to oncoming traffic. Her car was towed.

Intoxicated

An officer responded to a complaint from the AA meeting at the Second Congregational Church on Monday (April 11) that a woman was intoxicated at the meeting. No police action was necessary as some of the woman's friends took custody of her.

Suspicious man

A homeowner reported last week that his neighbor told him that he chased off a suspicious man who had been looking in the windows of his house, police said. The man was described as being scruffy-looking, tall and thin, around 30 years of age, with a gray sweatshirt, blue jeans and blonde hair. The neighbor yelled and the man ran off down Norman Todd Road. Police heard about the incident later after the homeowner was talking with his neighbor.

Air gun

The parents of a 14-year-old boy who had been firing off a soft air gun near his neighbor's chicken coop took the guN away and had their son apologize to the neighbor last week, police said. Police said the neighbor complained and wanted the boy spoken to. The boy denied aiming the gun at the chickens.

Hitchhiker

Police gave a hitchhiker a ride to the Scituate rotary. The man was hitchhiking in the dark at 12:23 a.m. last Friday (April 15) when police received a call about his welfare.

Wallet missing

A 42-year-old Cohasset man reported to police on Sunday that he had either lost his wallet or it had been stolen in Boston earlier that day. He checked with his credit card company and his credit card had already been used for purchases including: a $4.01 charge at Dunkin Donuts; a $25 taxi fare; and $446 at Best Buy.

Doorbell

Several boys in the area were spoken to after a Deep Run resident complained about her doorbell being rung repeatedly at around 9 p.m. on Friday (April 15). Police said the boys denied the activity but the ringing stopped after they were talked to.

Towed

Police had a 1996 Ford Explorer with expired New Hampshire plates towed from Beechwood Street near the ball field last week. The vehicle was parked on a public way, police said.

CAMPAIGN UPDATE

Hannon to seek post through write-in effort

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

The current Planning Board associate member William Hannon has told the Mariner he intends to seek the three-year Planning Board open seat through a write-in campaign.

Hannon, who lives at 79 Linden Drive, currently serves as the Planning Board's associate member. He was elected to that post in 2010. He is the first citizen to hold the seat.

"I feel more confident after being a part of the Planning Board for a year. I feel confident enough to be able to bring something to the table," Hannon said.

As an associate member Hannon has sat in on the Planning Board meetings, asked questions and made comments during public hearings and other business. The associate member only votes when asked by the chair of the Planning Board chair.

"We had some tough applications over the last year," Hannon said, naming the Turkey Hill wind turbine as one. "It's been a pretty good learning experience."

Hannon took out papers to seek the three-year Planning Board position, but was not able to return them by the deadline.

If Hannon were able to gain the open seat on the Planning Board, a citizen would need to be appointed to the associate member position by a joint vote of the Board of Selectmen and the Planning Board.

"If there is someone interested in the planning board being an associate member is very helpful. You learn an awful lot about the process," Hannon said.

He plans to send out an e-mail to his friends asking them to write him in for the three-year Planning Board position.

The three-year Planning Board seat became available when Jean Healey Dippold resigned in late February. She was elected to the Planning Board in 2009. The seat will fill her unexpired term.

Clark Brewer is running unopposed for the five-year seat on the Planning Board.

In addition to the three-year Planning Board seat, a one-year Water Commission seat does not have a balloted candidate.

The town election is Saturday, May 7.

ENVIRONMENT

By capturing the rain falling on the entire roof area, even a gentle shower will provide plenty of water – as little as one-quarter inch on an average roof will fill a barrel like the one shown here at a garden show. COURTESY PHOTO

Aquarion offering rain barrels

What:
Aquarion Water Co. and the New England Rain Barrel Co., are offering discounted rain barrels to their customers in order to help residents conserve water and reduce pollution from storm water runoff. Rain barrels retail for $119.95, but are available for the bulk discounted price of $72.70. Aquarion serves residents in North Cohasset.

How they help:
Rain barrels capture and store rainwater from gutters for later use. People can use the collected runoff to water gardens and lawns. By capturing the rain falling on the entire roof area, even a gentle shower will provide plenty of water – as little as one-quarter inch on an average roof will fill a barrel.
Storm water pollution is a growing problem. When rainwater flows over the paved surfaces in cities and suburbs, it picks up fertilizers and pesticides from lawns, oil and antifreeze from driveways, pet waste and litter, and deposits it all into streams and rivers. Rain barrels collect the water and will filter naturally into the ground when used to water plants and shrubs.

Description:
The rain barrels are made locally from plastic recycled beverage containers. Each barrel includes a 5-foot starter hose with a shutoff valve and complete installation instructions. Homeowners may join multiple barrels together for additional capacity, and paint the barrels if a different color is preferred.

More information:
For more information and to place an order, call New England Rain Barrel Co. toll free at 877-977-3135 or order online at www.nerainbarrel.com.

Order by:
Orders must be placed by May 4, for pickup at the Aquarion Water Treatment Facility at 900 Main St., Hingham, on Saturday May 7, between the hours of 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The Nagle Family wishes to acknowledge the following people for their generous contribution in creating a new bedroom, bathroom and ramp access for Caroline Nagle.

Stormwater is still an issue

Committee looks to collaborate with MIT, CSCR

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Nearly a year and a half ago the Board of Selectmen appointed members to the Stormwater Advisory Committee. Since that time they have met with residents to discuss stormwater issues and flooding. They took a stand on the Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project and developed an inventory of flood-prone issues.

As the three-member board has got a grasp on the complex and pervasive town-wide issue, they are beginning to look at long-term strategies to monitor and manage stormwater.

"We want to hear from as many well-informed sources as possible."
Noel Collins, stormwater chairman

First, though, they need a baseline data on where stormwater issues are occurring and their magnitude.

Stormwater Advisory Committee chair Noel Collins said his committee plans to meet with an administrator of the MIT Sea Grant and Jack Buckley, president of the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) on Monday to discuss the potential for a collaboration.

"The goal would be to assess the quality of stormwater and begin thinking long-term how to manage it," Collins said.

He and his counterparts, Ross Rosano and Jim Fitzgerald, have specific expertise, but none of them are stormwater experts.

"We want to hear from as many well-informed sources as possible," Collins said in a phone interview.

The potential would be to harness the dozens of students who do summer project work in Cohasset to do some of the fieldwork for the project, Collins said.

"It's a nexus of their interests and the Stormwater Advisory Committee's interests," Collins said.

The Stormwater Advisory Committee is also working on the 2011 annual flood prone survey report.

"We want to get a sense of how to manage stormwater and specifically, how to manage stormwater with Cohasset's special conditions," Collins said.

The Stormwater Advisory Committee will meet at Town Hall at 7p.m. on Monday, April 25.

COHASSET SAILING CLUB

Lessons for teens to adults of all ages

ELIZABETH MURRY

We could use your help on Saturday, April 30 — we plan to put in the docks, beginning at 8 a.m., and do the annual yard cleanup beginning at 10 a.m. We will furnish the coffee, donuts, and beer, and should wrap by 1 p.m.

The Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) offers lessons for adults who want to learn the sport or become reacquainted with it. Many sign up to enjoy Cohasset's beauty from another vantage point, and to gain access to the 14.2 foot Capris available for free sailing during the summer. This is an easy way to sail when you want to and not have to deal with the upkeep and expense of keeping a boat and a berth — or to try out a regular sailing commitment before deciding to invest in a boat of your own. Others may have sailed earlier in their lives, but need a refresher course. Some join to share the same experience that their children are having in the Junior program and to participate in the Adult/Junior Stanton Racing series. Some enjoy participating in the Porter Racing series for adult members, which takes place on selected Thursday evenings during the summer season.

Geared for beginning and intermediate students ranging in age from 17 years to 75+ years (the average student is probably in their late 40s), the adult classes are held on seven consecutive Saturdays starting in early July.

The beginning course, which meets from 9 a.m. to noon, is designed to help novice sailors pass their helmsman's test as soon as possible — achieving this goal enables one to take a boat out during the free sail periods.

The intermediate class meets from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. to work on refining or refreshing the skills of slightly more experienced sailors, usually by focusing on elementary racing techniques.

Each class combines shore and water activities, albeit with a distinct emphasis on the latter. To promote a high-quality learning experience, classes are kept small; two to three adults per boat plus an instructor to maximize the sailing time. Students benefit from a well-organized and thorough curriculum that has been honed over the years to meet the needs of an adult learner. If you need to miss a class, you can catch up the following week.

Taking a private lesson with one of the experienced instructors can accelerate your learning curve. Bob Cunningham, a long-time CSC trustee and an avid J-boat racing captain, is overseeing the adult curriculum this year. Students from last year will remember him conducting some of the classes.

Like the Junior program, the Adult program is a great way to forge new friendships with other town residents and to participate in our community. We could use your help on Saturday, April 30 — we plan to put in the docks, beginning at 8 a.m., and do the annual yard cleanup beginning at 10 a.m., so any time you can commit will be most appreciated. Gloves are a good idea for both activities, and while we will have some gardening tools, bringing your own is helpful. We will furnish the coffee, donuts, and beer, and should wrap by 1 p.m.

The CSC's web site, www.cohassetsailingclub.com, has more information posted on the adult and junior programs, including membership forms.

Membership applications and program registrations must be turned in personally during our 2011 Registration Weekend, May 14 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and May 15 from noon to 2 p.m. at the clubhouse on Government Island.

This is one in a continuing series on the Cohasset Sailing Club.

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

ASO music director Jin Kim gives a "conducting lesson" to a lucky audience member who steps up to lead the orchestra in "The Stars & Stripes Forever." The lighthearted Pops program May 1 at 4 p.m. at Braintree's Thayer Academy Center for the Arts will offer another chance for someone to take up the baton. COURTESY PHOTO

Pops is the Place!

ROY HARRIS

ASO May 1st concert should not be missed

What better way to end an orchestra's season than with a Pops extravaganza? And at the height of springtime, no less.

Well, that's what the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra has planned for Sunday, May 1, at 4 p.m. at Braintree's Thayer Academy Center for the Arts, just off Route 3 at Exit 18. For lovers of Broadway and Hollywood alike, the program offers the crème de la crème: selections from Leonard Bernstein's "West Side Story," coupled with the "Star Wars Suite" of John Williams, once the successor to Arthur Fiedler at the Boston Pops.

There's another glorious Boston Pops connection, too: the charming "Syncopated Clock" and "The Trumpeter's Holiday," a thrilling adventure featuring three stars of the ASO's horn section. The numbers are by Leroy Anderson, the longtime Boston Pops arranger who gained international fame with those and other compositions. And indeed, many regular ASO Pops attendees think of this concert as the closest thing to the audience-friendly Pops experience that Fiedler created at Symphony Hall.

Also on the ASO's program are two favorites of that "other Pops" just up the coast: the Bizet L'Arlesienne Suite No. 2, and Sousa's traditional "Stars and Stripes Forever" concert-closer.

If you've never heard the ASO – which has only gotten more spectacular in the years since it was the Hingham Symphony – there's no better time than the May 1st Pops to experience our world-class, all-professional orchestra. It is at Pops that music director Jin Kim constantly finds new ways create a celebration for what is often a sell-out audience.

And this year, especially, there's lots to celebrate. The ASO met challenge after challenge through tough economic times, raising funds to allow it to wrap up the year with a thrilling pair of Masterworks concerts on the April 2-3 weekend and, of course, this exciting Pops program. The music at Boston's stunning Jordan Hall, and at Duxbury's Performing Arts Center, was followed on April 10 by an intimate "dinner-and-drinks" visit with ASO clarinetist Ryan Yure at Bridgeman's Restaurant in Hull. It was the very blend of the extravaganza and the small event – held over dinner and drinks at some of our most delightful eating establishments – that keeps the ASO the South Shore's "personal orchestra."

As for Pops, part of Maestro Kim's magic is his ability to make it both big and intimate. In among the orchestral performances he offers what he calls "a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity" for two audience members – the winners of a live auction – one to play a triangle solo in "The Syncopated Clock," and the other to conduct America's favorite march at the concert's end.

As a personal note in this last edition of our "Atlantic Overtures" column for the 2010-2011 season, please allow me to give credit to the ASO's supporters. These last successful programs represent lots of hard work by concerned ASO lovers – volunteers as well as staff members – along with the generosity of individuals and South Shore companies like Hingham Institution for Savings, the Watch-All pest control and lawn management company, Derby Street Shoppes, and Bergsten Music. This season, Hingham Savings joined the sponsor family with a three-year commitment, which we hope will serve as a model for other multi-year sponsorships.

So come on out to Thayer's lovely Center for the Arts on May 1, and bring the kids. Make the ASO's musical celebration a part of your own spring celebration. It could well become a family tradition.

Roy Harris, a Hingham journalist, is co-president of the Board of Directors of the ASO, with Vicki Quinn, also of Hingham.

A Cohasset 13-year-old is doing everything she can to help earthquake and tsunami stricken Japan – and is encouraging others to do the same.

Lanie Schwartz, a seventh grader at Derby Academy, has designed a t-shirt to raise money for a Boston-based foundation created to help Japan's residents. Just a few weeks into her efforts, her t-shirts have traveled to the towns in Japan most profoundly affected by the natural disasters.

"I never dreamed my t-shirt would end up in Japan," Lanie said this week in French Memories. Recently, the mayor of Fushiyama, Japan, where the nuclear plant is located, received one of her t-shirts.

Lanie was in the midst of learning about earthquakes in her Earth Science class when the 8.9-magnitude earthquake hit Japan. Watching the news, seeing the devastation, talking about the multiple disasters in school caused Lanie to really want to do something to help.

"It's horrible to think about what they are going through," Lanie said. Drawing from her experience making a t-shirt for her brother this past Christmas, Lanie resolved to design a t-shirt for Japan.

She made a bold design with the Japanese flag on the front with the title "Help Heal Japan" and for the back she found seven inspirational quotations.

"I wanted to find ones that revolved around helping people and giving back," Lanie said. She chose quotations like this one from Aesop, "No act of kindness, no matter how small, is ever wasted," and this one from Theodore Roosevelt, "Do what you can, with what you have, where you are."

Once the t-shirt was designed she got her parents on board. Goodwin Graphics printed the shirts and Lanie planned to sell them to her classmates at school.

But through a couple of connections, Lanie and her family discovered the Japanese Disaster Relief Fund – Boston. It was a new fund launched to provide direct humanitarian aid in Japan. The organization is a partnership of the Boston Foundation, the Japan Society of Boston and the Fish Family Foundation. The relief fund got a jump start from a $100,000 leadership gift from Larry and Atsuko Toko Fish.

The Fish family and the Japanese Disaster Relief Fund have close ties to Japan and an extensive network of contacts and Atsuko Fish would be doing on the ground needs assessment in the disaster area.

Lanie and her mom, Leigh, brought the t-shirt to Fish.

"She was so touched by it," Lanie said. They gave her 50 t-shirts to bring on her upcoming trip to Japan.

The Fish Family Foundation and the Japanese Disaster Relief Fund has adopted the t-shirts as a part of their ongoing fundraising efforts.

Locally, Lanie has been selling the t-shirts for $20 at youth soccer games, through Derby Academy and through her self-designed website, www.helpheal-japan.org.

"I'm happy just to raise anything. I know whatever I raise is not much compared to what other organizations are doing. But I also know everything counts, however small," Lanie said, adding the t-shirts also raise awareness and serve as a reminder of the struggles still facing Japan.

"It's going to take Japan so long to recover from this tragedy...Not many people are doing all they can — or anything at all. What's happening in Japan will affect everybody eventually" either through the nuclear power plant disaster or through the global economy, Lanie said.

"People don't realize how many connections we have to Japan," she said.

Preparing for climate change

The Straits Pond Watershed Association (SPWA) invites the public to their spring meeting and presentation of "Preparing for Climate Change Impacts in Hull "at 7 p.m. Monday, April 25, at the Weir River Estuary Center, George Washington Boulevard in Hull. The Weir River Watershed Association (WRWA), Greener Hull, and the Hull Land Conservation Trust (HLCT) jointly sponsor this event.

This will be an open discussion on preparing for climate change around Hull. Among the projected impacts of climate change are rising seas and more frequent and severe coastal storms. As a low-lying coastal community, Hull is particularly vulnerable to these impacts.

Sarah Das, Hull resident and scientist at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, will briefly discuss her research on the Greenland and Antarctic ice sheets, and present the latest science on sea level rise projections, including what it all means for the New England area.

Anne Herbst, Conservation Administrator for the Town of Hull, examines Hull's storm damage history to predict future impacts, presents 3D models of flooding scenarios in Hull, and identifies steps we can take to be better prepared for, and protected against, climate impacts.

Due to parking constraints carpooling is suggested.

RECORDS

incorporated as a town in 1770.

In her 19 years as Town Clerk Douglas has witnessed the deterioration of the town's records. When someone would call looking for information on a long passed away relative she delves into the books in search of the record. Some of the oldest records were so fragile they couldn't even be read.

But the normal operational department budget couldn't handle the expense of restoring the records, she said. It wasn't until the town passed the Community Preservation Act with a category for historic preservation that Douglas found a way to make the project happen.

"We never would have had the money within our budget," Douglas said.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas shows off a page from a book recording the weddings in town from 1732-1843.

In 2008, Town Meeting appropriated $50,000 of community preservation funding to get started on the project. So far the town clerk's office has sent out roughly 50 volumes of records for restoration, including births, death and marriage records and the town's incorporation document.

"The records are out for quite some time – roughly six months – so we don't like to send too make records out at once," Douglas said. "We tried to pick the ones first that could have fallen apart at any moment."

A New Hampshire company, Brown's River Marotti, Co. Archival Preservation & Imaging, has done all the preservation work for the town.

The frail documents go through a de-acidification process where the acids in the paper is removed and neutralized. A buffering agent is added to prevent further deterioration. The documents are then placed in a bound book. Some of the older pages were placed in acid-free clear covers and stored in a binder. Along with conservation the records are also microfilmed and put on a CD for the town. The cost per volume of records is $1,150.

According to Brown's River there are 125 more volumes of records that would benefit from conservation work.

This year, the Town Clerk's Office is once again seeking community preservation funding at the upcoming Annual Town Meeting. A request for $80,000 for specialized shelving to store the books and to send more records out for preservation has been put forward to the community preservation committee (see sidebar).

Restoring the town's records for future generations to have is one of the goals of the clerk's office, Douglas said.

"It only makes sense to have them preserved," Douglas said. She wishes more town clerks would take advantage of community preservation funding if their town is part of the program to begin the long process of record restoration and preservation.

As town clerk preserving the town's records has been a passion and a mission for Douglas. She will retire from her post after nearly two decades following next month's town election. She has served as Town Clerk since 1992, but worked in various positions in the town since 1979, including assistant town clerk from 1987 to 1992.

"This is our history and if we don't do it now pieces of our history could be lost," Douglas said.

She admires her long ago predecessors who had to keep the same town records as she does today except without the help of a computer. The records were carefully kept in pristine script.

"Some of the writing in these books is absolutely beautiful. It is nothing like you see around now," Douglas said.

Douglas will pass the torch to her assistant town clerk Carol St. Pierre, who is running unopposed for Town Clerk.

What would be done with $80,000?

Town Clerk Marion Douglas is requesting $80,000 of Community Preservation funding at this year's Annual Town Meeting. With the funding new shelving for both the Town Clerk vault and basement record vault could be purchases, as well as restoration of 39 volumes of vital records.

Here's the breakdown:

Restoration of death records, 12 volumes, 1904 to 1976

$20,700
Restoration of marriage records, 18 volumes, 1865 to 1976

$10,350
Restoration of birth records, nine volumes, 1954 to 1985

$30,000
New shelving for the vault with roller opening for the large older volumes which need to lay flat and are now stacked one on top of the other, not an ideal situation for the newly restored books. Because of the weight of the books some of the current shelving is sagging. The new shelving will create close to 50 percent more storage space in the vaults.

OUR VIEW

'Our Town'

Welcome back to 'Our Town' – Cohasset's own Cable-TV show.

Not since Pierson to Person, which had a 10-year run – has a local TV show been so focused on Cohasset and its issues.

"Our Town" has been on hiatus until Cohasset managed to get TV studio of its own. In the past, "Our Town" – hosted by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo — was filmed in the Comcast studios off Route 53 in Norwell. That studio closed in the summer of 2009.

What many people may not recall is that "Our Town" debuted in September 2004. The first show aired on Sept. 16, 2004, and featured state Rep. Garrett Bradley and then Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan.

From that point forward, the program has been part of the local media providing a valuable service to Cohasset.

Last week, "Our Town" co-host DeGiacomo moderated the Selectmen's debate in Cohasset's very own 143TV studio at the high school.

The debate will begin airing on Comcast channel 10 and Verizon channel 37 starting Monday, April 25. Due to the open 143TV current schedule, the 90-minute debate will be shown, at 8p.m. on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights for two weeks until Election Day on Saturday, May 7.

We hope our readers will tune into the debate. This is the first time in several years that Cohasset has had a race for the Board of Selectmen.

We also hope that "Our Town" will return to regular programming soon. We are also looking forward to what we hope will be a host of local programming – produced by residents of all ages – at the new studio.

Representing the Hingham Journal (which is also produced out of the Cohasset Mariner office), we recently had the opportunity to be a guest on Linden Ponds TV. Linden Ponds is a retirement campus in Hingham with its own TV studio. We were featured on a morning program whose host is Annette Sexton, a former Norwell Town Administrator and now Linden Ponds resident. Mrs. Sexton was issue-focused so our visit provided an opportunity to educate the viewers - some of whom are new to Hingham - about current affairs. The morning show was just one example of myriad hyper-local programming that Linden Ponds offers with an army of volunteers at the studio.

Now with the ability to produce local programming at such a convenient location here in Cohasset – the sky's the limit for 143TV!

Absentee ballots

Absentee ballots for the May 7 Town Election, are available at the Town Clerk's office. Those who will be in town on Election Day and are able to come to the polls you should vote in person.

Heartfelt appreciation

LUCY IS BACK— our miracle dog!! With the will to survive on her own for three weeks through three terrible storms, Lucy is 16 years old, deaf, almost blind and barely able to walk from advanced spondylosis. Because of the kindness of a stranger who saw something and didn't ignore it but took the next step to call the police, Lucy was rescued. Severely dehydrated and starving, she spent two days at the South Coastal Animal Hospital in Weymouth under the care of Dr. Grace Strake and Dr. Sandra Tam. Officer Patrick Reardon, Sergeant Jeffrey Treanor, Lieutenant William Quigley and Aaron Bates braved the thorny woods to rescue Lucy who was tangled in thick briars at the bottom of a steep embankment.

The photos on the Cohasset Police Facebook say it all. In all the misery and sadness that we are bombarded with, it is these stories of the kindness of others that enrich our souls. Thank you Trish Morse for sending a town-wide email so that everyone was on alert and looking for Lucy. Thank you Officer Patrick Reardon, Sergeant Jeffrey Treanor, Lieutenant William Quigley and Aaron Bates for saving our Lucy. Thank you to Drs. Strake and Tam at the South Coastal Animal Hospital in Weymouth for nursing her back to health. Lastly, thanks to all of you who were steadfast in your concern and kindness throughout this ordeal and to all those whose outpouring of good wishes for Lucy continue to abound. The reunion of Lucy and our other dog Millie was a special sight to behold. Lucy continues to gain her strength and is encouraged every day by her sister, Millie.

With our Grateful Thanks,
Russi DeVitre, Gina Shahinian, Adrina, Andrew, Lucy and Millie, 430 Atlantic Avenue

Interim superintendent

Dear parents and community members:

Recently, the Cohasset School Committee appointed me to the position of Interim Superintendent/Business Manager until June 30, 2011. It is with great pleasure and honor that I undertake this responsibility.

Many of you know I have been the School Business Manager in Cohasset for almost six years. These past years have given me the opportunity to work closely with faculty, staff, community members and parents. Each of these groups is dedicated, as I am, to a single priority: Providing the highest quality educational experience for all of our students.

Continuing the "Commitment to Excellence" will be the motivating factor in every action I take during this transition phase until Cohasset's newly appointed Superintendent, Barbara Cataldo, assumes her role on July 1.

I am eager to insure that the end of the school year is a productive and exciting time for everyone in the school community.

I want to thank the Cohasset School Committee for giving me this opportunity, and I look forward to fulfilling my responsibilities on behalf of the Cohasset Public Schools.
David DeGennaro

COMMENTARY

Support low-interest loan program

ANDREW QUIGLEY

The news story in last week's Mariner which discussed the recalcitrance of some of our public officials, and outright opposition by others, to Cohasset's participation in the state environmental program that will enable Cohasset homeowners to obtain low interest loans to connect to the Little Harbor sewer district is misguided on many levels.

First, a brief explanation of the program: The state provides money to the town (at zero percent interest) to establish a revolving loan account. The town in turn lends money to homeowners (at 2 percent interest) so they can either connect to the town sewer system or repair their failed septic systems if they are not on town sewer. The repayments by the homeowners are made over a 20 year period back into the revolving loan fund, so that the town can continually make new loans to Cohasset residents. Thus three objectives are accomplished: Homeowners who are unable to afford to connect/repair have the means to do so; our ground water and waterways become less polluted; and the town actually makes money on the difference between the zero percent interest rate being charged by the state and the interest rate being charged to the homeowners. The program does not cost our town's taxpayers a dime and in addition, because there are available funds for sewer hookups, homeowners will do so expeditiously (rather than delay the day of reckoning) so that the town reaps the fees of using the sewer system. In short, the program is a classic win-win-win situation, and then some.

Yet apparently some of our town officials either are unable to see the obvious benefits of the program or say they need more information. The Capital Budget Committee (CBC) says that it needs to vet the program and follow the "process" to determine the effect on the town's bond rating, while others talk about bad economic timing.

However, there are four reasons why their arguments do not hold water (especially polluted water!): First, the Little Harbor sewer project has been a subject of discussion for many years. Little Harbor homeowners were assured by every town official from every board (Selectmen, Board of Health and Sewer Commission) who weighed in on this project that the state's low interest loan program would be available to those who needed it. Perhaps some of these current officials either were not around at the time or have short memories, but this was part of the deal. It is incredibly unfair for any town official now to suggest that the town should renege on that promise."

Second, when this particular program came up before the Special Town Meeting in November, the CBC asked that it be put off until the May Town Meeting. Now they want to delay it again to follow the "process." However, the Little Harbor project's financial impact on both the town and individual homeowners was vetted a long time ago and the state's low interest program played a key role in the calculations of all concerned. At no time during the years of planning and discussion, did any town official, including members of the Capital Budget Committee, ever say, "Oh by the way, when the time comes for you homeowners to spend $15,000 or more to hook up, we'll have to look at the town's balance sheet to see whether the low interest loan program will fit in." For the CBC to say now that they do not have enough information pertaining to a basic component of the financial aspect of the project at this late date is absurd on its face. Regardless of where the blame may lie for this (if it is true), this clearly is not town government at its best and leaves homeowners caught in the middle as the deadline for connecting is just months away. Their claim about the need to follow a process is exalting "the process" over both the reality and necessity at this point in the long history of the Little Harbor Sewer project.

Third, the objection as to bad economic timing ignores the other aside of the equation, namely, that for many Little Harbor homeowners, the economy is equally bad. I would remind these town officials that not all of us have the luxury of being able to write out a check for a sewer connection fee ranging from $12,000 to $50,000 from our trust fund's quarterly dividend payments.

Fourth, these town officials are ignoring the really big picture, which is that the reason for the Little Harbor sewer project is to clean up Little Harbor and thereby improve the environment for all of Cohasset. Let us not forget that Cohasset is un-

Nuts and bolts of culvert work

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project — Last week we started reviewing the steps that were taken to construct the new culvert next to the Legion building that will allow a controlled water interchange each way between the harbor and Jacobs Meadow. This week we will continue with the construction steps that created what you see there now. Last week we showed a photo of the first section of the precast concrete "U" shaped channel section being lowered into place on a carefully prepared bed of gravel. This gravel became the base on which the channel sections were placed. The precision with which the gravel was positioned was quite critical to the success of the finished culvert. The culvert was designed to have a slight pitch from Jacobs Meadow to the Elm Street end. The gravel placement maintains this pitch over the length of the new channel.

Another new culvert section dropped into place.

Flowable fill being dropped into place.

The culvert was constructed with a string of the "U" shaped concrete sections dropped into place, end to end. Each section fitted to the previous section as a result of an interlocking feature cast into the leading and trailing edges of each section. Positioning these sections was not a trivial task. Keep in mind that a six-foot long section of precast culvert weighed about 20,000 pounds. So, it took a lot of patience and maneuvering with a large crane to get each section into place with the correct slope that will allow water to flow the way engineers intended.

One of the major concerns during this project was that the new channel wall would be very close to the foundation of the Legion building. Near the street the Legion handicap ramp foundation supports were perilously close to the excavation. Fortunately, a little additional bracing helped the ramp stay in place during construction. Where the new culvert passed close to the Legion old stone foundation was a totally different matter. The culvert was purposely moved away from the Legion foundation to keep construction as far away as practical. After the culvert was placed there was a small space between the wall of the culvert and the old crumbling wall that ran adjacent to the foundation.

The challenge at this point was to find a way to fill this void so that the foundation could be strengthened by the new channel wall. The answer was to use "flowable fill." So what is flowable fill? It is a special concrete mixture that flows easily into every crevice in an excavation and forms a very solid mixture that has good compressive strength and almost no shrinkage. It was able to flow into small crevices in the old crumbling channel wall as well as to fill all of the space against the new channel wall. Thus flowable fill allowed the old Legion foundation to be well supported by the new culvert.

As an aside, flowable fill is also used in construction to backfill trenches under roadways, since it will support roadway loads and will not settle and cause the road to drop over the excavation. In addition flowable fill can be easily dug out if required by a subsequent construction need. You could say, except for the added expense of flowable fill, it is a super construction backfill material. In fact, the DPW requires that it be used under certain conditions for excavations in town roads.

FOR THE RECORD

Together we can make a difference

GREGORY MATHIS

My first real connection with Earth Day came through recycling.

I admit the idea of saving the earth is a little daunting. OK, a lot daunting.

In fact it's a safe bet it's not only beyond my control, but all of our control individually.

But together, I'm quite sure if we each do whatever small part we can, we will make a difference in our world.

The 41st Earth Day will be happening this week on Friday, April 22. It's hard for me to imagine Earth Day has been around that long. I've been around that long and I'm somewhat ashamed to admit that I didn't become aware of Earth Day until about the mid-1980s.

My first real connection with Earth Day came through recycling. I began my newspaper career in June of 1985 and while I saved everything with my name on it back then, I also threw away a lot of newspaper. My hometown didn't have recycling programs for newspaper or anything for that matter, so regrettably all that newsprint ended up in the trash and in a landfill (remember them?).

But times changed and fortunately we got a little smarter and realized everyday materials could be recycled and didn't need to end up in landfills or worse, on the side of the road, or in a river, or in the ocean. Not only newspaper, but plastic, glass, aluminum, cardboard, mixed paper and more.

It's safe to say Earth Day itself has taken on new meaning and importance since the very first Earth Day in 1970. Its founder, Gaylord Nelson, was a governor and U.S. Senator from Wisconsin. Nelson, by all accounts, was a liberal Democrat, which brings us to the biggest obstacle facing Earth Day and the environment – politics.

On one side, we have liberal Democrats pushing Global Warming theories and on the other conservative Republicans wanting government to back off with environmental regulations to protect and preserve businesses that may not necessarily be classified as green. Add this to the list within the political arena where compromise and common sense will serve us best.

While the politicians from both sides – make that "all" sides – of the aisle debate and dispute the merits of the science, technology and statistics about the state of our global environment and the doom and gloom we're allegedly going to suffer because of our own doing, we can still continue to do our small part and take care of the common sense part of the equation.

My wife sometimes gives me a hard time about the recycling our family does, and still tries to toss out that jar of moldy salsa when I'm not looking. But I'm confident what we do is making a small difference. We have a pretty good system in place to recycle glass, plastic, cardboard, mixed paper, and of course, newspaper. We generate very little household trash each week, which I would say is our most significant contribution to the global effort to this point.

We still take long showers, keep the water running too long while brushing our teeth, and leave too many lights on when we're not in the room. There's certainly more we can do, and we'll continue to make strides in other areas within our control.

That's something we can all do this Earth Day. And please, when you're done reading this week's newspaper, cut out all the articles and photos you want to save, and recycle the rest of the newspaper.

Happy Earth Day, and remember it takes more than one day a year to make a difference.

HEALTH NOTES

THE BOARD OF HEALTH WARRANT ARTICLE:

Septic repair and sewer hookup loan program

PEGGY CHAPMAN & STEVE BOBO

The Board of Health submitted a warrant article last fall for Cohasset to participate in the Commonwealth's Community Septic Management Program, to provide financial support to homeowners who need to repair their septic system or hook up to the sewer. The article was defeated amidst concerns that the financial implications to the town were not adequately understood. The Board of Health has worked to clarify these questions and the article is being voted on again at the April 30 Town Meeting. We would like to take this opportunity to educate you about the program.

The program will provide an interest-free loan from the Massachusetts Water Pollution Abatement Trust to the town upon approval by town meeting. This money will then be loaned to homeowners making septic repairs or sewer connections, secured by a municipal lien, as described below. The warrant article requests approval to borrow up to $3 million from the trust.

Although the Board of Health could choose to manage the applications in house, we are planning to hire the Old Colony Planning Council (OCPC) to manage the program. They currently manage this program for Hanson, Pembroke and other towns on the South Shore. Their job will be to manage all aspects of the application and review process. Applications will be processed on a first-come first-served basis. OCPC will be paid $650 for septic loans and $350 for sewer hookup loans. These will be paid by the homeowner as an application fee and is not covered by the loan. The town will not pay anything to OCPC.

The process of application and payment follows.

1. The homeowner prepares an application, which includes a copy of the property deed and tax bills.

2. OCPC contacts the town treasurer to assure that there are no outstanding monies/taxes due to the town. Taxes that have been legally deferred through our current program to assist the elderly will NOT be considered as outstanding money owed. This loan will not be deferred for the elderly.

3. A betterment lien is prepared and signed before funds are released to the homeowner.

4. If the application is for a septic repair the homeowner hires an engineer who makes a proposal regarding the work that will be required. No engineering report is required for sewer hookup.

5. Three work proposals for installment of the septic plan are required. The homeowner is not required to take the lowest bid. One proposal is required for sewer hookup.

6. OCPC requests money from the treasurer for payments as work progresses. These include a deposit and final payment for engineering plans (for septic repairs), and for deposits and final payment for the contractor. Final payment is authorized only after all required inspections are successfully completed.

7. All payments are released jointly to the engineer/contractor and homeowner.

8. The betterment lien is filed at the Registry of Deeds. The filing fee (currently $77) is paid by the homeowner and is not part of the betterment loan. This ends the involvement of the OCPC for the home owner.

9. The Town of Cohasset collects the loan as a betterment on the homeowner's tax bill, amortized over 20 years at a 2 percent interest rate.

10. Any betterment lien remaining at the point of a house sale will be paid and cannot to be passed to the next owner.

11. Repayment by Cohasset to the trust begins in the second year of the program. This will enable us to accumulate a year of payments, including the 2 percent interest, before repayment begins.

Concerns that were raised by various town boards are presented and answered below:

- What is the cost to the town and citizens? The cost to the town is the work of the Treasurer to set up the betterment collection fee on the tax bill and the issuances of the monies from the fund. We have been told by the Treasurer that this is a minimal task and not one that requires any extra personnel. The Loan is given interest free to the town by the Commonwealth. There is also a one-time $15,000 grant given to Cohasset by the state to help start the program. The 2 percent interest rate collected on the loans is also used for the town to pay any costs of administering the program. The homeowner is charged for the program. Should a homeowner default on the loan the Town of Cohasset would use the funds in the account to pay the state for the loan and a municipal lien is placed on the home for these costs. The lien is collected at the time of the home sale with an additional 14 to 16 percent interest charge. Municipal liens must be paid ahead of any other debt. There is no home in Cohasset that is valued less than the cost of these loans so there is a guarantee of payment back to the town. The bottom line is that there is NO cost to any taxpayer not associated with the program. The costs are born by the participating homeowners.
- What is the impact on our Bond Rating from this loan program? We have been told by the agency that manages our bonds that this program should have no impact on our bond rating. Since the program is self-supporting, bond rating agencies generally don't act as if these programs even exist in their considerations.
- What amount should be borrowed from the state? Is $3 million too high? The Board of Health approves 10-15 septic system repairs each year, with average costs of $20,000 to $40,000, so we estimate $200,000 – $600,000 per year of potential borrowing for septic systems. There are at least 250 homes that are still to be hooked up to sewer. Estimates for this work range from $6000 to $150,000, with bids frequently $10,000 or higher, so we estimate at least $2,500,000 of potential borrowing for sewer hook-ups. While we can reapply for more money when funds run out, each application must be approved by a town meeting. There is no penalty if we use less than the approved amount and no interest is charged. Once the sewer hook ups are done we anticipate requesting less money to continue aiding septic repairs. We don't want to borrow too little initially. This could make homeowners with sewer hook ups wait for another town meeting to acquire more money. The BOH thinks this delay should be avoided with the July 2012 deadline for sewer hook ups.
- Do other towns in this area participate in this program? Yes. Other South Shore towns using this program include: Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, Hanson, Middleborough, Norton, Pembroke, Plymouth, and Wareham.

Steve Bobo and Peggy Chapman are both members of the Board of Health.

Selectmen candidates debate

Four residents are vying for two seats on the Board of Selectmen — and the campaign is heating up.

The town election is set for Saturday, May 7, just over two weeks away.

Lawn signs are popping up around town, meet and greet coffees are being held and in the midst of it all a debate was held on Thursday, April 14 to give the candidates an opportunity to speak on some of the key issues and concerns of the town and its voters.

The taped hour-and-fifteen minute debate was organized by the local cable show, "Our Town," and will be broadcast several times to both Verizon and Comcast cable customers between now and election day.

From the budget to community preservation to the town's recent financial audits, the debate, hosted by Mark DeGiacomo, covered a lot of ground.

All four candidates participated: current Selectmen chair Karen Quigley, four-term selectmen Fred Koed, North Main Street resident Mary Snow and Diane Kennedy of Jerusalem Road Drive.

Two three-years terms are available on the Board of Selectmen. This is the first time in four election seasons there has been a race for the Selectmen seats and it is the only contested race in this year's town election.

The debate also had special significance because it was the first program to be recorded in the town's new cable television studio located in the Middle-High School.

After a short introduction, DeGiacomo wasted no time getting to the meat of the issues and proceeded to ask a series of seven questions. Each candidate was given two minutes to respond and in some cases follow-up questions were asked. Three minutes were given to the candidates at the end of the questions and answers for a closing statement. The format allowed little interaction between the candidates.

The questions covered timely issues such as Community Preservation Act, restructuring of the water department, union contracts and budget cuts.

The questions where the candidates most diverged in opinion were in one of the issues that will face the Board of Selectmen in the upcoming year. The town recently had two independent audits done, one specifically for the water and sewer enterprise funds and one done for the town finances as a whole. From both those audits came a series of recommendations for the town, including installing a superintendent to oversee the water and sewer departments as well as purchasing a more modern accounting software system.

First to answer the question was Diane Kennedy. She said the changes should come from a cooperative effort with the to-be-hired town manager.

"He or she will have the management background and skills to put financial controls in place," Kennedy said.

As far as creating a new superintendent position to oversee the water and sewer department, she said she hadn't yet formed a clear opinion.

"I want to talk to those passionate for and against," Kennedy said, adding the creation of a new position would need to consider the town's budget restraints.

Fred Koed said the crux of the issue, as he saw it, was a "communications breakdown" and something he wants to continue to repair. Yet, he said he was not convinced a superintendent for the water and sewer department, or changing the elected commissions was the right way to go.

"It may be a good idea, but that particular report (the water and sewer audit) did not make (a strong enough) case for me," Koed said.

He worried moving to an appointed board takes away the people's right to vote.

"I'm withholding judgment on that until we can have more discussion," Koed said.

Karen Quigley started off her answer by saying she was one of the first to call for an audit of the water department.

"It was much worse than anyone thought it would be," Quigley said.

She said creating a superintendent role for the water and sewer departments was done successfully in other communities.

"The volunteers (on these commissions) are very well intentioned, but they rely too much on their consulting engineers. They don't have the expertise," Quigley said. She also said more discussion was needed on whether the water and sewer commissions moved to an appointed board model.

Candidate Mary Snow, who also works in the town's Department of Public Works where there is a superintendent, said a superintendent was the way to go, "it's not a new concept."

Snow said the superintendent should report to a more "advisory board of commissioners" where he/she would be accountable.

"If we have a superintendent in charge of the day to day operations it allows the town to have one person for accountability," Snow said.

The Questions

The questions were prepared and asked by "Our Town" host Mark DeGiacomo.

■ This election features two candidates who have served on the Board of Selectmen and two who are newcomers to elective office in Cohasset. How do you feel your experience on the Board or your fresh perspective would benefit the town?

■ A significant amount of voters are parents with school-age children whose most important concern in these difficult financial times is the quality of our public schools. Why should these voters support your candidacy?

■ Cohasset adopted the Community Preservation Act over 10 years ago. Since that time our real estate tax bills have been assessed a 1.5 percent surcharge which, together with funds from the state, have been used in connection with the preservation of open space, the maintenance and construction of affordable housing and for historic preservation. Several towns which adopted the CPA have considered ending their participation and the concept of eliminating the CPA for Cohasset was raised by a Selectman last year. Do you support continued participation by Cohasset with the Community Preservation Act?

■ The recently completed independent audit of the Town's finances found several serious deficiencies and included several recommendations for changes. What changes do you believe should be implemented for the purpose of getting our financial house in order?

■ Union contracts for public employees have been very much in the news recently. If you had the power to do so, what changes, if any, would you make to the collective bargaining process for municipal employees?

■ With state aid low and perhaps going lower and with minimum new growth dollars coming into the coffers, what if any cuts should be made on the Town side of the existing budget?

■ Since you have lived in Cohasset what if any trends in the Town, either by the government or citizens in general, are you pleased to see and what if any trends concern you?

What did they say?

Fred Koed

On seeking re-election:
"I'm offering myself, my services, but it's not my decision, it's up to the voters."
On communication:
"I don't like divisiveness; I prefer open communication."
On health care:
"There are ways for the unions and the town to work together. I think we can all benefit from more affordable health care."

Mary Snow

On schools:
"Cohasset Schools have always excelled and to do anything less than what we're doing now is a step back...I'd like to seek the new town manager and superintendent work hand in hand to bring back what is a divided community."
On health-care costs:
"I have a sense that a higher co-pay (and/or) and different health care plan is more palatable than seeing your friend laid off."
On promoting accountability:
"I can tell you if an issue is brought forward to me I will bring it forward to the board and put it front and center. I will insist on accountability."

Karen Quigley

On brokering cooperation between town and schools:
"We need to get the conversation flowing and understand better each other's needs."
On negotiating with the unions:
"I'd like to see the pertinent boards get together with the town manager and negotiating team and strategize, put a plan in place and figure out what we need to achieve."
On a disturbing trend:
"In many ways Cohasset is a little piece of Americana, but we're losing that a little bit. People are so busy in their daily lives there is a loss of sense of community...Neighborhoods don't know their neighbors."

Diane Kennedy

On process:
I don't think issues should get to the Board of Selectmen (for a decision) without a real community conversation."
On schools:
"We are one town, one community. We all need to articulate our values as much as possible. I think we should sit down and talk about it what we value as a town."
On running for election:
"I'm very eager to do right (by Cohasset) and make this community sing."

'Our Town' selectmen debate to air

The Selectmen's Candidate debate, moderated by "Our Town" host Mark DeGiacomo and taped last week in the studio of Cohasset's own 143 TV, will begin airing on Comcast channel 10 and Verizon channel 37 starting Monday, April 25. The 90-minute debate will be shown at 8p.m. on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights for two weeks until the town election on Saturday, May 7.

Question of the Week

Candidates for Selectmen were asked the following question (responses were limited to 250 words):
This week's question:
Does the town need a new Senior Center building and can it afford it?

SELECTMAN/ Diane Kennedy

Yes, a new senior center is desperately needed in Cohasset. The current location is bursting at the seams and the town's lease at the Community Center ends this year. In addition to providing meals, transportation and vital referral services, Cohasset Elder Affairs offers many important programs for seniors, including movement and computer classes as well as lifestyle and preventative health education programs. Because of current space constraints, large programs and activities are held in rented, off-site space; the kitchen for meal preparation is shared; and many desired programs (including dance classes, classes in social media, genealogy, word processing) cannot be offered.

Currently, there is a flurry of activity toward the realization of a new senior center to meet these needs. Selectmen recently approved the establishment of a building committee and voted to move forward to seek bids for a project manager. The Social Service League and Friends of Elder Affairs have pledged resources and a private fundraising campaign is being planned. With Cohasset's current financial challenges, all options need to be researched and carefully considered before moving forward with a project of this scope. The more community members involved in the planning, the greater likelihood of identifying additional sources of revenue, savings, and possible alternatives to building a new facility. The collaboration of town officials, boards, CEA, Friends of Elder Affairs and the Social Service League offers a promising, transparent planning process that will ensure a new senior center without the town biting off more than it can chew.

SELECTMAN/ Fred Koed

Yes and yes.

Cohasset needs a new comprehensive Senior Center. Thanks to the great work of the Friends of Cohasset Elders (FCEA) and the Social Service League of Cohasset, I look forward to getting the project done in my next term as your Selectman.

We can build the new Center with more than half of the capital funds coming from private contributions and the Cohasset Community Preservation Fund (CPF). That is the plan of the two groups as recently presented to the Selectmen.

As we get the Town's financial house in order, I will work to secure the $2.4 million in town financing funds for the $5.93 million project. Working with other boards and the town manager to prioritize the debt override, I will work with all these groups to make the new senior center a reality.

Today, 25 percent of our Cohasset citizens are age 60 and over. In just 9 years, that figure will grow to a full 40 percent.

The new Center will house the Town's veteran's agent, public health nurse, and elder affairs offices. We will have areas for congregate meals, social events, and clinics. The Town will save money in the long run by having our own facility. In addition it will create four units of needed senior affordable housing.

Seniors will save the time and effort as they access their services at one location. We at least owe them, who have given us so much, that.

SELECTMAN/ Karen Quigley

Seniors are an integral part of our community who, over the years, have stepped up and supported other stakeholders. Now they are asking us to support them.

There is need. Cohasset has an above-average ever-increasing senior (60+) population a segment of which rely on the CEA for assistance, services, programs and support.

Is there the means? The proposed building budget is $6million: $1million each to come from Social Services and CPC for affordable senior housing; $1.5million as a private fundraising goal; and the balance of $2.5million (+/- the fundraising) from the Town would require a debt exclusion override.

With $99million in debt, few liquid assets, and a de facto override to solve the water enterprise fund crisis, the Town and the taxpayers are tapped out. I am concerned the big price tag might not be feasible in these economic times.

That would be a shame and, as such, all or nothing should not be the only option. I would be in favor of also considering a phased approach to the project to ensure the basic needs are met in the short run. The important thing is that our seniors have a center sooner rather than later.

Is there the will? What happens depends entirely on individual generosity in supporting the fundraising effort and the collective generosity of us all. In the end, I believe the community will step up and support our seniors.

SELECTMAN/ Mary Snow

The first portion of this question can be easily answered by a resounding "Yes." The space that is currently used at the Cohasset Community Center may have been perfect when it was first leased many years ago, but like everything else, the volume, needs and desires of the senior community are changing. That is the easy part of this question.

Now comes the difficult part. After seeing the presentation of possible site and building plans, I was awed by the sheer size and costs. I thought it may be more than what I thought was needed and how could enough money possibly be raised for construction and yearly maintenance without overburdening the taxpayers and adding to the towns' enormous debt. I have to admit, I don't have the answer to that question yet. While the fundraising efforts have been and continue to be successful, I am hopeful that some grant monies can be found as well as discussions of other means of funding that don't require an override. I would also want to hear the financial impact opinion from the new Finance Director. The lifelong resident and eventual senior side of me says that as someone with many older family members and friends in the community, we need to serve our seniors to the best of our ability. So I will say I enthusiastically support the concept and let's continue the funding discussion.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION:

Next week's question:
In 2010 an independent auditor completed a financial and operational audit of the water and sewer departments. The audit shed light on the issues that led to the financial crisis in fiscal 2010. The auditor made recommendations for change within town government that in his opinion would help get the enterprise funds back in order. Town officials have only recently begun the discussion on how — and if — to make changes. What changes, if any, do you think should be made in town government to ensure the town does not end up in the same place again?

Candidates are reminded their responses should be brief — no more than 250 words — and must be received by noon, Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit.

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the noon, Wednesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

Candidates for any elected office are invited to submit formal statements of their candidacy with a photo.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

der a court order to do this and the Little Harbor homeowners are bearing the entire cost of this project to the tune of a $30,000 betterment being imposed on each of us (which is placed on our tax bills over a 20 year period, with interest and is entirely separate from the connection costs). In other words, Little Harbor homeowners are paying the entire tab (unlike the town's other two sewage districts) for the town to get out from under a court order.

But if there are homeowners who do not have the $15,000 to $50,000 needed to connect to the sewage plant and thus are unable to connect, then the pollution will just keep flowing. Both the state and the other communities who have adopted the low interest loan program have recognized the value of helping homeowners finance the enormous cost of the connection aspect of the project to stop the pollution. Why are some town officials balking at participating in a program that will ensure that the Little Harbor project will come to fruition as soon as possible?

I ask all of my fellow neighbors and residents to vote at Town Meeting in favor of the Board of Health article that will allow Cohasset to participate in this state funded program. There is no cost to any Cohasset taxpayer and it will ensure that the Little Harbor project will be completed on time so that the pollution from inadequate septic systems will stop flowing into our waterways.

Concussion awareness makes ImPACT

Scituate Youth Lacrosse hosting free concussion seminar, Cohasset parents welcome

By Jeannine Donato
Special to the Scituate Mariner

"We've all been there. First, the crash of helmets, then the fall to the grass, and finally the agonizing moments waiting for the young athlete to return to his or her feet," says Chris Walker, President of Scituate Youth Lacrosse. "Let's be honest, kids today are very competitive and some can play really rough."

No one will argue that youth sports begin earlier and are increasingly aggressive and competitive. This reality has pediatricians and youth sports organizations across the country asking what can be done to protect young athletes.

"Concussions are an unfortunate possibility in many sports and lacrosse is no exception," added Walker. "That's why Scituate Lacrosse is at the forefront of educating coaches and parents about the dangers of concussions."

Parents and coaches of Scituate lacrosse players, as well as any other parents or coaches of young athletes, are being encouraged to attend a FREE concussion seminar hosted at the Scituate High School Cafeteria on April 26 at 7:30 p.m.

The seminar will be presented by Dr. David Morin from Scituate Pediatrics to raise awareness on the seriousness of concussions in youth sports and will include information about the importance of baseline testing.

In the past year, Mary Ellen Gaziano of Scituate has learned firsthand about the symptoms and treatment of

Cohasset second in annual Chowda Cup Tournament

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team found the going tough in the championship game of the Fourth Annual Chowda Cup on Saturday with a 9-4 loss to Marshfield at Alumni Stadium.

Still, things have been looking pretty good for the Skippers.

To get to the final, Cohasset knocked off Catholic Memorial 6-5 on Thursday behind our goals from Thomas Flibotte.

Cohasset had trailed 5-3 in the middle part of the third period, but Flibotte found chances, set up by solid strategy of bringing him on and off the field at opportune times to tie the game.

The key to this team, according to first year coach Tom Flanagan, is defense.

U13 Girls Blue beats Marshfield

The Cohasset U13 Girls Lacrosse Blue team took on Marshfield last Sunday and walked away with a 12 – 2 victory, our third straight in an undefeated season. With only five subs, everyone got lots of time to chase ground balls, defend, and work transitions and offensive plays.

Libby Mullaney had two goals as did Abby Thomas. Lilly Astino, Megan McElgunn, and Kara Nelson each found the back of the net.

Olivia Sanderson had one off the pipe but later found the net and assisted once. Kaitlin McGovern assisted, as did Kendall McConnaughey, Kate Fitzpatrick and Margaret Michaelowski.

Nikki Federle scored and assisted as did Minnie Stavis who also filled a spot for the U15 game prior. Olivia Gomez netted two and assisted and Abby McGrath put one in and assisted three times to teammates. Kate McCarthy was solid in net, allowing only one goal per half, and starting multiple successful clears. Great job everyone.

U13 White beats Norwell

Cohasset U13 White played Norwell this week in an evenly matched battle with Cohasset on top 13-12. The Cohasset girls made great improvements in winning ground balls, completing passes and playing strategic defense. Elle Hansen scored the first 2 goals and the last 5, with Marina Longo contributing 2 and Olivia Coveney, and Zoe Doherty with one apiece.

Throughout the match, Norwell tied but never took the lead.

Midfielders Nadiya Roy, Marcella Flibotte, Olivia Leong, Alex Martini, Margo Robbins and Margaret Norton worked the ball successfully down the field. Cohasset attack Leanne Hayden, Madeline Schwandt, Vivienne Littlejohn, Danielle Picot, Isabel Buckley and

MEN'S HOCKEY

Underdogs rule in playoffs

South Coastal Men's Hockey roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

Welcome to the land of the Underdog, otherwise known as the South Coastal Men's Hockey League.

In three of the four playoffs games between the two divisions the underdog won the game to make their way to the Winter finals.

The wildest game was in the Legends where the fourth-seeded Crusaders got a goal from Holbrook's Richard Buckley in the eighth-round of the shootout to defeat the top-seeded Sharks, 2-1 in the shootout and the game, Scott Mondeau scored for the Crusaders and Norwell's Dana Dolanbany scored for the Sharks in regulation.

The Crusaders will face the third-seeded Saints, who got a goal from Hanover's Tom Shaughnessy from Todd Roach in the first period and hung on for their first playoff win by a 1-0 score over the second-seeded Toros.

Saints goalie Justin Stratton, who shut out the Toros, 1-0 during the regular season recorded the shutout.

Drew Fitzgerald, after getting a penalty in overtime came back to score the game-winner with 30 seconds left in the extra session to give the fourth-seeded Black Hawks a come from behind 3-2 win over the top-seeded Maple Leafs in the Classics Div. semifinals.

Pat Mulkern of Pembroke had a goal and an assist and Brian Barcelou scored a goal for the Black Hawks, who tied the game, 2-2 with 5:35 lft in regulation.

Shawn Malloy and Marshfield's Steve Mudge each scored a goal for the Maple Leafs in regulation.

Marshfield's Glen Harnisch scored a goal and assisted on two others, while Tom Lema also of Marshfield added a goal with an assist to lead the Canadiens to the Classics Div. final with a 3-0 win over the Rangers

Mike Martin of Pembroke also scored and goalie Jeff Hollstein also of Pembroke stopped 17 shots for the shutout for the Canadiens, who will face the Black Hawks in the finals.

LACROSSE

"We have solid defense," Flanagan said after the Marshfield loss. "Sam Leahy, Jake Kissick, Robbie Mahoney and Derek Froio are all great defensive players. That is going to be a factor."

Flanagan said his team is still working on a way to overcome an injury to Kyle Livingston suffered during some unnecessarily rough play against Barnstable.

"Kyle was a big part of our midfeield," Flanagan said, adding that he felt the injury should have never been allowed to happen. "He was good for 10 ground balls per game."

In his absence, others have stepped up.

In the finals loss, Marshfield raced to a 2-0 lead after one period and upped it to 6-0 by the half.

Cohasset's Alex Evans scored to cut the lead to 6-1 early in the third, but Marshfield's Matt Entwistle answered almost immediately and Connor Bagby followed to up the advantage to 8-1 before John McGoldrick netted the next two goals to cut the lead to 8-3 with 10:54 left to play.

Entwistle ended any comeback thoughts with 4:39 left with his second goal of the day to make it 9-3.

Flibotte finally got on the board with 4:08 left to play.

One story of the game was Marshfield goalie Will Contento, who was brilliant, stopping everything that came near him, especially in the first half when Cohasset had a few good looks and chances.

Cohasset goalie T.J. Bicknell also played well.

"I'm proud of the boys," Flanagan said. "We played eight games in 17 days against some good teams and came out 6-2. We're ready to get back to practice. We're playing well. They (Marshfield) played well. They had some looks and took advantage of them."

Cohasset had Hull yesterday and is at Norwood on Saturday at 11 a.m.

They don't play at home again until May 10 when they host Hingham.

On the girls side, Cohasset turned in one of their biggest wins in recent memory last week when they beat Hingham 15-13 behind five goals from Whitney Jaffe.

Goalie Steph Brierly turned notched an outstanding 19 saves and Kelsey Erler had three goals for Cohasset. The girls were 2-1 heading into the off week.

Emma Morris moved the ball around the cage in a much-improved spread-out offense. Defensive lines in the this game were key, led by Julia Herzfelder, Kate Quigley, Madeline Littlejohn, Kristy McNary, Mary Catherine Crumley and our beloved Supergoalie, Jenny Wolfe. Cohasset White's record stands at 3-0.

concussions through her two children. Joey, age 14, has suffered from two concussions. The first one occurred in a football game and the other during a wrestling match. Cara, age 16, is currently recovering from her third concussion. The first two were from a "not-so-soft" softball and the third from a skiing accident, even though she was wearing a helmet.

"Cara continues to get headaches, is photosensitive, noise sensitive, and is often fatigued," reported Gaziano. "Because this is her third concussion, the healing process is much longer. She has a difficult time doing schoolwork, especially reading, and computer use and watching movies is limited. Obviously, she is extremely frustrated."

Cara and Joey have both received ImPACT baseline testing to help manage their concussions. In recent years, many school systems, including Scituate, have implemented ImPACT tests for high school athletes. The ImPACT test is a 20-minute computerized neurocognitive assessment tool that tests memory, processing speed and reaction time. Athletes are given a baseline test so doctors have a point of comparison after a head injury.

"ImPACT testing started top-down with professional sports first, but my goal has always been to make this test available to the most needy groups of athletes and that's kids," said Dr. Mark Lovell, a sports concussion expert and neuropsychologist who developed the ImPACT software.

"A concussion is a temporary change in the way the brain works when it is suddenly moved or jarred by a blow to the head," reports Dr. David Morin, who specializes in the treatment of head injuries. "ImPACT tests can gauge students' cognitive functions before and after concussions in order to better understand the effects of such an injury."

Dr. Morin hopes that anyone involved in youth sports and recreation will attend the seminar. As a Credentialed ImPACT Consultant who specializes in reading ImPACT tests and managing concussions, a member of the Scituate School Committee, the High School football team doctor for ten years, and youth soccer and baseball coach, Dr. Morin is committed to educating parents on the benefits of ImPACT testing.

Jeannine Donato, RN, a parent of four children between the ages of nine and 15, recently opened A Head of the Game in Norwell. Other providers include South Shore Hospital in Weymouth and many schools also offer beaseline testing programs and post-concussion testing as well.

"I wanted to make it easier for parents to find someone to provide a baseline test for their children," added Donato. "It's an invaluable tool for doctors and trainers."

Younger athletes, especially those who play contact sports and are not being tested as part of a high school program, are being encouraged by Dr. Morin and Scituate Youth Lacrosse to have the test.

"Having a baseline helps your doctor determine when it is safe for your child to return to play," added Donato.

Dr. Janet Kent, who runs the Sports Concussion Clinic at South Shore Hospital, added, "Patients should be given post concussion tests at South Shore Hospital and we compare them to the baseline, when we are lucky to have one. It's not the 1990's anymore, we have new understanding and knowledge about what concussion does to your brain and we now treat the condition differently."

For more information or to schedule an IMPACT test for your child, please contact Jeannine Donato at 781-424-1614.

TECHNOLOGY AT SUMMER CAMP
By Bette Bussel – Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

IT'S NO LONGER ABOUT WHETHER TECHNOLOGY IS IN USE AT SUMMER CAMPS—IT'S ABOUT HOW.

It's no longer about whether technology is in use at summer camps—it's about how. All camps depend on technology to some extent—it's often in the background of the camp experience.

The American Camp Association, New England has compiled a list of technology that is readily used at many summer camps:

➡ Email: Some camps encourage families to send camper email and many camps have put into place intricate systems to receive and deliver email messages.

➡ Photos & Streamed Video: Creative use of technology to minimize interruption of the child's experience has increased in recent years. Some camps post photos or streaming video content on their websites. This gives parents the information they want while it allows campers to experience safe independence.

➡ Fax Machines: Most camps deliver fax messages from parents. Sometimes it's possible to send messages from campers back to their families.

➡ Phones: A caution to parents and kids, though: cell phones in general are not encouraged for camper use; but some full and half season camps (4-8 weeks) offer organized use of land lines for camper communication.

Having the opportunity to experience, unplugged, a summer community of children can be tremendously beneficial for children.

Beware of credit card interest rate reduction scams

Calls using spoofed numbers target Cohasset

During the past week, the Cohasset Police Department has received several calls from Cohasset residents who have reported receiving a call that contains a pre-recorded message offering services to lower interest rates on credit cards. Residents are reporting concerns that the phone number appearing on their caller ID for the calls appears to be a local telephone number. The illegal prerecorded messages "spoof" legitimate telephone numbers belonging to innocent Cohasset residents and businesses, so the phone number displayed on the consumer's caller ID is not the actual phone number being used by the fraudulent entities. By doing so, the scammers are more likely to get recipients to answer the phone and stay on the call longer.

The most important message to residents is to ignore these calls. These offers to lower interest rates on credit cards are not legitimate and won't result in any benefit to consumers who pay hundreds of dollars for these worthless or nonexistent services. The companies behind the sales pitches falsely claim to have special relationships with credit card issuers and they guarantee the reduced rates will save thousands of dollars in interest. In addition, they often claim the lower interest rates are available for a limited time so the consumer needs to act now. Some offer money back guarantees that are worthless. In some calls claiming to offer services to lower credit card interest rates are actually ploys to obtain account information that results in ID theft.

Current technology makes it possible to spoof a telephone number to display as the source of the call. While spoofing phone numbers is illegal it is virtually impossible to trace the source of these calls, which typically are generated by the thousands from locations outside the country. Stopping this practice is difficult because the true identities of the callers are buried behind a line of entities that lease and then release the telephone numbers to others.

If your caller ID says it's a local number, but you get an automated message or the person on the other end of the line starts a sales pitch, be wary. If the caller starts asking you to verify personal information, refuse to provide any information. If the caller persists in trying to get your personal information, terminate the call.

Anyone having received a call on which they suspect the caller ID information was false should file a complaint with the FCC's Consumer Center by emailing fccinfo@fcc.gov or calling 888-225-5322.

The Cohasset Police Department offers the following information and tips to help keep you from falling victim to spoofing scams:

- Do not give any personal information to an unfamiliar company or individual, whether it's by phone, mail or email. This includes credit card numbers, credit card expiration dates, your Social Security number, driver's license number, bank account numbers or any other personal information. Even if you are told it is only for "identification" or "verification" purposes, this information can be used to make unauthorized purchases.
- Do not provide sensitive information over the phone just because the caller ID says you are talking to a trusted source. Be aware that con artists can hack into caller ID systems and caller ID spoofing is not currently prohibited by law, except if the caller is violating the Do Not Call registry. Do not automatically trust a phone number based on its area code.
- In addition to the robocalls for "lower credit card rates," be leery of "banks" or "credit card companies" requesting verification of account numbers. If your bank or credit card company has a legitimate reason to call, they will not need to request identifying information because they already have it on record.
- Register your phone numbers with the FTC's Do Not Call Registry at 888-382-1222. Cell phone numbers can be registered along with landlines, but you need to call from the phone that is being registered. Up to three phones per household can also be registered at www.donotcall.gov.
- Arm yourself with information. If you want to check out a company or charity, have a question or concern about a merchant or marketplace transaction, or need additional information on protecting yourself from scams, contact the Better Business Bureau at www.bbb.org.

Chief Mark DeLuca stressed that residents should do their homework before giving any information out over the phone to any unsolicited caller. He also said residents can call the police if they have questions about a potential scam.

AN OPEN LETTER OF APOLOGY FROM THE ECONOMY

I'm sorry.

To state the obvious, it hasn't been pretty the last few years, especially for the job market.

I'm aware of the anger, and I don't blame you. This whole thing got away from me. But I think it's time we made a fresh start.

Here's what I propose:

1. If you have a job and you're happy with it, good for you. Keep it up.
2. If you're not happy in your job, it's time to rethink things. I'm not telling you to quit on the spot. But maybe there's a better job out there for you.
3. If you've taken a job that under normal circumstances you wouldn't have, my hat's off to you. You did what you had to do. But now maybe it's time to go back to doing what you do best.
4. If you don't have a job, again, I'm sorry. I know looking for a job can be, to put it nicely, challenging. But know this: it's not you, it's me. And if the recovery is here, I think you can lead the way.

So to everyone who's been affected the last few years, which is pretty much everyone, I accept complete responsibility. But now the ball is in your court. You have permission to move on with your life.

It's time to move forward, find a job you love and get back to work.

Sincerely,

x The Economy

GIMME SHELTER

Posey has purr-sonality!

Posey is a 1-year old female. She appears to be part tiger and part Siamese. Her companion, who was confined to a wheelchair, recently passed away. Posey grieved fiercely, but now seems to be ready for a new home. Yes, she's a bit spoiled, but is a delightful young feline who will keep you company and enthrall you with her antics. She's definitely one of a kind. Hull Seaside Animal Rescue does believe she would prefer to be an only. Posey has the bluest eyes ever. It's difficult to look into them and not want to take her home.

You can check out all of the HSAR felines at our website www.hsar.org. HSAR has open hours from 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays, and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays. If these hours aren't convenient, please call the shelter at 781-925-3121 and leave a message and Judy, the adoption coordinator, will get back to you.

The shelter is at 50 L Street, Hull. The mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045; email to hsar@verizon.net. The shelter offers a monthly low-cost spay/neuter program. If interested, check out our website of call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Thanks to its dedicated volunteers, to those who give homes to our felines and the people who generously donate to its cause — HSAR couldn't do it without you.

Posey has the bluest eyes ever. It's difficult to look into them and not want to take her home. COURTESY PHOTO

Important: HSAR would like to alert all cat owners of the danger of lilies. These flowers can be lethal if eaten by felines. Enjoy the flowers, but please keep them out of reach of your cats and kittens.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 2, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Temper your typical Aries urge to charge into a situation and demand answers. Instead, let the Lamb's gentler self emerge to deal with a problem that requires delicacy.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You are aware of what's going on, so continue to stand by your earlier decision, no matter how persuasive the counter-arguments might be. Money pressures will soon ease.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) By all means, have fun and enjoy your newly expanded social life. But don't forget that some people are depending on you to keep promises that are very important to them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You need to wait patiently for an answer to a workplace problem and not push for a decision. Remember: Time is on your side. A financial matter needs closer attention.

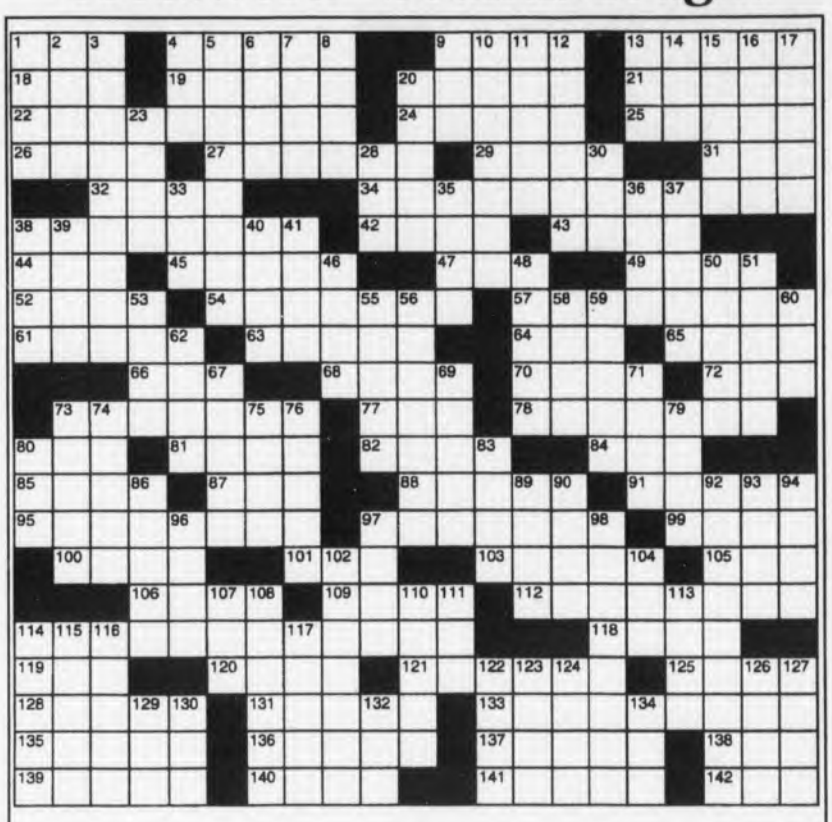
LEO (July 23 to August 22) You now have information that can influence that decision you planned to make. But the clever Cat will consult a trusted friend or family member before making a major move.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Good news: You're finding that more doors are opening for you to show what you can do, and you don't even have to knock very hard to get the attention you're seeking.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your gift for creating order out of chaos will help you deal with a sudden rush of responsibilities that would threaten someone less able to balance his or her priorities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Congratulations. Your energy levels are coming right back up to normal — just in time to help you tackle some worthwhile challenges and make some important choices.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The sage Sagittarian should demand a full explanation of inconsistencies that might be cropping up in what had seemed to be a straightforward deal.



CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A conflict between obligations to family and to the job can create stressful problems. Best advice: Balance your dual priorities so that one doesn't outweigh the other.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't guess, speculate or gossip about that so-called "mystery" situation at the workplace. Bide your time. An explanation will be forthcoming very soon.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Boredom might be creeping in and causing you to lose interest in a repeat project. Deal with it by flipping over your usual routine and finding a new way to do an old task.

BORN THIS WEEK: You can warm the coldest heart with your lyrical voice and bright smile. You find yourself at home, wherever you are.

Level: Challenging

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Flower arrangement that is fit for a king

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

"Flower arranging is a creative outlet for me; I really enjoy it. I enjoyed the challenge of putting together this arrangement."
Jennifer Willms

This week the grass is looking a little bit greener, splashes of spring colors are arriving and flowers beds are coming alive after a long and frozen winter.

To commemorate the bursting of spring the Museum of Fine Arts is blooming as well with their annual event, Art in Bloom. Two Cohasset residents are part of this year's exhibit, which is found throughout the museum this weekend.

Jennifer Willms, assisted by Suzy Doherty, both of Atlantic Avenue and members of the Cohasset Garden Club, are putting together a flower arrangement inspired by a sculpture of Egyptian King Menkaura. The piece has a home in the MFA's new Art of the Americas wing.

Willms called on two South Shore Art Center artists to create the unique vessel to serve as the base of the arrangement.

The annual Art in Bloom exhibit draws garden club members from all over the state. Each arranger is given a piece of art to interpret through flowers.

"You don't want the arrangement to overpower the art. It's supposed to enhance it," Willms said.

While the final arrangement won't be complete until Friday, Willms and Doherty have spent the last month brainstorming and searching for the right elements for the arrangement.

First, they started with a visit to King Menkaura. The sculpture of his head is made from travertine and was excavated from his temple in 1908 by the Harvard-MFA expedition. It dates back to 2500 B.C.

"He looked strong, youthful and kind. There was a nice feeling about him," Willms said. When she did further research on him she found out he was a young king, and a king that stood for freedom. Two things stood out to her in the sculpture

Cohasset Consignment Shop closing its doors on June 15

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

After more than 55 years of operation, the Social Service League of Cohasset is closing the doors on the Cohasset Consignment Shop.

Located in Tedeschi Plaza, the consignment shop has been a staple for those in the region looking for quality second-hand items for decades. It will close on Wednesday, June 15.

Social Service League president Marita Carpenter said the decision was not made lightly; it came largely because of changing times. The business of consignment and non-profits has changed over the past few years and the League is ready to re-focus their efforts on different avenues.

"The shop takes up an enormous amount of time and energy," Carpenter said.

The League will now focus on philanthropy through the Mary Hooper Trust Fund of which they are trustee. One of the primary goals of the League over the next few years is to get the new senior center built. They have pledged up to $1 million of the cost through the Hooper Trust.

"It will be nice to have the time to put our energy behind that project," Carpenter said.

The consignment shop itself has been facing challenges with getting volunteers and face increasing competition from internet sites like craigslist.com.

The consignment shop has always run primarily with the support of a volunteer network, Carpenter said.

"Women's lives have changed. More are working full-time or are much busier with their families," Carpenter said. Daytime volunteers are no longer something easy to come by.

For about 55 years, the consignment shop has been a primary funding source for the non-profit League that provides service to the underserved on the South Shore. They are involved with Cohasset Elder Affairs, run the local Meals on Wheels program, provide holiday meals and gifts to the elderly, sup-

Septic assistance gets mixed reviews

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Town boards are split in their support for a septic assistance program, but it will be up to Town Meeting on Saturday to make the final decision.

The Board of Health is bringing forward to the voters a state-run betterment program that allows communities to loan out money for sewer improvement so the expense can be paid back over time at a low interest rate (article 15).

But, the article does not have unanimous support from key boards. Both the Board of Selectmen and the Capital Budget Committee are opposed to the article. The Advisory Committee voted 5-2 in recommending the article.

This is the second time this program has appeared on a town meeting warrant (see sidebar for brief description ot the program). In November, Special Town Meeting briefly

Cohasset police said the 2001 Toyota Highlander flipped over several times and was totaled in the crash. COURTESY PHOTO

14-year-olds crash SUV

On Friday, April 22, at about 2:20 a.m., Hull Police reported that they were attempting to stop a 2001 Toyota Highlander near Nantasket Beach – the driver of the car was refusing to stop. Hull Police subsequently reported that they discontinued their pursuit of the Highlander because the operator of the Highlander was operating recklessly.

At about 2:22 a.m., the Cohasset emergency dispatch center received a call from the area of 744 Jerusalem Road. The caller was reporting a motor vehicle accident and roll over with injuries.

Cohasset and Hull officers arrived on scene. They found the 2001 Toyota Highlander with heavy damage in the middle of the street. They also found a 14-year-old Cohasset boy sitting on the side of the road complaining of injuries. The boy stated that he and his friend had taken his parents vehicle without permission. The boy further reported that his friend, who is also 14-years-old and from Cohasset, was driving, but had fled the scene.

K-9 officers from Scituate Police and the State Police arrived to assist police in locating the boy who had fled the scene. Approximately one hour later police dogs tracked to the boy's house. He was found inside his home suffering from minor injuries he sustained in the crash. His parents refused medical treatment on his behalf.

The juvenile driver of the vehicle will be charged with: driving to endanger; leaving the scene of an accident after causing personal injury; unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle; using a motor vehicle without authority; speeding; and failure to drive in marked lanes.

The juvenile passenger in the motor vehicle, who sustained minor injuries and was transported to South Shore Hospital by ambulance, will be charged with the following crime: using a motor vehicle without authority.

The passenger was treated and released from the hospital. The Highlander, which flipped over several times and was totaled in the crash, belongs to the passenger's parents. There may be additional charges on the driver by Hull police. CPD Lt. William Quigley said, "Seatbelts definitely saved lives in this incident."

Police did not release the names of the boys because they are juveniles.

Another chain reaction accident on King Street

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

At 8:25 a.m. on Friday (April 22), police investigated a three-car, chain-reaction accident. Police said a 2002 Jeep Grand Cherokee, operated by at 25-year-old Scituate woman, was headed north on King Street (Route 3A) when she stopped to make a left into USA Fitness. The car behind her, a 2010 Buick Lacrosse, operated by a 64-year-old Cambridge woman, stopped, but the third car in the line, a 2010 Ford Edge, operated by an 82-year-old Scituate man, crashed into the Buick causing a chain reaction. No vehicles had to be towed and there were no apparent injuries, police said. The 82-year-old man was cited for following too closely on a state highway.

Shaken up

At 9:10 a.m. on Monday (April 18), a woman called to report that while she was at the Gulf Station at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Beechwood Street, a black Lexus sped under the canopy and almost took her car door off. Police said she provided a plate number but it did not match any plate at the registry of motor vehicles.

Arrest

A 32-year-old Hull man was arrested following a traffic stop at 6:22 p.m. on Monday (April 18) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. An officer was on patrol on CJC Highway near the Hingham line when he observed a 2006 GMC Envoy pass by with a rejection sticker on the windshield. The officer stopped the vehicle near lower King Street. Further investigation revealed the operator had a suspended license. He was arrested for operating after license suspension (subsequent offense) and operating with a rejection sticker for motor vehicle safety standards. His vehicle was towed.

Police explained that a red "R" on a rejection sticker means the vehicle failed safety standards during inspection. The vehicle must be brought up to standard before being operated. A black "R" means the vehicle failed emission tests and the owner has 60 days to correct the emission system.

Summonsed

• A 49-year-old Quincy man is being summonsed to court for operating without a license. An officer on patrol at 8:55 p.m. on Monday (April 18) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway was behind a 1995 Nissan Altima that veered to the right, crossing over the fog line, police said. The operator presented the officer with a Brazilian passport but no license after being pulled over. Police said the Quincy man had been in the country for nine years. He is being summonsed on charges of operating without a license and marked lanes violation. His car was towed.

• At 6:10 a.m. on Wednesday (April 20), an officer ran a random registry check on a 2003 Chevrolet Blazer that he was behind on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. The computer revealed the registered owner, a 32-year-old Scituate man, had an expired, non-renewable license. The officer pulled the vehicle over and confirmed the operator was the owner. He is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation. His wife took custody of the car so it did not have to be towed, police said.

Break-in

Police are summonsing an acquaintance of a 30-year-old Cohasset woman, who lives in an apartment on Pleasant Street, to court on the charge of breaking and entering following an investigation. The woman reported that she discovered $3600 in cash missing from her apartment when she returned home from vacation and called police last Tuesday (April 19). Police said the 32-year-old Hingham man being summonsed could face additional charges, as the investigation is ongoing.

Warrant

Plymouth District Court issued a probation warrant last week for a 45-year-old Cohasset man. Cohasset police arrested the man on the warrant, booked him, held him overnight, and transported him to Quincy District Court where the Plymouth County Sheriff's Department picked him up.

Silver missing

A 74-year-old Cohasset man, who lives on Summer Street, reported to police last Thursday (April 21) that 44 pieces of sterling silver, including knives, forks and spoons — valued at $500 — were missing. He reported the only person having access to his home is a home health aide.

Police notified the employer of the home health aide, who is a 48-year-old Marshfield woman. The incident is under investigation.

Possible scam

The 41-year-old owner of a village eatery notified police last Thursday (April 21) after receiving a suspicious call. The caller was attempting to purchase food for $1500 but asked her to charge the credit card $2000 and refund the extra cash to him. Police said she cancelled the order and called the station.

Baby formula

Police received a call last Thursday (April 21) at 6 p.m. from Stop & Shop that two people – a man and a woman described as being in the mid-20s – left the store without paying for a shopping cart full of baby formula valued at $300. Witnesses said the couple left in a silver VW Passat but the plate number provided did not match with any plate in the registry's computer. Police put a notice out to surrounding towns.

Briefcase

A 31-year-old Cohasset man reported to police at 7:15 a.m. on Friday (April 22) that a briefcase valued at about $100 was taken from his 2008 Volvo overnight. Police said his car was unlocked. There are no suspects at this time.

Hit & Run

An 80-year-old Bayberry Lane resident told police the driver's side mirror to his 1989 Buick was missing after he had parked his car on the street near his house last Tuesday (April 19).

Liquor store given warning

Selectmen hold hearing on license violation

By Nancy White
Nwhite@wickedlocal.com

The sale of alcohol to an intoxicated person is a violation of a liquor license.

On Tuesday night, the Board of Selectmen found truth to allegations that the Village Wine & Spirits did just that in an incident in early March.

The Selectmen issued a warning to the business and its owner, Tracy O'Connor, after a 30-minute hearing where they heard from both the police and O'Connor.

The violation stems from an incident on Tuesday, March 8. An officer on patrol saw a male staggering down Elm Street carrying a 12-pack of beer. According to the officer, the male was visibly intoxicated. While an officer was speaking with the man, he fell to the ground and hit his head. EMTs responded to the scene and the man was taken by ambulance to South Shore Hospital.

Police said when the man's blood alcohol level was taken at the hospital it was 0.385. As a comparison, the legal limit for drunk driving is 0.08.

Further investigation by officers revealed the 12-pack of beer as well as six vodka nips had been recently purchased at the Village Wine & Spirits.

O'Connor, who represented herself at the hearing, said she did sell the alcohol to him, but she did not feel he appeared "tipsy."

"I never ever would intentionally sell him alcohol knowing he was intoxicated," O'Connor said. While he was in the store she had a conversation with him about his car and his dog. "I've gone back over and over that night."

In his report, Officer Jay St. Ives, who responded to the incident said he found several empty nips and Red Bulls between the store and where he made contact with the man.

Selectman Paul Carlson asked if it was possible for someone to have a 0.385 blood alcohol level based on the amount of alcohol consumed on the walk down Elm Street.

Lt. William Quigley said to get a 0.385 blood alcohol level requires close to a full day of drinking.

O'Connor has owned Village Wine & Spirits for five years and has not had any prior issues with her liquor license. Since the incident, she said she renewed her TIPS training certificate and pledged to have her employee(s) do the same.

"I want people to know I run a safe business," O'Connor said.

After hearing from both sides, the Selectmen closed the hearing. They made a unanimous finding that a violation of the liquor license did occur and issued a warning to the business.

The selectmen debated whether to include a clause allowing the warning to be expunged from the record after a certain time period. Selectmen chair Karen Quigley was against having this type of clause.

"I think it's very important to send a message to the community and other businesses that this is something we take very seriously and it is not something that can be erased," Quigley said.

Ultimately, the selectmen voted 4-1, with Quigley against, to give O'Connor the opportunity to appeal to the board after a period of three years to remove the warning from the record.

port Wellspring of Hull and put on various other community programs for adults and teenagers.

With the Hooper Trust, they will continue to do much of the same work. The Meals on Wheels program, which is currently run out of the consignment shop, will be moved somewhere else to be determined over the next month or so. The Social Service League will not have a physical office per se once the Cohasset Consignment Shop closes. Its operations will be primarily run electronically.

"It's time to shift and revamp. Many non-profits are doing that," Carpenter said.

For long-time volunteers and shoppers, the closing of the store is a sad event.

"I really think the consignment shop serves a purpose for a lot of people — those selling and buying," said Shelanne Durkin, a Cohasset native now living in Scituate. She has been volunteering at the consignment shop once a week for about 10 years. Her grandmother, Doris Tower, volunteered at the consignment shop as well when it was at one of its former locations.

"I certainly understand the decision. Times have changed," Durkin said, adding volunteers are harder to come by and with the economy many items can be purchased new relatively inexpensively.

"But, it's a tradition for a lot of people. There are some people who come in everyday; it's part of their routine. It will be a loss for them."

As the consignment shop winds down its business, they will be referring both customers and loyal consignors to the Sea Chest Consignments also in Cohasset on Route 3A.

Carpenter said business would operate as usual until early June when things will begin to be marked down.

"We have to be loyal to our consignors in trying to get them the best price (for their goods)," Carpenter said. They plan to be completely out of the space by July 1.

Cohasset Consignment Shop is located in the Tedeschi Plaza alongside Curtis Liquors, CVS and Cohasset Jewelers. For more information, call 781-383-0687.

Garrett Hunt is new sergeant

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

On Tuesday night, Police Chief Mark DeLuca introduced the department's recently promoted sergeant Garrett Hunt. Hunt, a 15-year veteran for the Cohasset Police force, officially accepted his new role and title at the swearing in and pinning ceremony at the Board of Selectmen's meeting.

Among family, friends and fellow police officers from Cohasset, Hunt got his new badge pinned on his uniform by his wife, Kerri.

Hunt was born and raised in Cohasset. He is a Gulf War veteran, serving the Air Force during Desert Storm.

He started his policing career in 1996 as a patrol officer. He held that position for seven years until he joined the department's Criminal Investigation Division (CID) as detective in 2002.

He lives in Pembroke with his wife, Kerri, and one daughter. His mother and stepfather, Jackie and Brian Noonan, former police chief, still live in Cohasset.

Hunt's promotion gives the department four sergeants, one to oversee each shift.

"This allows us to have consistent leadership on every shift," Lt. William Quigley said in a phone interview.

With Hunt's promotion he will be moved out of the CID. Officer Jim McLean has been appointed the department's new detective and received a new rating (detective).

Officer Lisa Matos recently retired and she had served as the department's police prosecutor. Officer Patrick Kenney will take over the prosecutor position.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all your news, photos and celebration info to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm. Cell phone photos are not usually the best as they have low resolution.

Just an FYI. We receive dean's list and honors notices from many colleges and private schools, but not all. If your son or daughter has earned recognition, please share that news directly with us!

We also LOVE new baby announcements with photos if possible. Need birth date, weight, length, names of siblings, parents and grandparents. Emailed photos are fine but glossies can be dropped off at Tedeschi's in the village in our Mariner drop box.

FLOWER

– the large roundness of the head and the protruding beard.

She wanted the arrangement to play off those two prominent portions of the sculpture as well as choose flowers to speak to his place in history.

Her interpretation will include long leaves in a sort of basket weave design to represent the roundness of the sculpture. At the bottom of the arrangement will be a protruding piece of fern and calla lilies. The arrangement will also include a succulent, ranunculus flowers, yarrow, beehive ginger, a petal-less sunflower and papyrus.

"This is what would be called a modern creative design...it doesn't follow all the rules," Willms said. In most flower arranging competitions there are many rules to follow and be judged on. The MFA's Art in Bloom exhibit is not judged, though it is seen by hundreds of visitors over the three days.

"Flower arranging is a creative outlet for me; I really enjoy it," Willms said. "I enjoyed the challenge of putting together this arrangement."

She adds when it comes to flowers it is always a trial and error learning process, whether it's growing flowers in the backyard or putting them in a vase.

With just over a week to go before the Art in Bloom exhibit Willms still had a key missing component – the vessel to put the flowers in.

She searched high and low, in garden shops and on the internet, for an appropriate vessel in which to place the arrangement. But, she couldn't find what she was looking for – or anything close to it.

A board member at the South Shore Art Center, Willms contacted gallery artist Jeanne Wiley and faculty member Ann Conte to see if they could make her vision for a vessel a reality. The artistic collaborators created the "woven car" last year transforming a rusted out 1960s model MG Midget in a piece of art. Despite the limited time, the two artists agreed to create the vessel.

"It was sort of a nail biting type of thing. We really had to push the medium," Wiley said in a phone interview this week. "This is a job that typically would take two weeks, minimally."

With two sets of hands – and a bit of luck – the piece came together. The end result is a base reminiscent of an Egyptian pyramid. The artists added texture and glaze, and made sure it could hold water.

"It was a challenge. I love working on things that aren't supposed to work!" Wiley said with a laugh.

When Willms picked up the vessel on Tuesday morning she was "thrilled" at the way it came out.

"It looks old and worn and lovely," Willms said. "The vessel adds so much to the overall arrangement."

Beginning today (April 29) and through Sunday, the MFA's galleries will be transformed by almost 70 flower arrangements inspired by magnificent works of art. This year's Art in Bloom arrangements are located throughout the Museum, including 28 in the new Art of the Americas Wing.

Art in Bloom is free with Museum admission.

Next Chapter features Penguins, Tweets, and More

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the mariner

Next Chapter workshops this month continue to explore technology; they will also tour the world of educational travel opportunities and through the eyes of author Dyan deNapoli, journey to the coast of South Africa, the site of the world's largest animal rescue.

First on May's program is Diane Danielson's workshop on Creating an Effective Twitter Strategy on Wednesday, May 4, at 10:30 AM. Twitter is another means of social networking—a statement of short thoughts and comments limited to 140 characters, often referred to as a micro blog. Tweets can be open forums or restricted; they are instant; they are what provide many users with immediate news of events occurring throughout the world.

Danielson will discuss Twitter as a personal media tool but also as a business, marketing, and PR tool. She will show how to craft an effective Twitter strategy, such as what to tweet, how often to tweet, and which applications to use to get the most out of Twitter. Danielson will walk the class through several case studies revealing how companies are using Twitter for customer service and research.

How many times have you returned from a trip and wished you could edit your photos to more effectively capture your memories— enlarge the lion cub on the tree limb or lighten the Grand Tetons just as the sun went down?

On Tuesday, May 10, at 10:30 AM, Barbara Andrews' workshop on Basic Image Editing for Free will demystify photo editing and walk students through the steps offered by on-line programs such as Picasa, Photoshop Express Editor, and Organizer. All programs offer invaluable organizing and editing tools.

Elderhostel, a world leader in lifelong learning travel experience since 1975 will lead two workshops on Wednesday, May 11, 11:00-12:30 PM and Thursday, May 12, 7:00-8:30 PM. Whether it's Shakespeare at the Globe theatre, Showtime in New York City, a hiking adventure with grandchildren, or a quiet cruise in a river boat or deluxe ocean liner, Elderhostel can provide unforgettable learning experiences.

Barbara Andrews returns on Friday, May 20, at 10:30 with her workshop on PC Troubleshooting. Do you kick your computer when it freezes up or scream at the monitor when it flashes error message? Under Andrews' tutelage, students will discover features and utilities available in Windows to analyze hardware and peripheral device problems and settings. Also covered will be free utilities that can be used to secure computers, optimize performance, and decipher the task manager.

The Penguin Lady, Dyan DeNapoli, author of "The Great Penguin Rescue"—the story of 40,000 penguins, a devastating oil spill, and the inspiring story of the world's largest animal rescue, will visit Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Thursday, May 26, at 7 PM. In her book, DeNapoli, an aquarist at Boston's New England Aquarium when the spill occurred in 2000 along the coast of Cape Town South Africa, narrates the harrowing tale of this rescue and the cast of volunteers who scrubbed every feather and de-oiled and nursed back to health nearly all the affected birds. DeNapoli will talk about the rescue and her experiences. Her book will be available for purchase.

All Next Chapter programs are free and open to the public.

Next Chapter is funded by grants from the Social Service League of Cohasset and by a federal Institute of Museum and Library Services grant awarded by the MA Board of Library Commissioners.

Daffodils in bloom at Cohasset Central Cemetery

Have you noticed the clustered daffodils at the entrance to Cohasset Central Cemetery? Similar clusters are artfully placed throughout the Cemetery, as seen in this photo.

The daffodils were chosen by landscape designer Margaret Cotter, a Cohasset Central Cemetery Board Member, to celebrate renewal of life in the Spring.

The Cemetery Board has established a "Special Projects Fund" and welcomes Memorial Gifts for additional planting of this kind. Gifts may be forwarded to Elinor Campbell, Cemetery Treasurer, at 44 Ripley Road.

Overlooking Little Harbor as its terrain slopes to water's edge, Cohasset Central Cemetery at Joy Place is a place of great beauty and peace. Active for almost three centuries and containing about 500 gravestones in its 4.5 acres, markers of slate, marble, and granite are witness to the passage of time and to changing fortune, belief, custom and style.

The cemetery is on the National Register of Historic Places.

CANDIDATE'S CORNER

Quigley makes formal announcement

I ran for selectman not to be popular, not for prestige, but to make a difference. I brought common sense and leadership to the discussion; stood for reform and fiscal responsibility; and built partnerships. You know what I will do because you know what I've done.

During the recent fiscal crisis I was the first and for some time the lone voice insisting on an audit and reform.

I stood my ground in the face of strenuous opposition, asked hard questions and lobbied for individuals. Ultimately, I made tough decisions that impacted friends and neighbors but they were based on facts not politics or personalities, and in, what I deemed, the best interests of the Town as a whole.

I attend other board meetings to learn more about what is happening in town government: having more information and learning different perspectives allow me to make better decisions.

Cohasset is at a crossroads and whom you elect will determine what road is taken.

Someone told me this morning "You sometimes make me angry but at least you stand for what you think is right." The truth is that every time you make a decision some agree and some disagree. Not making a decision is not an option for me.

Cohasset is at a crossroads and whom you elect will determine what road is taken. If you agree that road should be based on sound business and financial practices, and that strong leadership is needed because we've got hard decisions to make, then please cast one of your two votes for selectmen for me.

TOWN MEETING TO VOTE

Schools lower budget number

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

"We are able to do this one time. It's crucial to get across this is not sustainable."
School Committee chairman Helene Lieb

On Wednesday night, the School Committee rescinded their vote on a $15.732 million budget, and voted for the town manager's recommended budget of $15,402,478, a 2.4 percent increase or $368,000 over the fiscal 2011.

The change in budget number comes after close to two months of discussion. The school committee approved a level services budget number at a public hearing in March. Yet, the number was $330,000 more than the town manager said the town could afford. Now, they have brought the budget in line with the town's recommendation. Town Meeting will have the final say on the town budget on Saturday.

The School Committee still plans to provide all the services provided this year and use a combination of pre-payments from fiscal 2011 and savings through retirements as an offset to close the gap.

Although the School Committee has identified the means to close the gap this year members said this decision is setting the stage for service cuts or an override in fiscal 2013.

"We are able to do this one time. It's crucial to get across this is not sustainable," said School Committee chairman Helene Lieb.

Interim school superintendent and business manager Dave DeGennaro has estimated the schools will have $270,000 in savings at the end of this fiscal year. Approximately $135,000 will go toward pre-payment of supplies and $135,000 will go toward pre-payment of out-of-district special education. The pre-payment of these two items are allowed under municipal finance law.

In large part, that surplus identified is due to two unfilled administrative positions (curriculum coordinator and STEM program supervisor). The fiscal 2012 budget could be lowered about $60,000 because of various retirements in the school district and the new hires coming in at a lower salary level.

Alfred Slanetz said the school committee was "intentionally underfunding" the budget because they fully intended to hire those two positions in the coming year.

"It's not a good operational budget solution," Slanetz said. Slanetz did not vote in favor of rescinding the $15.732 million budget, but did vote in favor of the $15.402 million number.

Slanetz said the town could see a savings on healthcare costs, if the state legislature votes in favor of reform. He was concerned if the school committee went with the lower budget number they would lose their ability to negotiate with the town for their portion of potential savings.

Member Jeanne Astino said the time for that discussion would be in the future, as it was still unclear whether the healthcare reform would pass in a state Senate vote.

"It behooves all of use to ensure there is continued open and honest discussion with the selectmen through the Budget Planning Group," Astino said. The School Committee also plans to send a letter to the Board of Selectmen to begin this discussion.

The vote to approve the $15,402,478 fiscal 2012 budget was unanimous. The School Committee will have a handout at Saturday's town meeting to complement their budget.

Triathlon to support food pantry

The Cohasset Food Pantry is going to get a little help from the fifth annual Cohasset Triathlon and its participants.

Race founder and director Bill Burnett, a Cohasset resident, put out a call to Cohasset-based non-profits. The goal was to partner with one of them and donate a portion of the proceeds to the organization.

Two non-profits applied: the food pantry and Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF). The race coordinators voted to support the Cohasset Food Pantry for this year. Other local non-profits could be the triathlon's beneficiary in future years, Burnett said.

Burnett requested Board of Selectmen to allow him to add 50 additional numbers for the race and 100 percent of those registrations go to charity. The result would be a donation of $4,250 to the pantry. In addition, Burnett will ask race participants to bring one or more pantry items on race day.

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously to add the additional numbers to the race. Burnett said the additional racers would have no impact on the race, either logistically or increasing the duration of the race.

Since its inception in 2007 the triathlon has partnered with JDRF (Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation) to raise funding for their efforts to find a cure for Type 1 diabetes. In four years, the event has helped raise more than $600,000 for the cause.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley commended Burnett on his cooperation with the board and for addressing their concerns over the impact of the race on local residents.

Burnett also said members of the police department were meeting with local religious leaders to discuss their concerns with the race this week.

The race is scheduled for Sunday, June 26.

OUR VIEW

Town Meeting time

We're going to see a lot of familiar faces Saturday. You know who you are: you're the Town Meeting groupies.

You've been bitten by the bug, have discovered the secret, and/or just want to see old friends.

To put it simply, Town Meeting is interesting, entertaining and even fun. The only bad part is those hard chairs, but that matter can be resolved by bringing a cushion along.

At the risk of being run out of town — we're actually hoping for light showers Saturday. We're hoping if the skies are gray and it's rainy outside, more Cohasset citizens might "come on down" to Cohasset High School. If the day is dry and warm, some voters might decide to relax or do a few hours of gardening or yard work and give Town Meeting a pass.

With that being said, we don't think there's any chance Town Meeting will have "quorum troubles" in fact, we'd bet upwards of 300 people will be in attendance.

It would be wonderful to double that number! Why? Because Town Meeting is where the action is. It's the town's "legislative body" that spends money and changes bylaws — both of which can affect your quality of life.

One of the best things about "open" Town Meeting, which Cohasset has, is that anyone can air their views and everyone can vote. Some towns, mostly larger ones, have representative Town Meetings where elected representatives cast the votes.

Another aspect of Town Meeting, which we really appreciate, is that complex issues are usually explained in a clear manner. Anyone who has been in Cohasset more than five minutes knows "complexities" are almost as common as "controversies" in this seaside town.

As reporters we cover the issues week in and week out, but at Town Meeting there is often another aspect presented that we hadn't heard before which further illuminates a project or expenditure.

We sincerely hope to see people of all voting ages at Town Meeting that is often populated baby boomers and senior citizens. Many of these parents, grandparents and great-grandparents know the value of a dollar and we find their contribution to Town Meeting to be a critical part of the governing process. We hope to see more 18-to-30-year-olds involved.

While we enjoy a healthy debate, we urge everyone to practice civility. We're one town with a lot of divergent views about everything from the fiscal 2012 budget to the proposed septic assistance program. It's important to remember however, while you may not agree with their decisions, those who sit on our boards and committees are our neighbors and fellow taxpayers.

The best way to handle an issue you feel passionately about is to speak up, make your case, and cast your vote. And the best way to make a difference is to get involved. There's a "Town Talent Bank" application on page 33 of the warrant. Please take a moment to fill it out and offer your time and talent to one of the appointed committees in town.

Cohasset cannot continue to thrive without creative, new ideas and boundless energy. The town needs you, and the best way to get fired up about local government is to go to Town Meeting. You won't regret it.

In spite of several Cohasset Conservation Trust signs asking that visitors remove all trash, high school Earth Day volunteers collected a record load of rubbish from Bassing Beach.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

CEF Luau, a success

The Cohasset Education Foundation would like to extend an enormous thank you to everyone who helped make this year's annual spring fundraiser another fantastic and fruitful event. The April 9th Luau attracted close to 275 people to celebrate Cohasset's schools and continue the CEF's mission to provide long-term educational support in ways not covered in the town's budget.

In connection with the Luau, special thanks go out to:

- The legions of volunteers who spent hours collecting auction items, soliciting advertisers, setting up and cleaning up the Golf Club and working the night of the event. Particular thanks to Sue Hess, Kate Linhart, Pam Turpel, Susan Franklin and Tricia and Bob Pattison.
- The talented planning committee
- The CEF Board of Directors
- The businesses, teachers and individuals who advertised in the auction book and generously contributed over 75 auction items in a wide array of categories, and to David Burke of Millennium Printing.
- Steel Rhythm for their fabulous island music.
- Lisa Sugrue for coordinating all of the High School Art Projects
- The many students and teachers from the Joseph Osgood, through the Deer Hill and up to the Middle and High Schools that made the auction a collaborative event. The CEF hopes to continue these cooperative efforts for future success.

The CEF was thrilled to see both its core of staunch supporters and a host of new faces in the crowd. With the support provided by all of you, the CEF raised enough funds to make a significant difference for our kids, our town and our future. Thank you! — Ginni Froio, Event Chair

How's your brain?

STEVE BOBO

For the most part, these programs are designed to be easy-to-use and to fit into one's lifestyle. Regular use can range from a few minutes a day to as much time as a user prefers.

Ever feel like events are outpacing our ability to cope with them? It's been observed that as we get older, our facilities start to wear out. Athletes peak out in their 30s and the process of "getting on" occupies us until we leave the rat race. Hopefully, experience allows us to think smarter, but getting older invariably means slowing down. Turns out that the process begins early, at about 20, and cognitive ability, thinking, remembering, reasoning and even listening, seeing and recognizing all begin to slow down; some of us more gracefully than others, until at age 50 to 70 most begin to notice it's not all there any more.

Since 2005, medical science has changed its understanding of how the brain reacts to the events which make up one's experience. Over the last few years, neuroscience, the study of the nervous system, enormously expanded, aided by new tools for imaging methods for characterizing perceptual and motor tasks in the brain. The result has been a recognition that the brain, the center of guidance for the activity of all sentient life forms, is more complex and adaptable than ever before realized. Neuroscience is at the frontier of investigation of the brain and mind, becoming the cornerstone in understanding how we perceive and interact with the external world and, in particular, how human experience and human biology influence each other.

Scientists studying the ability of different elements of the brain to adapt to a person's unique experience, a process called brain plasticity, have applied their knowledge to develop some rather remarkable improvements in brain function for people of every age, even those whose mental ability has degraded as a result of old age, a condition called senile dementia.

Now, several organizations have developed procedures and exercises that have led to remarkable improvements in brain function for people of any age. Companies have made commercial use of recent discoveries in brain plasticity to develop brain exercises that improve memory, speech recognition and concentration. In Cohasset, the library has software available to use designed to expand many areas of the brain's competence.

For the most part, these programs are designed to be easy-to-use and to fit into one's lifestyle. Regular use can range from a few minutes a day to as much time as a user prefers. Over a period of about a month, having completed about half of a nationally marketed program. Posit Science, of 40 sessions, each taking about an hour and a half, one may find that one session averages one to one and a half hours. The program, although not difficult, is not done without a decision to make a healthy commitment of time and effort. Many of the exercises are fun and interesting, but some are boring and sometimes frustrating. They are, however, easy to interrupt and rejoin; so taking a break is often a help. It turns out that a part of stimulating the brain involves providing it with rewards that the exercises provide in the form of animations, sound and visual "candy" for good performance and other abstract inducements. The entire exercise is done before a computer and requires little typing but instead, the use of a mouse for giving responses. Different programs use differing methods.

For many taking the programs, either on their own machines or those at the library, the results were breathtaking. Not only has memory improved, but ability to organize and understand things like speech in crowded rooms has gotten better. The brain plasticity concept covers a person's adjustment of how to recognize other people's speech patterns and our ability to understand what they are saying. But again, it's not accomplished without considerable commitment and effort; just like a physical workout.

The Board of Health is investigating similar brain fitness programs for the Community Center and Elder Affairs as well as the library.

Sewer pipe with a sleeve

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project —This week we will continue our ongoing description of the Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project construction work that was done over the winter. There was one aspect of our project that had nothing to do with the Outfall at Jacobs Meadow, namely a bit of construction for the Sewer Department.

As you may have read, the sewer folks have an ongoing concern about something called "INI." This stands for "inflow and infiltration." INI is water that finds its way into the sewer pipes from other than the sewer system. A prime source of INI is ground water that enters the sewer lines as a result of defective sewer pipes. If pipes are defective, high ground water gets into the sewer lines and goes on its merry way to the sewer plant. There, it must be processed along with the regular sewage products. This can add appreciably to the work the sewer plant needs to do. In some cases INI can actually overwhelm the sewer plant. This has happened in the past before plant modifications were made to better handle this condition.

So you ask, what does this have to do with the Jacobs Meadow Project. Well it just so happens that a major sewer line that carries all of the raw sewage from the Border Street area passes under the Jacobs Meadow outfall channel that we are replacing. Couple this with the fact that the existing pipe is an old clay pipe, which is known to be among the suspected sources of INI because it is brittle and often cracks and breaks. Additionally, the sewer line passed very close to the bottom of the new culvert. It would have been very difficult to place the new culvert without potentially damaging the old clay pipe.

Fortunately, there were two sewer manholes, one on either side of the Jacobs Meadow channel. One was located behind the Legion building, the other in the parking lot behind the exercise studio. Our job was to run a new pipe between the two manholes. An interesting side note was that since this is an active sewer line it couldn't be taken out of service. Our contractor had to set up a pump that carried the effluent from one manhole to the other while the old pipe was out of service. One of the photos shows the manhole behind the Legion building. (It is shown above the snow, next to a half-barrel on the far side of the channel.)

Another interesting practice used when inaccessible pipes are replaced is to "sleeve" them. This means that the new pipe is laid inside of a larger pipe or "sleeve." In our case our new pipe was plastic and the sleeve was ductile iron. Ductile iron is a strong very special cast iron material that, unlike regular cast iron, is not very brittle. Should the sewer pipe, at any time in the future, need to be replaced, the pipe can be removed from inside of the sleeve and a new pipe inserted into the sleeve without disturbing the culvert. The second photo shows the new pipe inside of the protective sleeve. Adding sleeves in critical areas such as this is a very prudent move. As an aside, for the same reason sleeves were used for the utility pipes that had to be routed under the Greenbush tracks during the railroad construction.

In our case our new pipe was plastic and the sleeve was ductile iron. Ductile iron is a strong very special cast iron material that, unlike regular cast iron, is not very brittle.

We'd also like to point out another interesting thing. It is a bit hard to see, but in the second photo the sleeve pipe rests, at each end, on a rather large concrete structure or block. (There is a pail on one block, and the worker is standing on the other block.) These blocks were placed precisely in their location by the contractor. Their top surface actually determines the position of the sleeve, which in turn locates the sewer pipe inside of it. The exact position of the pipe is critical since the sewer line is a gravity line and it needs to have the proper slope to work properly.

Since the sewer line was so close to the culvert bottom, the bottom section of the culvert could not be precast and dropped into place over the sleeve. Instead, the culvert concrete bottom was actually cast in place over the sleeve. This assured us that the sleeve did not move as a result of placing the culvert section. During our project we also connected several replaced sewer services for three Elm Street properties into the new pipe as a part of the Sewer Department's INI reduction program. Even though the sewer line replacements had nothing to do with the Jacobs Meadow Outfall reconstruction, very often one project begets unrelated side projects as a natural consequence. As you can see, there are a lot of challenges in a construction project that initially seems to be quite simple.

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

OLIVE OIL: A 6000-year old gift from the gods

MARY KENNEDY

It was the Phoenicians, those fearless early seafarers from the Eastern Mediterranean, who spread the good news about olive trees to Greece, Italy, and Spain. Wherever they landed, olive trees were sure to grow thereafter. The fruit of the olive tree was regarded as the elixir of life.

Athena, goddess of wisdom, won a contest among the gods for presenting the most useful gift — an olive tree — to lowly humans. The Greeks, forever grateful, even crowned their Olympic champions with olive leaves. Today, more than 80 percent of the world's supply of olive oil comes from these three nations. Spain is number one in producing olives for eating; Italy in producing olive oil. The Greeks have the world's highest per capita use. Perhaps that's because Greek folk wisdom still claims that two tablespoons of olive oil each morning can cure everything from gallstones to constipation.

Deep-rooted and tenacious, olive trees thrive in dry or wet climate, bear fruit year after year, and can live for centuries. Some of the trees on Jerusalem's Mount of Olives are more than 2000 years old. Oil is extracted from the fruit by a simple mechanical pressing, using little heat. The label "extra virgin" indicates cold pressing (no heat) and less than 1 percent acidity.

The olive is first mentioned in the Bible when a dove appears before Noah, presenting an olive branch to signify the end of the Great Flood and the beginning of peace. More than 190 later references attest to the uses and healing powers of olive oil. Psalm 104:15 speaks of "wine that gladdens human hearts, oil to make faces shine." The Good Samaritan, seeing his enemy, a Jew, dying on the road, "bound up his wounds, pouring on oil and wine." The Prophet Elisha's rescue of the destitute widow illustrates its importance as an item of trade. Even the word "Christ" means the anointed one.

Although the Spanish first brought olives to California in the 1500s, it took several centuries before Americans gained respect for this "liquid gold."

For centuries, olive oil consecrated altars, anointed kings, the dying, and babies at the rite of Baptism. Its more homely uses in addition to cooking and in rituals were many. As a preservative it slowed the spoiling of fish, cheese, even wine, for at least a year. It was used in cosmetics and to polish diamonds; as a salve, soap, hair tonic and even as fuel. In a more sinister application, early marauding armies utilized boiling olive oil as a weapon of war and torture. Boiled in oil must have been a most unpleasant way to die.

Although the Spanish first brought olives to California in the 1500s, it took several centuries before Americans gained respect for this "liquid gold." One of the first studies of its benefits, published in 1970, revealed that Mediterranean peoples had the lowest rate of heart disease among Western nations. Was it because their liberal use of olive oil, cholesterol free and rich in monounsaturated (good) fat, helped prevent plaque buildup in arteries? Almost overnight, olive oil, so full of nutrients, vitamins, antioxidants, vitamins A and E, became fashionable beyond immigrant kitchens. Frequent studies continue to suggest that it may reduce the risk of breast cancer; have a therapeutic effect on peptic ulcers; prevent the formation of gallstones; reduce the risk of arteriosclerosis. Elixir of life indeed.

Even more recent is the growing enthusiasm for olive oil as an age-defying, wrinkle-reducing, skin-firming, acne-fighting, blemish-diminishing beauty treatment. This natural product that hydrates, moisturizes, and cleans, contains no chemicals, no synthetic color, no synthetic fragrance. And costs far less than designer products!

Like the food we eat, what touches skin is also absorbed into the body. For example: lead in lipstick, various acids in body lotions, hair dyes, and creams applied near the eye; alcohol which dries and ages skin; mineral oil which moisturizes but also clogs pores.

According to current law, cosmetic companies are not required to report any injuries — like blindness and lead poisoning — caused by their products. In fact, cosmetics are among the least regulated products on the market with more than 89 percent of all ingredients as yet not evaluated for safety. The FDA has authority only to regulate color additives.

What's to be done? On with olive oil for health and beauty? Petition the FDA to test for safer products, more honest labels?

FOR THE RECORD

Happy, healthy and peaceful in Massachusetts

GREGORY MATHIS

Massachusetts has a lot of well-earned reputations. The great Commonwealth is known for its historical contributions from the Pilgrims landing in Plymouth, to the shots fired at Lexington and Concord to signify the start of the American Revolution, to the U.S. presidents who have hailed from this great state. It's also known for having outstanding hospitals and some of the best institutions of higher education anywhere.

Its residents are known for recognizable accents and colloquialisms and some not from these parts insist Massachusetts drivers are the worst in the country. Those folks have obviously not spent time traveling on New York roadways.

It's always interesting to see how Massachusetts stacks up to other states in all the surveys out there measuring various aspects of quality of life.

One recent survey indicates the farther west you live, the happier you are.

The results of a survey conducted by the Gallup-Healthways Well-Being Index between Jan. 1 and Dec. 31, 2010 revealed some interesting insight as to what makes people happy and what location has to do with happiness.

It shouldn't come as a surprise that the happiest people live in Hawaii. I've never been there, but I've seen enough in photographs and on television to understand it's a place that evokes happiness.

What is surprising is the next seven states on the happy list: Wyoming, North Dakota, Alaska, Colorado, Minnesota, South Dakota, and Utah. Personally, the first word that comes to mind for each of these states is not happy, but cold. Harsh winters (much harsher than the Northeast), long, cold nights. I wouldn't think any of this would lead to happiness.

It shouldn't come as a surprise that the happiest people live in Hawaii. I've never been there, but I've seen enough in photographs and on television to understand it's a place that evokes happiness.

The survey looked at six categories of well being. These categories included life evaluation (self-evaluation about your present life situation and anticipated one in five years); emotional health; job satisfaction; physical health; healthy behavior; and basic access (access to health care, a doctor, a safe place to exercise and walk, as well as community satisfaction).

If it's any consolation, I'm happy to report Massachusetts is the second happiest state in the east, coming in at number 11 overall. Connecticut leads the way from our region at number nine.

The bottom five states, for discussion sake, are West Virginia, Kentucky, Mississippi, Arkansas, and Alabama.

The University of Wisconsin Population Health Institute recently released a survey focusing on the healthiest counties across America. In our readership area, Norfolk County is easily the healthiest, followed by Plymouth County, then Bristol County, which is near the bottom for all Massachusetts counties.

The County Health Rankings take a look at four health factors: health behaviors, clinical care, social and economic, and the physical environment. Two types of health outcomes are measured: how long people live (mortality) and how healthy people feel (morbidity).

Another survey of states that made its debut this year is the United States Peace Index, which ranks the 50 states based on their levels of peace. Maine proved to be the most peaceful U.S. state, while Louisiana is ranked the least peaceful.

Some of the indicators determining the level of peace include number of violent crimes, number of police officers and incarceration rate. In general, peace in the United States has improved since 1995. Massachusetts was ranked seventh as far as peacefulness and New England was one of the most peaceful regions with five of the six states in the top 10 (Connecticut was not).

While Louisiana was the least peaceful, it was joined at the bottom of the rankings by Tennessee, Nevada, Florida, Alabama, and Texas.

None of this means all of us are happy, healthy or even peaceful, or any better off than people in other states or counties. But it's interesting to see where Massachusetts ranks in some of these quality of life surveys.

Annual Town Meeting to tackle 22 articles

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Each year, Town Meeting convenes to discuss and vote on a host of issues concerning the town. It is town meeting that has the ultimate say on how the town's money is spent. And it's at Annual Town Meeting where the town's budget for the coming fiscal year is front and center.

On Saturday morning, Town Meeting will convene at 9a.m. at the Cohasset High School gymnasium. The meeting will come to order once 100 voters have checked into the meeting.

Town Meeting will tackle a variety of issues – there are a total of 22 articles on the warrant – from a septic loan program to eliminating a requirement to mail the warrant for special town meetings to the wind turbine zoning bylaw.

This year's Annual Town Meeting is one of the latest Cohasset has had. Typically the town meeting is held in late March. The extra month gave town officials more time to develop the budget and vet issues.

"(The extra month) gave us the time we needed to address the financial issues, especially as an interim town manager," said Steve Lombard. "There's no way we could have had the budget ready for the end of March."

On Saturday, he will present a town budget that is within the confines of Proposition 2-1/2 and the water and sewer enterprise funds are coming forward with balanced budgets, without the need for a rate increase request.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said there shouldn't be a problem gathering a quorum for Saturday's meeting.

"I hope our recent (financial) crisis has impressed on people how important it is to actively participate in their government," Quigley said.

She predicts the four zoning articles that appear as the final articles of the warrant will generate the most discussion from the floor of town meeting. But, there could be some surprises as well.

"It's usually the articles you think will pass easily that generate the most discussion," Quigley said.

Town Moderator Dan Evans will oversee the town meeting. Articles will be taken up in the order they appear in the warrant. Warrants were mailed out to households last week and extras will be available on Saturday. Each voter will also receive a printed copy of the Town Manager's recommended motions on each of the articles.

Each article will be taken up one at a time, a motion will be made, and votes will typically be taken on a voice basis.

Article 1 requests Town Meeting to accept the reports of the Town Officers that are printed in the Annual Town Report for calendar year 2010. Copies are available in the Town Clerk's office and the Office of the Board of Selectmen.

Article 2 is an opportunity for town boards and committees to present a report directly to the voters at Town Meeting. As of the printing of the Town Warrant, the Board of Selectmen did not request any specific reports. Any recommended reports will take place at the Annual Town Meeting.

The town operating budget will be reviewed in Article 3. The fiscal 2012 budget includes a tax levy is $935,000 more than the current fiscal year and an estimated 10 percent reduction in state aid. Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard said the projections for fiscal 2012 are conservative and spending for the town departments reflects these conservative numbers.

This is the fifth consecutive year with a "no override" budget. Lombard is recommending an operating budget (not including water and sewer enterprise funds) of $33,379,854, which is an increase of $713,919, or 2.2 percent over fiscal 2011.

On Wednesday night, the School Committee rescinded their vote on a $15.732 million budget, and voted for the town manager's recommended budget of $15,402,478, a 2.4 percent increase, $368,000 over the fiscal 2011 (see related story).

Article 4 requests town meeting to fund the fiscal 2012 cost items of a collective bargaining agreement. One-year extensions of existing contracts with cost of living increases are asked for approval. The town has come to agreement with the unions representing the firefighters, library employees, clerical employees and police lieutenants. The Board of Selectmen recommends approval of this article 4-1.

As part of a continuing effort to build the town's capital stabilization fund (established at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting), Town Meeting is requested in Article 5 to transfer $480,000 of declining debt service on previously financed capital projects and $33,876 unexpended balances for prior capital projects Recommended for approval to Town Meeting unanimously by both the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee.

Capital improvement budget typically stirs up debate on the floor of Town Meeting. This time around, there is $212,400 of Capital Budget Committee recommended expenditures. In Article 6, seven expenditures are recommended: kitchen equipment for the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools ($15,000), computer server for regional dispatch center for the fire department ($10,000), resurfacing of the Milliken Field tennis courts and repair of retaining wall from the recreation department ($25,000), for the police department, jail cell upgrade ($20,000) and a marked cruiser ($31,000), new accounting software for town hall ($91,400) and permitting, engineering for Bound Brook dam/culvert repair ($20,000).

Next up is another "suitcase" article with several recommendations from the Community Preservation Committee. There are four recommendations for expenditures packed into Article 7. First, $80,000 for the continued restoration of the town's vital records and archives put forth by the Town Clerk's Office. A new shelving system for the archives is also included in this item. Second is a $109,000 (plus a $50,000 contingency amount) allocation to restore the library's roof. Third, a recommendation to set aside $80,000 to pay back an outstanding loan for open space purchased to protect the watershed when it comes due in 2013. Fourth, is a related recommendation to pay the debt service due this year on the open space purchase in the amount of $35,839.

Article 8 is to authorize the paying of bills incurred by the town in previous fiscal years. There are $34,063 in unpaid bills left over from fiscal 2010.

Article 9 authorizes the Selectmen to release easements for properties on which town-owned grinder pumps are located. The release is recommended where the property owners choose not to participate in the town-owned grinder pump maintenance program.

Article 10 requests a supplemental appropriation for an underfunded fiscal 2011 budget line item. Approval of the article authorizes a transfer of $52,154.99 from free cash to the police department's overtime budget.

Article 11 is in regard to a fiscal 2011 accounting issue: the debt service expenses for the sewer enterprise fund were overestimated and general expenses related to the purchase of grinder pumps were underestimated. This article requests a re-allocation of funds: $275,000 from the sewer retained earnings line item and $200,000 from the debt service line item (a total of $475,000) to the fiscal 2011 general expenses.

Article 12 authorizes a transfer into the post-retirement health insurance liability stabilization fund, but will likely be indefinitely postponed at this year's town meeting. The article is on the warrant largely as a placeholder to keep the issue in the minds of voters, as there is no money to transfer into the stabilization fund.

The next article (Article 13) contains two amendments to tax exemption for seniors. The first allows the Board of Assessors to increase all exemptions granted in the Town of Cohasset by 100 percent. The second section is allows the Board of Assessors to grant an additional increase of 100 percent to applicant qualifying under a state Clause 41C.

Article 14 authorizes a $4,500 transfer from the fiscal year 2008 Assessor's Overlay to the fiscal 2009 Assessor's Overlay. The overlay funds are used to settle Appellate tax board decisions. According to Deputy Assessor Mary Quill there are two outstanding Appellate Tax Board settlements.

The Community Septic Program (Article 15) is almost assured to generate discussion on the floor of Town Meeting. The Board of Health wants to establish a loan program to offer homeowners with failed septic systems or those tying into town sewer a low interest loan. The article authorized the town to borrow $3 million from the state program, then reloan the money out on an as-needed basis. The loan is then paid back to the town through betterment assessments.

The Advisory Committee voted 5-2 in favor of the article, while the Board of Selectmen voted unanimously against it. The Capital Budget Committee, which did not review the article, is opposing the article as well on the grounds process was not followed. They feel the article should have come before them for review.

Article 16 authorizes the Board of Selectmen to enter into a lease agreement for $26,500 for up to three years with the South Shore Community Center to house the Senior Center. The Senior Center's lease with the South Shore Community Center is up this year.

Article 17 would allow the potential to hold Annual Town Meeting during the month of May when more financial information (in particular from the state) to be available for budgeting purposes.

The approval of Article 18 would get rid of the town bylaw making the sending of a Special Town Meeting warrant to every household in Cohasset a necessity. This could lead to savings in annual print and mailing costs.

The final four articles have to do with amendments to the zoning bylaw.

Article 19 is to amend the zoning map to expand the highway business district on Route 3A near the Scituate town line. The expansion will make the highway business district zone more uniform with the west side of Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Approval of the article will allow development of an indoor pool.

Article 20 makes amendments to the zoning bylaw definitions, creating a definition for permitted projections. This article will likely be indefinitely postponed, undergo further review and come back at a later town meeting.

Article 21 is the much talked about, long debated amendments to the wind energy conversion bylaw. The revised bylaw creates a lower maximum height requirement, increases setbacks, clarifies the noise regulations and adds shadow/flicker definition and requirements.

The final article – Article 22 – is a citizen's petition. A group of citizens are requesting an amendment to the zoning map to remove a parcel (8 James Lane) from the village business district and re-zone as residential district. The pertinent boards, Planning Board, Advisory Committee, Board of Selectmen, have all recommended disapproval. The boards feel what the article proposes is "spot zoning," which is illegal.

considered the program, but strong opposition from the Capital Budget Committee and others raised enough concern about the program for voters and the motion was defeated.

In the months leading up to Town Meeting the Board of Health did not make a presentation to the Capital Budget Committee. As the program involves encumbering the town's balance sheet with a $3 million loan the members of the CBC feel it should have come before them.

This lapse in process is the primary reason the Selectmen and the CBC are opposing the article.

At the Selectmen's meeting Tuesday, the conversation got heated on several occasions as the Board of Health and Capital Budget Committee each explained their point of view.

"The program itself might have great merit, but we wouldn't know, it hasn't been presented to us," said Steve Gaumer, chairman of the CBC. "I encourage a deferral to Special Town Meeting (in November). It it's risk-free, it will fly. If it is not risk-free there might be ways to mitigate it."

Board of Health chairman Peggy Chapman said she wanted to meet with the CBC, but "were denied any access after March." Two planned meetings in February fell through, one due to snow and one due to lack of Board of Health availability. The CBC set strict deadlines for submissions to give themselves time to thoroughly review and vet the proposals from all town departments, Gaumer said. By early March, he didn't feel they had enough time left to full vet the article on top of everything else being vetted.

"Three million dollars encumbering the ton's balance sheet deserves a fair and full appraisal," Gaumer said.

At the meeting, Advisory Committee member Chartis Tebbetts said her support for the article came down, in part, to the urgent need for the program. The Little Harbor sewer district homeowners are required to hook up to town sewer by 2012 and there has been no opportunity for those with septic systems to get assistance from the town.

"Not offering this program is not serving the citizens," Tebbetts said. "I am concerned about the process, but I balanced that with the importance of the program and what was in the best interest of the community."

Peter DeCaprio, a member of the CBC, was concerned the program would open the town up to financial risk and the town would not be first in line for re-payment if the homeowner defaulted on this loan.

The Selectmen all pointed to the lapse in process – and the need for more review in their comments.

"This could be a good program. What makes it stronger is the process before town meeting. The problem is tonight we're going around in circles," said Selectman Fred Koed.

Selectman Leland Jenkins said the CBC has done a fantastic job for this town and "to cut them out at this time is wrong."

Selectman Paul Carlson said he was sympathetic to those who could really use the loan program because they don't have the money to hook into the sewer system. But, given the issues, couldn't put his support behind the article

"On balance, I think it better serves everybody if we postpone this article," Carlson said.

The Selectmen voted 5-0 to recommend disapproval of the article to Town Meeting.

Voters at Town Meeting will have the final say on the program on Saturday.

About the Septic Assistance Program

The Community Septic Management Program is a state-run program. It is provided to towns through a state revolving fund loan at zero percent interest. Through an application process, the town then re-loans the money out to homeowners at a 2 percent interest rate. The homeowners then pay back the loan over 20 years.

The warrant article requests voters to authorize the town in joining the state's Community Septic program and to authorizes the borrowing of $3 million for the revolving loan.

The loans can be used for the repair, replacement or upgrade of a failed on-site system. On-site sewage disposal systems options include conventional septic systems (Title 5), innovative/alternative systems and connections to an existing sewer, if available. There are more than 250 homes in the Little Harbor sewer district that still need to tie-in.

Homeowners apply for the betterment loan and it is doled out on a first come, first serve basis. There is no credit check, although the applicant must be up to date on property taxes. The program cannot be applied for retroactively.

Question of the Week

Candidates for Selectman were asked the following question. Responses were limited to 250 words.

In 2010 an independent auditor completed a financial and operational audit of the water and sewer departments. The audit shed light on the issues that led to the financial crisis in fiscal 2010. The auditor made recommendations for change within town government that in his opinion would help get the enterprise funds back in order. Town officials have only recently begun the discussion on how — and if — to make changes. What changes, if any, do you think should be made in town government to ensure the town does not end up in the same place again?

SELECTMAN/ Fred Koed

The Cohasset financial crisis occurred because the audit and oversight systems at town hall broke down. As a selectman, I take responsibility for not asking enough questions of the one person our town governing act empowers me to ask: the town manager.

We need to fix the town's audit and control systems. I will continue to demand that we do just that. Our new town manger has to be a professional who can implement and oversee these new systems.

The audit Report found that water department expenditures were poorly tracked at town hall. "The former Finance Director explained that an attempt was made to keep track of the projects by funding source," writes the Report's author (pg 36) "but that he gave up after a while because there were so many misclassifications in invoices."

Cohasset needs more openness and transparency in government, not less. Abolishing two elected boards, the Sewer and Water Commissions, will remove direct public oversight of these multi-million dollar operations.

In reviewing the Report, Sewer Commissioner John Beck wrote, "Rather than tackle performance issues head on, the audit recommendation took the easy way out: if you have performance issues, re-organize and the problems will go away."

Abolishing elected boards effectively gives policy making to a superintendent reporting to the town manager. Do we forget the last crisis in town government arose when a town manager took on policy roles?

We need to be honest enough to fix the actual problems that occurred.

SELECTMAN/ Karen Quigley

The audit revealed a systemic breakdown in the way we conduct the Town's business. Reform in the finance department is taking place: reinstating municipal finance law and general accounting procedures, reorganizing the distribution of responsibilities and upgrading the accounting software.

What remains is reform in the structure and operation of our utilities: water, sewer, DPW and facility management. This is neither a witch-hunt nor a condemnation. It's a fact that the present operational structure is not working in the Town's best interests.

What's missing is a qualified, full-time agent of the Town who has the engineering and management experience to interface with and supervise the consulting engineers, plant managers, contractors and vendors; a Town employee, a department head, a supervisor with budgetary accountability who reports directly to the Town Manager and Finance Director.

This structure exists in many municipalities and works well. Why is Cohasset different? It isn't. We can continue to operate within our comfort zone or we can show leadership to ensure Cohasset's future rests on solid management practices. Change for change sake is of no value. Adapting to changing circumstances is essential to success.

Also vital is a mindset change in our Town leadership: we must exercise our oversight responsibilities and be actively involved in the business of Cohasset.

It's imperative that reform happen — sooner rather than later. The time for talk is over. The time for action is now.

SELECTMAN/ Mary Snow

This is the question that brought me into the race for a seat on the Board of Selectmen. There were many people blamed for this fiscal fiasco of which not all were guilty. I as well as others went to the former town manager with concerns about the way monies were being spent and nothing was done. No accountability. I have always been in favor of changes to the governance of both the Water/Sewer Departments. Everyone has their own opinion on what and when those changes should be made but I can only offer my mine.

In my 22 years of experience working for a "public utility' department I can tell you that there has to be "one" person who takes on the responsibility of the day-to-day governance of town departments. One person who can and should be held accountable for all water/sewer matters. All other departments have them and so should the Water/Sewer Departments. This person needs to have experience in both the water and sewer industries as well as an engineering degree. The money that the town pays this person will be well spent because of the reduced need for outside engineering consultants which in turn should pay for this position. I am not in favor of having part-time commissioners or consultants do this job. The residents deserve accountability that they can only get from a full-time Water/Sewer Superintendent and a Town Manager with fiscal control. We should the heed auditors' recommendations.

SELECTMAN/ Diane Kennedy

An audit of the water and sewer departments was completed in January and concluded that there were serious deficiencies in the financial management systems of Cohasset. Positive first steps have already been taken to improve the finance department, including hiring a new director of finance, adopting a purchase order system, and submitting a capital budget request for financial management software.

There is no question that we need to figure out how to do business differently. Within the next few months, in conjunction with the hiring of a new Town Manager, we must have meetings of the various boards and committees (Selectmen, Advisory and Capital Budget, water, sewer, etc.), and interested citizens to discuss what is needed, ask questions, research how other communities are staffed (particularly coastal communities), and create either a new town position or a restructuring of existing town positions.

We need to ask questions: Do we need an engineer or an additional finance person to work with the enterprise funds and other departments with large projects? Are there people already employed by the town who could perform the desired functions? How will we pay for this? There are so many specialized engineering issues in town that it is unlikely we will be able to do away with outside consultants. Once we determine what we need, the new Town Manager can bring his/her experiences and ideas to the conversation. The process needs to be collaborative, efficient and result in a decisive, timely action that benefits the town.

SPECIALTY CAMPS & CAMPS FOR SPECIAL POPULATIONS: (PART 1)
THE CAMP EXPERIENCE IS SPECIAL! BUT, NOTE WHAT THE WORD "SPECIAL" MEANS AT CAMP

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

Camp programs are typically designed with a target group in mind. For certain groups, knowledge of how to serve that particular population makes or breaks the camp experience; and it can be the difference between getting to go to summer camp and having to miss out. From serving campers who desire or require a specialized camp setting (a medical or developmental special need, a passion, aptitude, interest and skill level in a particular program area, or those who share a certain religion or lifestyle – there are camps out there that employ staff members with knowledge, training and expertise in the specialty area. These camps are located in all kinds of surroundings – rural, suburban and urban. And they are owned and operated by nonprofit organizations, independent individuals or families, religious and cultural organizations, and an array of other organized groups. Each is a community where the specialty or the special population is such a focus, the entire camp experience is organized around it! The specialty is at the heart of the camp community and the camp exists because of the specialty.

Camps for Special Populations – Because everyone deserves the opportunity to experience a summer at camp, there are many camps in the region which are equipped to serve people with special needs. Sometimes these campers can be mainstreamed at camp as they are at school, and sometimes camps are solely dedicated to serving campers with particular needs and challenges. Medical conditions like cancer and diabetes; developmental issues such as autism and down syndrome; social/emotional challenges like ADHD or grief (particularly the loss of a parent); and physical/mobility challenges, like cerebral palsy and spina bifida are only some of the special needs which. Have camp programs dedicated solely to a particular population. There are some general camps for children with special needs that serve several different populations simultaneously, while there are others that offer sessions dedicated to one special need at a time.

Fresh look for Our World

Mothers' Council harnesses volunteers, local businesses

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

An energetic group of mothers is injecting the Our World Global Discovery Museum with new life and activity.

Since October a Mothers' Council has enlisted help from the community and local business to rejuvenate the museum. Their goal is to create a friendly, interactive discovery environment geared toward young children and families.

"We want to make the museum a friendly space with developmentally appropriate play and toys," said Mothers' Council director Megan Whoriskey.

The 7,500 square foot two-story museum has three main rooms, each targeted toward different ages and interests, is located at 100 Sohier Street, in the rear of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The Children's Global Discovery Museum, Inc. was formally organized in 2001 as a non-profit organization to create educational awareness. Cohasset residents Mary Larson and Leah Taylor Roy were the founders and remain involved to this day.

The focus of the museum is on promoting a child's learning of their place in the greater world.

When the Mothers' Council formed with five Cohasset mothers (all with children under age five) their first effort was to give the toddler room a fresh look.

"Everybody we talked to was on board. They really wanted this for the kids," said Mothers' Council member Leslie Sullivan. They began approaching local businesses, family and friends.

Aubuchon Hardware donated the paint and painters to give the room a bright and clean base. Cohasset High School art students volunteered to paint murals on the walls (they are almost complete). Magic Bean, a children's toy shop in Hingham, and Harbor Light Toys in Scituate donated age-appropriate toys. Lemon Lime Aveda salon hosted a fundraising event to raise money to purchase new toys and supplies.

"The ball really started rolling," Whoriskey said. "The support from the community has been overwhelming."

Now the Mothers' Council has developed a greater mission.

"Our mission is to redefine and redesign the Museum with parents and children in mind. We have come together to recreate an already great museum and play space to make it even better," Whoriskey said.

As mothers, the council understood there was a lot available in the local community for pre-school and school-age kids, but there wasn't a space dedicated to the 0-3 kids. The goal with the toddler room was to create that space.

This week, with the expertise and donated manpower of Magner Construction, imagination stations were scheduled to be built in the toddler room. The imagination stations will have developmentally appropriate toys located in themed partitioned areas. There will be an area for kitchen play, fix-it shop, transportation, and a nursery, among others.

Membership, visitors, and program participants draw from across the South Shore, there are a few families from Hanover and Weymouth in addition to strong representative groups from Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate, Hingham and, yes, Cohasset, too. About 100 families are members of the museum.

Alexa Cohen, 5, makes a couple of good impressions with her hand prints.

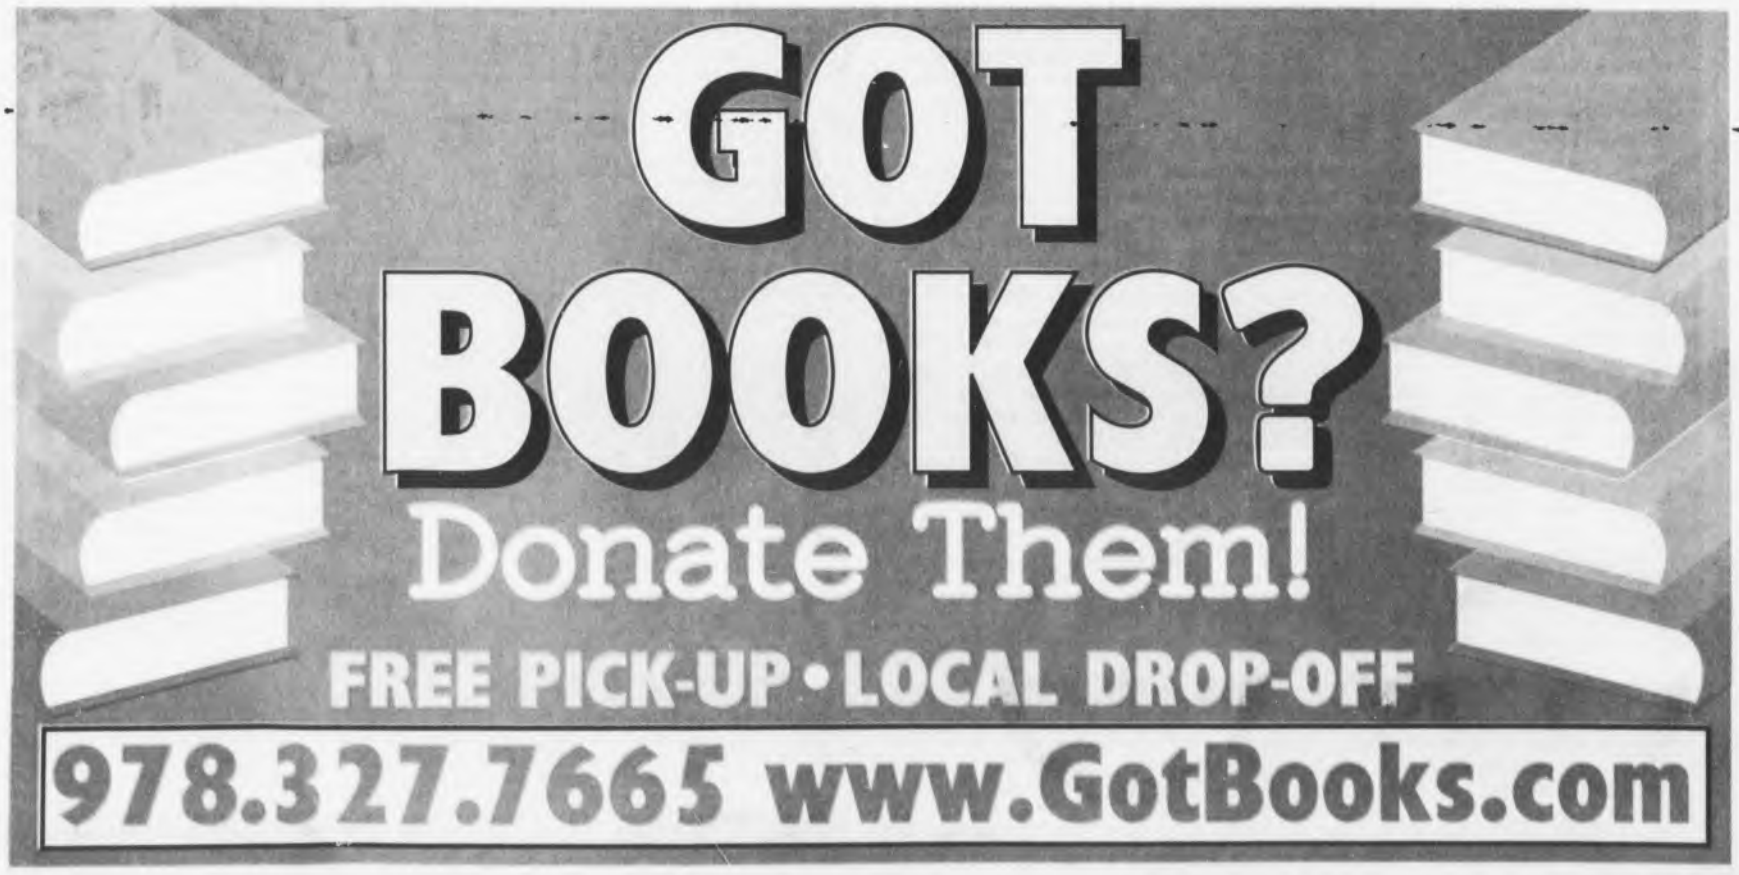
The Museum geared toward ages 1 through 8 as an educational and social learning center. In addition to renovated toddler room, there is a new indoor ship, a theatre area and the outdoor playground.

Being a member of the museum has an added bonus — the membership is reciprocated at hundreds of other children's museums across the country. Non-members are welcome; the cost is $7 per child per day. Many come as a family on the weekend (there are open hours on select Saturdays from 9:30a.m. to noon) and many use the space as a play date spot. There is a small kitchen available so some families bring lunch and play. The museum is open regularly Tuesday through Friday from 10a.m. to 5p.m.

One of the challenges the council is facing head on is raising awareness of Our World's presence in the community.

"We need more people in the community to be aware of this resource," said Anne Gallagher, Mothers' Council member. They were heartened when about 50 families from all over came out to an open house event earlier this month. One of their next projects is to erect a sign to let passersby know of the museum.

"This is great place to meet other mothers in the community and find other children for your kids to play with," Sarah Dowden, a member of the Mothers' Council, said. "It's also a chance for mothers to feel like they are giving back to the community."



Since the Mothers' Council's inception they have doubled in size and are still looking for more members.

"It's a fun group to be a part of," Whoriskey said.

Looking ahead to the summer, Our World hopes to re-vamp its programming to offer cultural programs on music, dance, literature, language that are age-appropriate.

"We want to have more structured programs with cultural connections," Whoriskey said. They are currently looking for residents with particular talents or skills willing to teach programs at the museum.

Visit Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum off Sohier Street, at the rear of the library, www.ourworldcgdm.org, or call 781-383-3198, or email: info@ourworldcgdm.org.

SciCoh to battle concussions

Football program proactive on issue

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Tuesday night, Scituate Youth Lacrosse hosted a seminar about concussions that was open to parents and athletes of youngsters in not just lacrosse, but all sports.

There was quite a bit of interest from other sports, including Scituate-Cohasset Youth Football and Cheerleading, which has been working on a program of its own for more than a year.

The SciCoh's program is multi-faceted, based around a combination of education, coaching and new gear phased in over the next few seasons.

SciCoh board president Chris Comeau got things moving in 2010, according to board member Ken Kelly, who took a few minutes to talk about some of the work that has been done.

"Chris decided in 2010 decided to start to look at policies and equipment and ways to ensure athletes are safe."

One of the first things the league did was communicate with Dr. Janet Kent, who runs the Sports Concussion Clinic at South Shore Hospital, one of the top places for ImPact baseline testing that is recommended.

They also consulted Jeannine Donato, RN of A Head of the Game, and others have provided great feedback on how progressive our program has been on the issue of concussions in youth sports.

They also are working with Dr. David Morin of Scituate Pediatrics.

The 2011 season will see changes for coaches and players.

It all starts with a three-pronged attack that aims to change perceptions of concussions.

Numbers add up

Skippers have biggest turnout in years

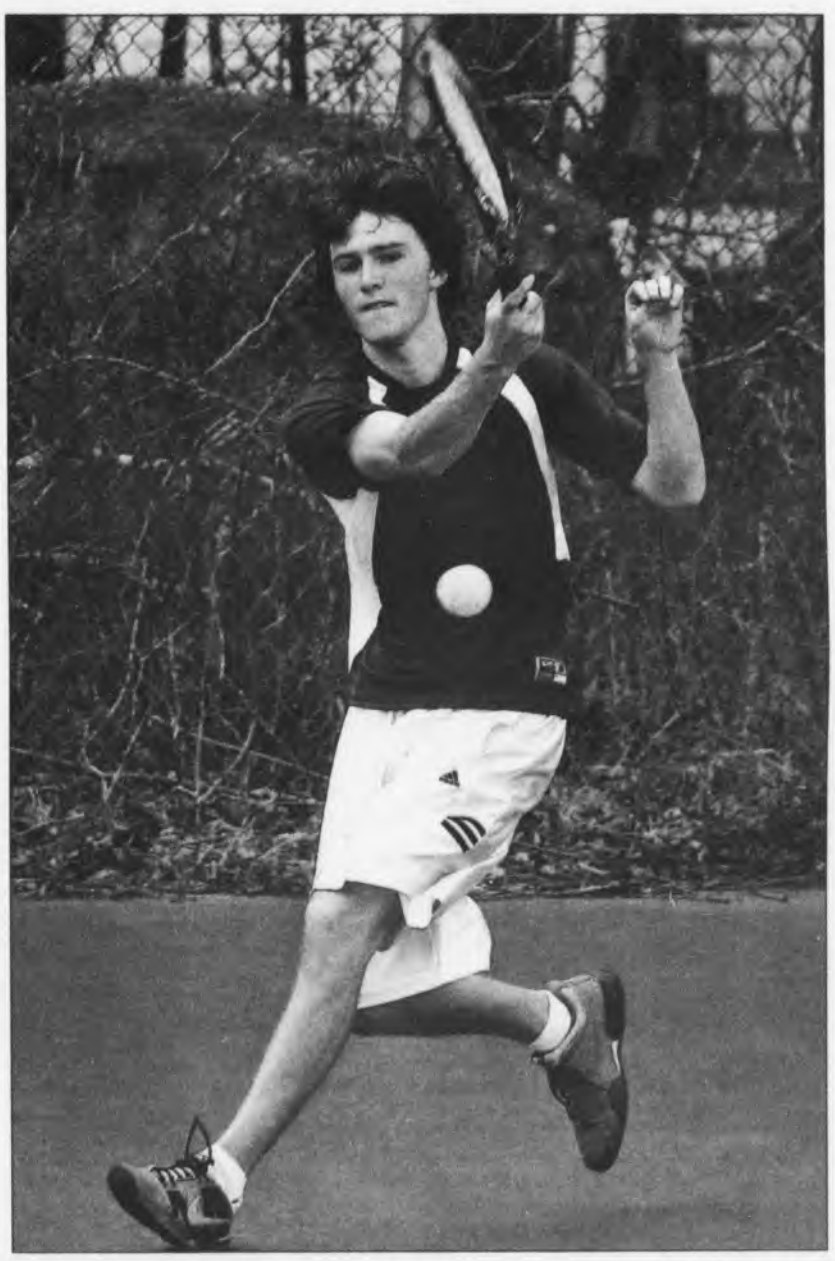
By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset boys tennis coach Brian Hill will quickly admit that this season isn't necessarily going to be easy for his Skippers.

He doesn't mind.

With talented senior leadership, including Robbie Hill and Travers Craven, a couple of excellent freshmen and the most players he's had in his five years coaching, Hill has what it takes to win matches.

The hard part this season is the competition.



Among Cohasset's opponents this season are defending Div. 1 State Champion Hingham, who beat the Skippers 4-1 on Wednesday afternoon, Duxbury and league rivals Harwich and Norwell, who shared the South Shore League title with Cohasset last season.

Trevor Tedeschi was Cohasset's winner in the Hingham match, scoring a 6-4, 6-7, 7-6 victory at third singles.

"Hingham is a good team," Hill said. "We did a good job. Robbie played valiantly against their No. 1 (Woody Roman). He lost 7-5, 6-4."

Craven lost 6-3, 6-4 to Rohan Rau. Last week, Cohasset lost a tough one against Norwell, 3-2.

Skippers survive Mashpee

Bats come alive in time for win

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Slow starts happen, but the great teams are the ones who find ways to overcome.

That is what happened to the Cohasset baseball team on Tuesday night as they fell behind early, but overcame early trouble in a 7-3 win over Mashpee at home.

The Skippers improved to 5-2 with the win, 5-0 in the South Shore League, and have a big stretch of games coming up.

Cohasset played Scituate yesterday in a makeup game, and then has league foes Rockland, Carver and Abington on the road.

"I don't know if it would break us," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said when asked how important the stretch is. "It could make it for us if we get a sweep. It would put us in the driver's seat if we go unscathed. If that happened, the worst that could happen is that we would split with everybody."

Six unanswered goals propel Lady Skippers

By Susan N. Biddle

After its biggest win in years – a 15-13 upset of neighboring Hingham – the Cohasset girls had to wait through 13 days and school vacation before taking the field again. The biggest challenge in its first game back on the field might have been complacency and lethargy, and while the Cohasset team dominated its return to the field against Martha's Vineyard, it was not without a little bit of both conditions.

In all four of its games this season, the Skippers had jumped out to an early advantage, and Martha's Vineyard was perhaps the hottest start of all. Senior Kelsey Erler scored four times as the team raced out to an 8-2 lead just 11:19 into the first half of what turned into a 26-16 win.

Fourth seeds take titles

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

A pair of fourth-seeded teams claimed the Winter Season championships in the South Coastal Men's Hockey League.

The fourth-seeded Black Hawks jumped out to a 3-0 first period lead and held on for a 4-2 win over the second-seeded Canadiens in the Classics Div. It was the second title for the Black Hawks and their first since the fall of 2000.

Bruce Humfreys scored two goals and goalie Jack Molla made some big saves for the Black Hawks in the win.

Abington's Jim Polito and Pembroke's Pat Mulkern were the other goal scorers for the Hawks.

John MacLellan of Pembroke had a goal and assist and Glenn Harnisch of Marshfield had a goal for the Canadiens.

The Crusaders, who won one game during the Fall Season came back in the Winter Season and claimed the fourth and final playoff spot.

They defeated the top-seeded Sharks in the semifinals and then held off the third-seeded Saints by a 4-3 score in the Legends Div. championship game. It was the third title for the Crusaders in the Legends, which was formed in 2007.

Mike Simon scored two third period goals, both set up by Scott Mondeau to give the Crusaders a 4-1 lead as they hung on for the win.

Paul Murphy and Jonathan Graham both scored goals for the Saints in the third period to bring them to within one, 4-3, but they could never get the tying goals.

Jim Callahan and Alan Costa also scored for the Crusaders, who had a 2-0 lead in the second period, but Mike Ryan scored off a feed by Bill Spillane on a 2-on-1 rush to bring the Saints to within one, 2-1.

The Fall Season championship games were postponed due to a bad snowstorm and could not be reschedule until Sunday. The Stingers will play the Toros in the Legends Div. Final at 7:40 P.M., while the Rangers will face the Canadiens in the Classics Div. Final at 8:50 P.M. Both games will be at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

BAY STATE GAMES

Registration open for 2011 Summer Games

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation is pleased to announce that registration for the 2011 Bay State Summer Games is now open. The annual Olympic-style amateur sports festival features 26 sports for athletes of all ages and ability levels.

"The Bay State Games has become an annual tradition in the commonwealth thanks to the quarter of a million participants who have competed over the last three decades," explained executive director Kevin Cummings.

"From grass roots participants to future and current Olympians, the Bay State Games offers the opportunity for athletes of all ages and abilities to showcase their talents in a wide variety of sports.

"As we celebrate our 30th year of producing the Summer Games, we would like to thank not only the participants but the thousand of coaches, officials and event organizers who have volunteered their time to make the event a success."

The 2011 Bay State Summer Games is scheduled for July 5-24 with regional qualifiers and tryouts throughout the commonwealth in June.

Competitions will be hosted by top notch sporting venues including Bentley University, Harvard University, Emmanuel College, Reggie Lewis Track and Athletic Center, University of Massachusetts Boston, Worcester State University and the New England Sports Center.

Competitions are offered in archery, badminton, baseball, basketball, baton twirling, diving, fencing, field hockey, ice hockey, judo, juniors basketball, lacrosse, pistol shooting, rifle shooting, soccer, softball, swimming, synchronized swimming, table tennis, track and field, trap shooting, volleyball, weight-lifting, wrestling, 6vs6 field hockey and 7vs7 soccer. The Bay State Games also has an initiative which rewards high schools across the commonwealth for their students' participation in the Summer Games.

The High School Spirit program was created to recognize those schools that have the highest number of athletes in the 2011 Summer and Winter Games.

Every high school in Massachusetts is eligible to win a portion of the $5,200 in grants that will be awarded.

"There has been a stigma on head injuries," Kelly said. "We want to destigmatize it. It used to be kids were taught to play through pain. Now, if you get your bell rung, we want kids to tell us about it and create a safe place for them to talk about it."

That starts with education.

From the beginning of practice, the SciCoh board will introduce their Concussion Education Program and explain resources available, including recommended baseline testing, the roles of players, cheerleaders, families and physicians in the prevention and recognition and response to concussions.

The two biggest parts of prevention include coaching and equipment.

With coaching, it comes down to technique.

"We teach how to lead with the shoulder on tackles and keep the head up," Kelly said. "We talk about the risks of improper technique like going into a tackle with the head down. We're fortunate to have a lot of assistant coaches and we videotape all our games. We are able to isolate tackling issues on the practice field. The kids get the message pretty good."

Coaches, board members and assistant coaches will be required to follow the Heads Up Concussion in Youth Sports training, which teaches all aspects of the injury including recognition and response, and pass a test on all aspects of concussions.

The other big development is new helmets.

SciCoh will be phasing in new Xenith helmets, which have been designed with new technology to help prevent concussions.

The helmets have adaptive head production that works by adapting to the energy and direction of hits and to reduce sudden impact of the head during impacts, helping over a long term as well.

"We did research as a board and based on discussions with Dr. Kent, we felt it was technology worth exploring," Kelly said. "We knew this wsn't something we could just throw money at. We need to find a way to mitigate the problem."

Kelly said Dr. Kent's own children use the Xenith helmets, and according to information available on the helmets, several colleges are already using them. NFL teams have also requested them for mini camps.

That doesn't mean that the current Riddell helmets aren't safe.

"The Riddell helmets are certified and safe," Kelly said. "We have no safety issues with the current helmets."

Kelly said Duxbury has been using Xenith helmets with good results.

Duxbury had a seminar on concussions not too long ago.

When concussions do happen, the league wants to be in touch with families, schools and physicians to know when a player is safe for return.

"We will talk to school nurses," Kelly said. "We'll communicate with them at the high school and middle school levels and if someone isn't ready to go back to class, they're not ready to play."

Kelly made it clear that the league wasn't just reacting to what others have been doing.

"We teach how to lead with the shoulder on tackles and keep the head up. We talk about the risks of improper technique like going into a tackle with the head down. The kids get the message pretty good."

Scituate-Cohasset Youth Football and Cheerleading board member Ken Kelly

"We've been working on this for a long time," he said. "We've made a lot of progress. I think we're ahead of most everybody when it comes to this issue. Our goal with the formal program is to ensure that all of our athletes are safe."

BASEBALL

As of Tuesday, Abington was 6-0.

In the Mashpee game, Cohasset fell behind 2-0 in the first inning and pitcher Drew Cobin was looking a bit shaky, according to Afanasiw.

"Mashpee had the bases loaded with no outs in the first," he said. "We got out of it only giving up two runs. After the shaky first inning Drew settled down. He threw 41 pitches through two innings. After that he threw 70 more. He was about 110 pitches on the day. He was economical.

"We got one person on in the first. We tied it up in the second inning and the second time through the order the bats came around."

Cobin also added two hits including an RBI double.

Connor Goetz had a big game for Cohasset, going 2 for 2 with a pair of doubles, two walks and 4 RBI.

Goetz, a sophomore catcher, has five hits in his past two games.

Anders Goetz chipped in a two-run triple and Jeff Cavanaro added a double. Chris Murphy singled for the Skippers.

Afanasiw likes the way his team has been approaching their hitting.

"Every game we're facing team's No. 1 pitchers," he said. "Our hitters are doing a good job adjusting. They're finding release points and getting their timing. It's almost professional the way the kids have handled themselves at the plate."

Afanasiw said he's got two of his starting nine hitting over .500, and seven are above the .300 mark.

"We're getting to where we left off last year," he said. "But some kids still haven't reached their potential yet. We have a good hitting team."

Afanasiw said he'll take it.

"I love a 1-0 shutout," he said. "But it's nice to know we can put up runs if we need to against quality pitching."

Cohasset did hit a roadblock over the vacation week with a 10-5 loss to Cardinal Spellman.

They'll have a chance to get even on Saturday in an 11 a.m. road game.

Scituate was Cohasset's other loss.

With the early 8-2 lead, that's when the complacency seemed to take over, and the visiting Vineyarders staged a steady comeback, scoring the next five goals. When Cohasset answered with two quick goals in the waning moments of the half, Martha's Vineyard raced back and scored with just seconds in the half, making the score 10-8 at the break.

We started today with vibrant intensity, but we learned that the score can change quickly and we have to play our top game for 50 minutes," said Mary Ellen O'Neill, Cohasset's coach. "Our new goal is to start strong and finish even stronger."

Sophomore midfielder Hope Kissick scored the first two goals of the second half as the Skippers got off to another hot start, extending their lead to 15-11 with 17:50 remaining in the game. The pesky visitors would not fold however, netting two quick scores and answering Kissick's third goal of the half in just 27 seconds to close the gap to 16-14.

If there was a time when lethargy might have taken over, this was the point, but instead Cohasset responded with six unanswered scores to put the game away. Up 22-14, Cohasset scored two for every one the Vineyard team could muster, finishing the game up 26-16.

Erler and Kissick both netted eight goals in the win, with Erler adding two assists. Whitney Jaffe scored six goals and added five assists, as the three high scorers combined for more points than the entire Martha's Vineyard team on the day.

Kristen Alexander scored two goals with an assist, freshman Katherine Dunn had a goal and three assists, freshman Lexa Grasz added a goal and two assists. Sage Stebbins had two assists and Angela Cipolla and Olivia Murphy had one assist each as Cohasset registered 17 helpers on its 26 scores, a sign of the ball movement that has been a strong characteristic of the team thus far this season.

"The attack proved today that they know how to come alive when they need to," O'Neill said. "It was wonderful to see the seamless connections made by many different player combinations."

Junior goalie Stephanie Brierley notched 12 saves on the afternoon, picking up her third win of the season.

The Skippers, now 3-1, return to the field on Friday night hosting Falmouth, and then have a busy first week of May, facing off against Mashpee, Quincy, Duxbury and North Quincy in a span of five days.

TENNIS

"It was a nail-biter," Hill said about the Norwell match. "We were up 5-3 in the third set at second doubles. It came down to the last match. We have them back in a couple of weeks."

In other recent action, Cohasset shut out Mashpee and then beat Harwich 4-1 at Harwich.

The season had an interesting start.

"It was a tough start with the weather," Hill said. "When we played Martha's Vineyard (March 31) it was really cold. After a few minutes it started to snow."

Robbie Hill and Craven are Cohasset's leaders.

"The strength of this team is the top of the lineup," Hill said. "Our one, two and three singles are very strong. We also have a few wildcard freshmen who have made the lineup."

After Hill and Craven, Cohasset has senior Will Choi and freshman Doug Fitzgerald at No. 3 singles.

Other players on the varsity roster are senior Garrett Canney, freshman Eric Weinstein, Justin Cobin, Nick Brown, Matt McCormack, Billy Curry, Colin Bell and Jack Thomae and Evan Ackley.

"Those kids are all doing really well for the program," Hill said.

Cohasset was at Scituate Thursday and hosts Rockland on Monday.

Driscoll scores six

Freshman attackman Dean Driscoll (Cohasset, MA) scored six goals, including the game winner with 2:29 left to play in regulation to lift the University of Massachusetts Boston men's lacrosse team over Curry College, 13-12, last Thursday afternoon.

With the game deadlocked at 12-12, the Beacons gained possession and successfully navigated the ball into the Colonels zone.

Hingham's Pat Driscoll was able to feed Dean with a pass from behind the net into the slot as the freshman did the rest, beating junior goalie Michael Hibbard up high for his sixth tally of the game to give UMB the 13-12 advantage.

COMMENTARY

Turbine issue deserves careful thought

CHARLES A. SAMUELSON

Editor's note: Mr. Samuelson is submitting this as a private citizen and not as a member of the Planning Board.

Once again, Cohasset is being asked to vote on whether or not we desire to host wind turbines in our Town. This time, the article before you at Saturday's Town Meeting is subtler, but just as effective. If passed, the changes to the wind turbine section of the Zoning Bylaw will make it more difficult, if not outright unlikely, for wind turbines to be constructed in Cohasset.

The Citizens of Cohasset have previously voted three times on the possibility of hosting wind turbines in Town. The existing wind turbine bylaw passed unanimously at Town Meeting. An attempt to place a moratorium on the construction of wind turbines was indefinitely postponed at a Special Town Meeting. In a non-binding referendum in the last general election (2008), Cohasset voted in favor of expanded construction of wind turbines in the Commonwealth by a 5 to 1 margin. 87 percent of the Town voted in that election.

The Commonwealth's wind energy Model Bylaw (http://www.mass.gov/Eoca/docs/doer/renew/model-allow-wind-by-permit.pdf) is an enabling bylaw seeking to promote construction of wind turbines. This directly contrasts with the language in the proposed changes to the Cohasset bylaw. The proposed changes differ significantly from the Model Bylaw in several ways:

1. The limits on height, noise, flicker and setback are more restrictive in the proposed Cohasset language.

2. Each of the sections in the state's Model Bylaw regarding height, noise, flicker and setback allow the local permitting authority (the Cohasset Planning Board) to evaluate the benefits versus the impact. The proposed Cohasset language places hard limits. It removes the ability for the Planning Board to use judgment and consider a specific application based on its merits rather than "one rule fits all."

3. The state's Model Bylaw enables the Planning Board to evaluate an application using the criteria "evidence a reasonable mind might accept as adequate." The proposed changes to the Cohasset bylaw raise the criteria to "beyond reasonable doubt." This is a very difficult, if not impossible, standard to meet for something that may exist in the future.

4. The state's Model Bylaw states that an application shall be approved if the applicant can show that the turbine's site is appropriate, the turbine does not present a serious hazard, the turbine is not expected to create a nuisance, and appropriate facilities are included for the turbine's operation.

Make no doubt about it. Wind turbines are huge. They do create some noise. They cause shadow flicker at some locations early and late in the day, under certain conditions of sunlight and wind direction. There are safety concerns. There are concerns about property values for residences in proximity to a turbine. There are also benefits. The obvious one is providing a clean energy source that decreases our dependence on fossil fuel from foreign sources. A local benefit is the contribution to Cohasset's revenue. For the pending turbine on Turkey Hill, the property taxes are estimated to be on the order of $75,000 annually. One of the conditions for its construction is negotiating a contract to provide electricity to the Town at a reduced rate. This could save the Town an additional several hundred thousand dollars annually in its electric bill.

There are improvements that can be made in the existing bylaw. All in all, it has been shown to be effective. The changes proposed for vote at Saturday's Town Meeting once again beg the question: Do we want to host wind turbines in Cohasset? At the very least we should be asking that question directly, not by conditioning wind turbines out of existence. The wind turbine article before the upcoming Town meeting should be postponed rather than become a fourth referendum on whether or not to have wind turbines at all.

Charles A. Samuelson lives at 6 Westgate Lane.

COMMENTARY

How did we get here?

LEONORA JENKINS

When I moved to Cohasset over 30 years ago in 1978 as a young mother with my first baby, the town debt was $3.7 million and there was surplus money in the water department.

In 1993 the Mariner carried the following articles.

• Health Insurance rates run wild by Jeff Cutler 1/21/93 – Stating 'we have absolutely no control on rates' the chairman of the insurance advisory committee told the selectmen the proposed budget was a sign of upcoming insurance rate increase. Sam Wakeman also predicted a 20 – 30 percent rate increase over the next couple years. Costs have gone up because of more family participation in the plan as opposed to single participants. The problem is state wide and he said that "we're just sitting on a powder-keg waiting for it to blow up." In the ensuing years Cohasset is one of few towns that has not gone to the 50/50 model with a selection of plans for employees through collective bargaining while renegotiating contracts. Taxpayers pay 72 percent of the employees longstanding $5 copay plan. If the employees paid even 10 percent more we would have a minimum of $425K annually to go back into schools, public safety, the seniors and payments towards the millions of our unfunded pensions and liabilities

• FY'94 marked year two of the quarterly tax bills. Even with the hassles and extra work the switch to quarterly bills had the town able to realize a savings of $23K. The voters approved the switch to this system at the 1992 ATM which has improved cash flow and saved on short term borrowing. (8/8/93) — Cohasset was last to jump on this bandwagon and they still do not send out the bills twice a year with 2 coupons as most other towns. It may seem a small savings but over the years it mounts up.

• Town Audit stirs water budget deficit debate – Auditor Antonio Roselli told selectmen that "if the water department were a company – it would be out of business" (Mary Ford , 8/19/93). — The auditor was again raising red flags about the current water dept. situation over the last six years in each management letter that were never viewed by the Selectmen and Advisory.

• Computer 'dinosaur' costs Cohasset taxpayers. Computer study member Rick Swanborg gave selectmen a detailed analysis of why the town's languishing in the computer dark ages costs the taxpayers big bucks. As an example, Swanborg noted that with the current system the assessors' office can't 'talk' easily with the treasurer/collector's office." (Mary Ford, 8/19/93) — We are in the same situation in 2011 and after all the updates since '93 the school dept. still refuses to interface their computer systems to the town.

• Advisory Board questions have rankled the school committee. 'I am troubled by some of these questions said school committee member Ralph Kidder, especially How are you using money for in-service education to improve curriculum . Do you have any hard data relating Cohasset school budgets and student achievement? (Sean Sweeney 11/25/93) — School committee members are still saying that if they had enough money that they could offer courses like AP Physics – I've been hearing this for over twenty years, how many generations have to go through the school before they do?

In the last 20 years we have witnessed those supposedly in the know heap accolades on managers who we have come to discover weren't doing their jobs. During this time residents who asked probing questions and suggested that the town and the schools should be run like a business were criticized, demonized and marginalized.

In 2010 the town woke up to discover a water department in crisis, a town-wide debt of $70 million, $37million due in unfunded pensions and benefits. It was recently discovered the floors in the state of the art $32 million high school renovation have been breaking apart for two years, and the new library $4.4 million renovation requiring a $600,000 new roof because the roof was never replaced as part of the renovation. These last two items, contrary to popular opinion have nothing to do with maintenance but rather to poor decisions, oversight and supervision. In other words we did not receive value for our dollars.

This is just the tip of how poorly Cohasset has been managed by well meaning volunteers who have virtually given the town away through abdicating their duties and poor contract negotiations.

As we approach the new fiscal year with more employee departures, we might want to look at the town differently. The Osgood principal is leaving to head a PreK – 5 school in Milton and we have a PhD at the Deer Hill who came to us from a school about twice the size. Since Osgood/Deer Hill was built as a campus we might just want to think about consolidating these positions and reallocating resources.

The recent departure of the building facilities manager leaves another vacancy. If we follow the lead of other well-organized towns, we might instead hire a town engineer who could oversee buildings, DPW, and be a liaison for the Water and Sewer commission.

Residents have suggested a myriad of ways throughout the last two decades to control spending and to institute policies and procedures that will offer efficiencies while maintaining services. Unfortunately to the taxpayers detriment these residents have been denigrated and ignored. Cohasset citizens have to decide if they want to just keep throwing money at the problems and still be in the same situation 20 years down the road with property taxes that few can afford.

Foreclosure workshops at Registry of Deeds

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell, in collaboration with Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore and the South Shore HOME Consortium, announces free foreclosure prevention counseling workshops. The workshops are available to all residents of Norfolk County. The schedule for these workshops follows:

Weymouth: Thursday, May 12, 5 to 9 p.m., McCulloch Building/Whipple Senior Center, 182 Green St., North Weymouth.

Braintree: Wednesday, June 8, 5 to 9 p.m., Cahill Auditorium, Braintree Town Hall, One John F. Kennedy Memorial Drive.

O'Donnell said, "Homeowners are struggling. There were 46 percent more foreclosures in 2010 than in 2009 in Norfolk County. These numbers do not capture the tragic stories behind the numbers. Homeowners should take advantage of the assistance and counseling opportunities that are out there."

For more information on Neighborhood Housing Services' foreclosure prevention workshops, visit www.neighborhoodhousing.org or call 508-587-0950.

GIMME SHELTER

Carlos is on the shy side

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Carlos, a buff colored short hair domestic male. He is on the shy side but is slowly becoming friendly. He loves to play and just recently will sit in his bed and let HSAR pet him. His sister, Carlita is much friendlier and insists that they have to be adopted together. HSAR did make an attempt to separate them, but they both put up such a fuss that they couldn't bear to do it. If anyone has room in their home and in their hearts to give these two beautiful cats a home, they will reward you with their antics. They are just about a year old and quite ready for a home. Please check them out further on the HSAR website.

You can check out all of HSAR felines at our website www.hsar.org. HSAR has open hours on Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please call the shelter at 781 925 3121 and leave a message and Judy, the Adoption Coordinator will get back to you.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull, MA.; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045, email, hsar@verizon.net. The shelter offers a monthly low cost spay-neuter program. If interested, check out the website of call Mary at 781 925 3121.

HSAR thanks its dedicated volunteers, to those who give homes to our felines and the people who generously donate to their cause.

"If you've ever called the Developmental Medicine Center at Children's Hospital Boston and learned an appointment will be more than a year away, you know her time is in great demand. Now, we can benefit from her knowledge right here," says Diane Herth, Cohasset SEPAC president.

Schonwald is a pediatrician who specializes in developmental pediatrics. Her specialties are autism spectrum disorders, developmental and behavioral pediatrics, psychopharmacology and toilet training consultation.

CHS volunteers cleanup Bassing Beach

Staff photos/Chris Bernstein

On Earth Day, Friday, April 22, 35 student volunteers from Cohasset High School came out during the school vacation week to recognize the day with a cleanup of Bassing Beach and the shoreline between the Sailing Club and Parker Avenue. Many of the students were members of the boys and girls lacrosse and tennis teams.

The cleanup was organized by Cohasset Conservation Trust, owner of the Bassing Beach property. Cohasset Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons ferried the volunteers back and forth to Bassing, Cohasset Health Department inspector Tara Tradd provided safely equipment, and the Department of Public Works provided trash bags and trash pickup.

Students spent the morning collecting trash and debris, large and small, from bottles and cans, to tents, lobster pots, and even a gas grill. After collecting the debris on the shore, students helped load everything into the Harbormaster's boat and then unload everything on the town dock for pickup by the DPW.

This was the fourth annual Earth Day Cleanup in Cohasset. The Cohasset Conservation Trust would like to thank all student volunteers, adult supervisors and town departments for joining forces to make these local places cleaner and safer for all to enjoy this summer.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 2, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Temper your typical Aries urge to charge into a situation and demand answers. Instead, let the Lamb's gentler self emerge to deal with a problem that requires delicacy.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You are aware of what's going on, so continue to stand by your earlier decision, no matter how persuasive the counter-arguments might be. Money pressures will soon ease.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) By all means, have fun and enjoy your newly expanded social life. But don't forget that some people are depending on you to keep promises that are very important to them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You need to wait patiently for an answer to a workplace problem and not push for a decision. Remember: Time is on your side. A financial matter needs closer attention.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You now have information that can influence that decision you planned to make. But the clever Cat will consult a trusted friend or family member before making a major move.

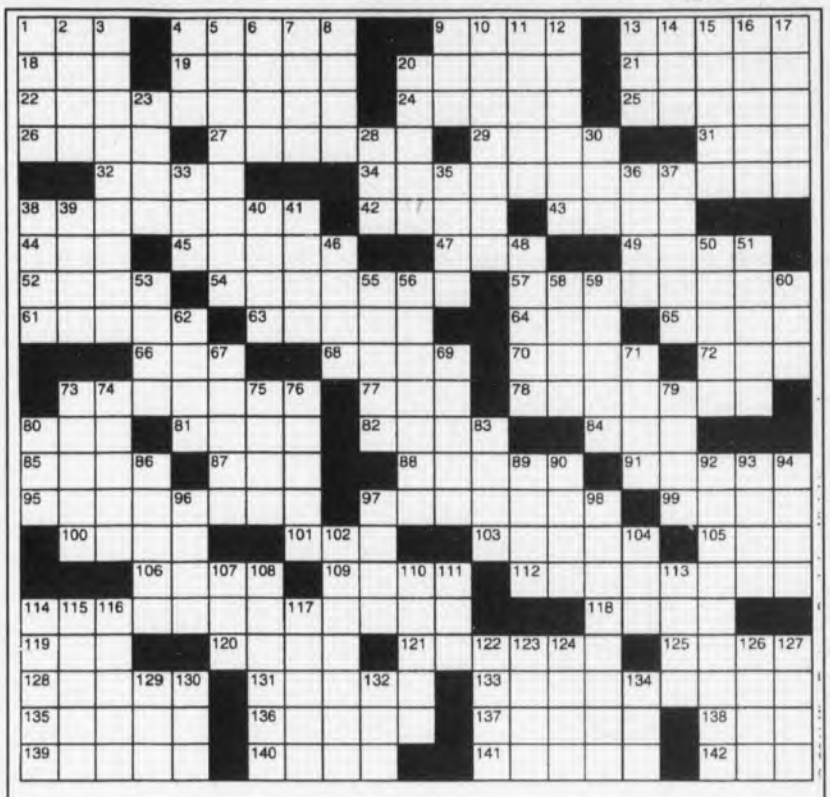
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Good news: You're finding that more doors are opening for you to show what you can do, and you don't even have to knock very hard to get the attention you're seeking.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your gift for creating order out of chaos will help you deal with a sudden rush of responsibilities that would threaten someone less able to balance his or her priorities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Congratulations. Your energy levels are coming right back up to normal — just in time to help you tackle some worthwhile challenges and make some important choices.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The sage Sagittarian should demand a full explanation of inconsistencies that might be cropping up in what had seemed to be a straightforward deal.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A conflict between obligations to family and to the job can create stressful problems. Best advice: Balance your dual priorities so that one doesn't outweigh the other.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't guess, speculate or gossip about that so-called "mystery" situation at the workplace. Bide your time. An explanation will be forthcoming very soon.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Boredom might be creeping in and causing you to lose interest in a repeat project. Deal with it by flipping over your usual routine and finding a new way to do an old task.

Level: Challenging

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

COHASSET SAILING CLUB

Junior program great way to start

ELIZABETH MURRY

Exultation is the going
Of an inland soul to sea.
Emily Dickinson

Sailing is an exhilarating sport that can be pursued over a lifetime, and the Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) has instructional programs for children, teenagers, and adults — in other words, kids of all ages. Today's article details the Junior program, which lies at the heart of the CSC's mission — indeed, giving all Cohasset's young people access to the water was the core reason the CSC was founded in 1960. The Junior program focuses on the 10- to 16-year-old age group. To enroll, students must have completed the fourth grade or turn 10 by Labor Day 2011. Classes meet three times a week for 2 to 3 hours at a time over a 10-week period, and combine classroom teaching with ample time on the water. Novice teenage sailors usually join the more accelerated adult program held on Saturday mornings.

The Junior program has a four-step, four-year sequential structure: first-year students start at the Sailor level, then progress to Mate level in the second year, Skipper level in the third year, and Captain level in the fourth year. Typically, there are at least two to three groups for the Sailor and Mate levels, as these tend to be the most heavily enrolled sequences. Beginning students start with seamanship basics, and progressively acquire more advanced sailing skills. The CSC does its best to coordinate the Junior sailing schedules with the town's swimming program. The program centers around peer-group on-water instruction in the 14.2 foot Capris, usually one instructor plus three or four kids. The CSC instructors are high school or college students, many of whom rose through the ranks of the Junior program. John DeWaal is the veteran head instructor, and Susan Gilmore is the Junior program director who oversees the approximately 20 staff instructors and serves as the parents' main liaison and contact person. Some of you will know John as the music teacher at the Cohasset Middle School, and Susan recently retired as a Norwell High School English teacher.

By the end of their first season, many students will pass the helmsman test, which means they will be able to take out a Capri or the kid-friendly O'Pen BICs, and sail alone or with a companion. Upon completion of the Captain-level training, students may join the Racing team, the focus of next week's article. The dual peer group and solo learning opportunities are a unique feature of the CSC's Junior program instruction. It worth remembering what it was like to have those initial defining experiences that we grownups sometimes forget or take for granted. Diane Johnston, mom to a Mate, a Skipper, and a Race team member, writes that: "The CSC sailing program gives an immeasurable amount of confidence to children. As adults, I don't think we truly take pause and appreciate the intense success our kids feel when they sail that boat in the harbor for the first time on their own. There is a lot of responsibility and accountability involved to successfully complete the task. Where in today's world can a 10-year-old find an equivalent activity that is as fun? I suppose horseback riding would be close, but my sons can't give me a ride on a horse and they can take me out for a free sail. Honestly, I think the CSC Junior program is the coolest offering in town."

To enroll in the Junior Program students must have completed the fourth grade or turn 10 by Labor Day 2011. COURTESY PHOTO

The CSC's web site, www.cohassetsailingclub.com, has more information posted on the adult and junior programs, including membership forms. Membership applications and program registrations must be turned in personally during our 2011 Registration Weekend, May 14 from 9:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m., and May 15 from noon to 2 p.m. at the clubhouse on Government Island.

In preparation for Registration weekend and the 2011 sailing season, the CSC is issuing an all hands alert for this Saturday, April 30, informally known as Dock Day and Spring Clean-Up. The docks go in starting at 8 a.m., while the gardening committee convenes at 10 a.m. Donuts, coffee, and beer will be provided, and we should wrap it up by midday.

Mother's Day Race benefits local family

The Scituate Fire Fighter's 18th Annual Mother's Day Benefit Road Race/Walk will be held on Sunday, May 8 to benefit the Kathryn Rose Whalen Family Benefit Trust.

Kathryn Rose Whalen is one of the most courageous and inspirational women of our lifetime, and it is fitting for the local community to honor her and her family this Mother's Day.

Kathy is a young Scituate mother with four beautiful daughters. She has been battling ALS, also known as Lou Gehrig's disease, for 10 years. Gradually losing the use of her muscles, Kathy is now confined to a wheelchair. To add to her struggle, in October 2009, she contracted the H1N1 virus and spent almost two months in the ICU at South Shore Hospital and now relies on a ventilator to breathe. Determined to reunite his family, her husband, Larry, brought Kathy home on her 45th birthday.

As you can imagine, caring for Kathy at home requires 24/7 coverage and amazing dedication. Larry, committed to his family, cares for Kathy and the children as well as continuing to work. They have SSVNA nurses and also a group of friends and family to assist with care and the running of the home. The costs of caring for Kathy at home are extraordinary.

Although unable to move her body, Kathy runs her home with amazing strength and a passion. The children's needs come first; she has rarely missed a school event or children's activity. Kathy has an infectious smile and twinkle in her eyes that draws you into her life. She is a fighter: strong-willed, with an incredible heart and soul and determination that ALS will not control her life. Those who have met her, feel honored and inspired to be better mothers, fathers, and people.

The "Friends of the Whalen Family" have come together to assist the family and approached the Scituate Fire Fighter's Race Committee to ask that the Whalen Family Benefit Trust be considered this year. The rest is history. The Scituate Fire fighter's have a long history of providing wonderful family events, assisting those in need and illustrating caring and public service more than words can express.

Please join us to celebrate Mother's Day and honor this special mother and family. The race will begin at Minot Beach in Scituate and extend along the coast and up into the picturesque and historic Glades Estate. This private preserve is rarely open to the public and offers scenic landscape and gorgeous ocean views. The race/walk is a wonderful family event and will provide fun for walkers and runners of all ages and abilities. It also appeals to sightseers and history buffs who just want to get a sneak peek at the once John Quincy Adams summer estate.

The walk begins at 8:30a.m., the 1K Kids Run at 9:15 and 5K Race at 10a.m.

Race application and directions can be downloaded at www.scituatefire.org. Registration will also be available on race day. Those unable to participate are still invited to make a donation. Donations may also be sent year round to The Kathryn Rose Whalen Family Benefit Trust at Scituate Federal Savings Bank, Front St., Scituate, Mass. 02066.

In spite of controversy in the weeks leading up to Town Meeting on a septic assistance program, voters at Saturday's Town Meeting overwhelmingly supported it.

The approval vote from Town Meeting authorized the town to borrow up to $3 million from the state program at a zero percent interest rate. The money will be then lent out at a 2 percent interest rate to homeowners with failing septic systems or those tying into town sewer.

A total of 187 voters checked into Town Meeting on Saturday (April 30) and weighed in on 22 articles over four-and-a-half hours.

One of the driving factors for town enrollment in the program is the more than 250 homes yet to hook up to town sewer in the recently established Little Harbor sewer district. The program is also an answer to the roughly 50 percent of households in Cohasset who remain on septic systems and have long asked for some level of support from the town when expensive repairs are needed.

"I believe this program will serve our residents well. It would be a shame to prevent ourselves from taking advantage of it," said Advisory Committee member Chartis Tebbetts.

Going into Town Meeting, the article faced opposition

Teaching success

Osgood's Karen McDavitt gets 'Teacher of the Year' nod

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

When Karen McDavitt was in the first grade she had an outstanding teacher: one that taught her how to read, how to love and respect nature and how to express herself. But perhaps most importantly, that teacher showed her what it meant to be a good teacher.

More than 20 years ago that first grade teacher changed her life. Now, McDavitt, a second grade teacher at the Joseph Osgood School, teaches each day in the hope of making a difference in her students' lives. From nearly all accounts she is doing just that.

McDavitt, who is all smiles and cheer sitting in her colorful classroom, was recently named one of the top eight teachers in the state.

Gov't agencies weigh in

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

State and federal agencies have weighed in on the Cat Dam issue that is currently before the Conservation Commission and those officials don't agree with a key aspect of what the town has brought forward.

The Cat Dam controversy has largely centered on the opening and closing schedule of the Cat Dam tide gates. Opinions on this aspect have divided the surrounding Little Harbor neighborhood for more than three years. Both sides agree there needs to be increased flushing in the water body, but just how much is the point of contention.

It is on this same point that the environmental

New meeting postings board

South Shore Vo-Tech students have crafted a wooden bulletin board for the Town Hall. The bulletin board is in the front window of the new section of Town Hall.

When the Open Meeting Law was re-vamped in July 2010 it required all cities and towns to post public meeting notices in a location that could be viewed 24 hours a day, seven days a week. The town had been posting the meetings on that same window, but just taping the notices to the glass. This new bulletin board elevates the look of the window.

This project is just one of several the students have worked on for the town in recent years. The students installed a new heating, ventilation, and air conditioning system at the Rec Center (former Teen Garage) last year saving the town thousands of dollars.

"The kids over there have done a fantastic job to help the town of Cohasset," said Kenny Thayer, Cohasset's representative to the Vo-Tech school committee.

Schools look into solar energy

Consultant might be brought on board

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Inside the school buildings, teachers, administrators and staff do their best to help the students shine. The School Committee is looking at ways to use the "shine" on the outside of the building to make the three school buildings shine on the inside.

At the April 27 meeting of the School Committee, interim superintendent/business manager Dave DeGennaro presented a proposal from a consultant who could evaluate the feasibility of solar panels on the school buildings.

The consultant, Robert Patterson, has helped other school districts explore similar opportunities. The project, if feasible, could yield significant annual savings in energy costs.

DeGennaro said the first step would be an analysis of renewable energy opportunities, in particular photovoltaic solar arrays on the Middle-High and Deer Hill schools. The cost for this evaluation is $1,600.

If the solar array is feasible on either or both school roofs, the School Committee could rent the roof space to a vendor who would install the solar arrays and negotiate to purchase the energy produced at a lower rate than they are currently paying.

The initial analysis would look at the long-term impacts and savings. The school department spends about $300,000 in electricity costs for all three buildings each year, DeGennaro said.

School Committee member Alfred Slanetz asked if the consultant could also explore other alternative energy options, such as geothermal or wind energy.

DeGennaro said the initial analysis would focus on solar only. Patterson has worked with other school districts in the state (Milton, Plymouth, Clinton, for example).

School Committee chair Helene Lieb said other alternative energy options could be more complicated, but small-scale efforts to be more green, like recycling, are already underway and more could be done.

"We don't know where (this project) could take us," Lieb said.

"There's a lot to think about, but we've got to start somewhere," DeGennaro said.

Milton Schools recently did a similar project and expects to save in tens of thousands in energy costs as a result, Lieb said.

The Mariner asked the committee if the Alternative Energy Committee, which has been exploring alternative energy opportunities for school buildings for several years, had been consulted to see if they had looked into this possibility previously. They had not contacted that committee.

The committee decided to hold off on moving forward with the consultant until the Alternative Energy Committee had been consulted. They will take up the issue again at their meeting on Wednesday, May 25.

"It's exciting to see Cohasset moving in the direction of alternative energy," Lieb said.

POLICE BEAT

Catalytic converter thefts from T lots

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset has not been immune from a recent rash of thefts of catalytic converters from motor vehicles parked at MBTA parking lots.

Two such thefts have been reported in the past two weeks at the Cohasset Greenbush Station: one from a Toyota Tundra pickup truck on April 25 and another from a Toyota Tacoma pickup truck on April 21.

Police Lt. William Quigley explained that the catalytic converters are part of the exhaust system and contain some precious metals that can be resold. He said the vehicles being targeted have high ground clearance, such as pickup trucks and SUVs, and their catalytic converters can be removed in less than about 60 seconds with power saws and ratchet set. Mostly Toyotas have been targeted because their converters are bolted on and can be removed easily, he said.

Of the 22 thefts of catalytic converters, 19 occurred at commuter rail stations on the South Shore including Cohasset, West Hingham, Braintree, South Weymouth, and Weymouth Landing.

Catalytic converters reduce automobile emissions.

"We are going to be assisting the T police and keeping an eye on this," Quigley said. He said the MBTA reported the thefts have all occurred between 5:30 a.m. and 7:20 p.m.

OUI arrest

A 53-year-old Marshfield man was arrested for drunken driving following a traffic stop at 1:01 a.m. on Saturday (April 30) on Forest Avenue. An officer on patrol on Forest Avenue observed a 2003 Honda SUV traveling at a high rate of speed: 50 in a 30 mph zone. The officer did a U-turn and stopped the Honda. The operator exhibited the signs and symptoms of intoxication, police said. Based on police observations and his performance on field sobriety tests, the Marshfield man was arrested and charged with operating under the influence of alcohol (second offense) and speeding.

Brazilian passport

A 32-year-old Weymouth woman is being summonsed to court on the charges of unlicensed operation and speeding following a traffic stop at 2:01 p.m. on Tuesday (April 26) at Brook and S. Main streets. Police said an officer saw the 2001 VW Jetta traveling at a high rate of speed: 35 in a 20 mph zone. The officer approached the operator who handed him a Brazilian passport. Her vehicle was towed.

Suspended license

At 11:08 a.m. on Friday (April 29), an officer on patrol stopped a 2003 black Ford Escape after it passed the cruiser at Pond Street and Bancroft Road at an estimated speed of 46 mph. The speed limit there is 30 mph. The officer stopped the vehicle at Route 3A and Pond Street. The operator, a 45-year-old Cohasset man did not have a valid license. He is being summonsed to court on the charges of operating after license suspension (second offense) and speeding. The vehicle did not have to be towed and was turned over to the man's wife who was in the passenger seat, police said.

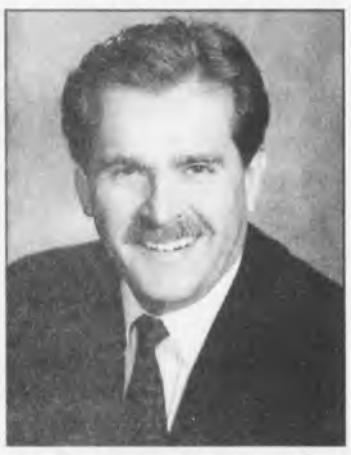
Ecuadorian passport

On Friday (April 29) at 5:02 p.m., police pulled over a 1998 Dodge Dakota pickup truck observed traveling north on Route 3A near lower King Street with its left, rear taillight out. The officer stopped the truck and the operator, a 35-year-old Milford man, presented him with an Ecuadorian passport. Police said the Milford man has been in the country for seven years and never obtained a license. The man is being summonsed for operating without a license and for defective equipment (taillight). His vehicle was towed.

Failure to stop

A 25-year-old Quincy man will be summonsed to court for failure to stop for a police officer and for driving to endanger following a BOLO (Be on the Lookout) from Scituate on Friday (April 29) at about 7:15 p.m. Scituate PD had tried to serve the man with a "pink paper" for mental health issues. Cohasset police said the 2007 Honda Accord, the man was driving, was traveling 60-70 mph as it headed north on Route 3A passing other vehicles. Cohasset police said the man failed to yield to the police emergency lights and they notified Hingham. Hingham police put out "stop sticks" at the intersection of routes 3A and 228 that deflated the tires on the Honda and the man was taken into custody. He was transported to the hospital for mental health issues.

Accidents



• At 4:55 p.m. on Wednesday (April 27), police responded to a two-vehicle accident at the intersection of South Main and Beechwood streets. Police said a 2003 Acura MDX, operated by a 17-year-old Cohasset girl, attempted to turn left onto S. Main from Beechwood but failed to yield to another car. Police said a 2009 Chevrolet pickup, operated by a 34-year-old Scituate woman, was on South Main heading toward Scituate when the Acura pulled out. The pickup hit the Acura broadside. There were no injuries and neither vehicle had to be towed. The 17-year-old was issued a citation for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

• At 10:42 a.m. on Thursday (April 28), police responded to a two-car crash at Route 3A and Pond Street. Police said a 2009 Toyota Camry that was headed north and was operated by a 59-year-old Marshfield woman had stopped at the light on 3A when her car was rear-ended by a 2008 Mitsubishi Lancer, operated by a 21-year-old New Hampshire woman. The Mitsubishi had to be towed; there were no injuries. The New Hampshire woman was issued a citation for following too closely on a state highway, police said.

• At 10:11 a.m. on Sunday (May 1), police responded to a two-car crash on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A). Police said a 2004 Volvo S40 that was headed north and was being operated by a 30-year-old Brockton woman was attempting to make a right-hand turn into Tedeschi Plaza when a 2010 Chevrolet SUV hit it. Police said the operator of the Chevrolet, a 43-year-old Scituate woman, was trying to pass the Volvo on the right when the collision occurred. The Volvo had to be towed; there were no injuries. The Scituate woman was issued a citation for passing on the right, police said.

TOWN GOVERNMENT UPDATE

Overseeing the water department

Selectmen discuss options

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

The final discussion before the Board of Selectmen before this Saturday's annual town election concerned the water department restructuring and future governance.

The financial and operational issues of the department have taken up a good chunk of the selectmen's time over the past year, and it looks like discussion over where to go and how to improve will continue well after Election Day.

Among the recommendations that came out of the water department audit was the need for someone to oversee the day-to-day operations of both the sewer and water departments in a superintendent and/or engineer position.

All the selectmen seem to be on board with some form of this idea.

Both Selectmen Leland Jenkins and chairman Karen Quigley came out strongly in their support for this new superintendent position.

"We have to get the right person with the right experience and the ability to manage people," Jenkins said, adding the Town Manager is currently at a disadvantage because he is not able to get out there and see what's going on. Jenkins said it could be possible to have this person also oversee the DPW.

Quigley said the creation of a superintendent position needed to happen sooner rather than later. She suggested the position would likely decrease the town's reliance on consulting engineers and therefore the cost. The savings could pay for a good portion of the superintendent's salary, she said.

Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard spoke to the need for a professional to help the Town Manager and the elected commissions do their job.

"It's impossible for a Town Manager to know what's going on in those departments and keep commissions apprised. (The town) needs someone between the commissions and the contractors to act on behalf of the town," Lombard said.

During the recent budget preparation, Lombard said he had difficulty getting the numbers from the Water Commission because elected volunteers with full-time jobs and families were developing the budget.

"We need someone in there who knows the finances and is someone the Town Manager and the commissions can work with," Lombard said. "You put management in places that you need it."

Advisory Committee member Sam Wakeman said there needed to be a centralization of the town's maintenance departments (DPW, facilities management, water and sewer).

"We need someone, a town employee responsible for water and sewer," Wakeman said. "We need to really define that position and decide what we really want."

Quigley said other towns' governance model and job description could easily be modeled, "I don't think we have to start from scratch with this."

Water Commissioner Peter DeCaprio said there might not be enough work for a water and sewer superintendent. With the large capital projects to revamp the water distribution system fundamentally complete, DeCaprio said the day-to-day operations of the water department were fairly simple.

One of his goals in the near future was to renegotiate the American Water contract (the company that runs the water plant and distribution system) and determine if there could be cost savings in bringing some of the operation over to the town (rather than contract out).

DeCaprio also said he would be in favor of consolidating the water and sewer commissions into one joint commission.

DeCaprio suggested there could be town employees already who could provide support to the water and sewer departments, namely the "Greenbush guys" Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan.

The discussion did not come to any conclusion, except that there needed to be more discussion on the topic.

"We have a whole bunch of ideas floating around," said Selectman Fred Koed.

New principal search starts

The search is on for a new Joseph Osgood School principal. Current principal Janet Sheehan is leaving the district after this school year for a principal position at a Milton elementary school.

Deer Hill principal Jennifer deChiara, who is co-chair of the screening committee for the next Osgood principal, said they were in the process of seeking members of the committee from stakeholder groups. She expected to have the committee formed by the end of April. Various Osgood stakeholder groups, including Osgood School Council, PSO, teachers from each grade level, student services, and specialists, were asked to participate.

DeChiara said the town had received 13 applications for the job. The screening committee was scheduled to meeting Friday, May 6 to begin to come to a consensus on what qualities they hoped to find for the next principal of Osgood.

She hoped to have up to three finalists to recommend to incoming superintendent Barbara Cataldo to interview by the first week in June.

from both the Board of Selectmen and the Capital Budget Committee. Their opposition was based largely on process, as the article did not come before the Capital Budget Committee for review or presentation. But those concerns were not enough to persuade Town Meeting to vote against the article.

Capital Budget Committee chair Steve Gaumer spoke adamantly against the article.

"The objectives (of the program) are admirable...but at this point we have no firsthand knowledge or had the opportunity to ask firsthand questions," Gaumer said, adding to recommend approval of the article would be abdicating his oath as an appointed town official. He also said there were outstanding questions about the town's liability if homeowners default on the loan.

Board of Health chair Peggy Chapman said the program had been implemented successfully in 30 towns in southeastern Massachusetts.

Sewer Commission chair John Beck spoke in favor of the program.

"This program will provide low-cost capital to people who really need it. The clock is ticking (for Little Harbor hook-ups)," Beck said. The Second Amended Judgment, an agreement between the state and the town, requires the 450 Little Harbor homes to be hooked up to the sewer system by June 2012. The town could face penalties of $25,000 if not all homes are tied in by that time.

Andrew Quigley, a homeowner in the Little Harbor sewer district, said the program had been "on the table" for four years.

"The fact town officials were not able to get together at the 11th hour to review this article is unacceptable...the process issue needs to give way to reality and necessity," Quigley said.

Robin Lawrence, a Board of Health member, asked Town Meeting to put aside the "process issue" and vote for "the good of the community."

After roughly 40 minutes of debate, the article came to vote. Approval required a two-thirds majority vote and was easily achieved; only a few voices opposed the article.

Chapman said it would take a few months for the town to go through the application process with the state and set up the program on the town side. Loans could be available to homeowners by the fall.

Town officials honored

As is tradition, Town Meeting recognized a number of its exiting town board members and elected officials. All six proclamations were received with standing applause and a unanimous vote.

Mark Baker was honored for his service since 1991 on the Capital Budget Committee. He served as chair for 10 of those years.

Stuart Ivimey has resigned from his post as Community Preservation Committee chairman, a role he has held since the town passed the Community Preservation Act in 2001.

Advisory Committee member Chartis Tebbetts was honored for her dedication to the town as a advisory committee member for the past three years and previous service on various town committees.

Sheila Evans has served as a Library Trustee since 1966. Her long-time service to the town was lauded at the meeting. She served as chair of the Board of Library Trustees many years, helped to found the Library Trust endowment and led the Library Building Committee in their move to its current location in the early 2000s.

Retiring Town Clerk Marion Douglas was honored for her 19 years as Town Clerk and 32 years of service as a town employee.

Ed Lappen was posthumous honored for his extensive service to the town during his lifetime. He most recently served on the Advisory Committee, Budget Planning Group, Water Planning Group and Water Audit Committee.

CAT DAM

agency officials chiefly disagree with in the town-submitted Notice of Intent (NOI). A NOI is a presentation of information to the Conservation Commission that addresses the operation and maintenance of the tide gates, among other things. The Conservation Commission reviews the information and ultimately determines the operational schedule and management of Cat Dam in accordance with the Clean Waters Act.

The Conservation Commission will hold its second public hearing on the Cat Dam NOI on Thursday, May 12 at 7p.m.

In March, Conservation Commission chair David Farrag sought input and technical assistance from state and federally regulatory agencies on the Cat Dam NOI.

What he got back were opinions that diverged from the town's NOI on the open and close schedule for the Cat Dam tide gates, most starkly on the warmer months (May to November).

All the comments agreed with the proposal for the winter month schedule with all three gates open from December 1 to March 31.

However, across the board the regulatory agencies did not agree with the summer month schedule. The submitted NOI, which is the second to be submitted by the town and was prepared and paid for by the Environmental 20, a group of neighbors, recommends the gates be opened two times a month for two days each time during the warmer months.

In contrast, the withdrawn NOI prepared by CLE Engineering and paid for by the town ($18,000) had recommended one of the three gates to be open all the time during the warmer months.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management, Massachusetts Bays National Estuary Program, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries uniformly called for some level of daily tidal exchange between inner Little Harbor and Little Harbor during that time period.

Some of the agencies said what the town's former NOI prepared for the town by CLE Engineering was more appropriate in this respect. That NOI called for one of the three tide gates to be open during the warmer months (April through November).

The comments prepared by John Logan, fisheries habitat specialist with the Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries, said the proposed operational schedule in the most recent NOI would have a detrimental effect on the harbor and "promote further eutrophication of inner Little Harbor while limiting natural movements of shellfish larvae and fish between these embayments."

The Conservation Commission will consider the regulatory agencies comments, as well as take further public input next Thursday, May 12.

MCDAVITT

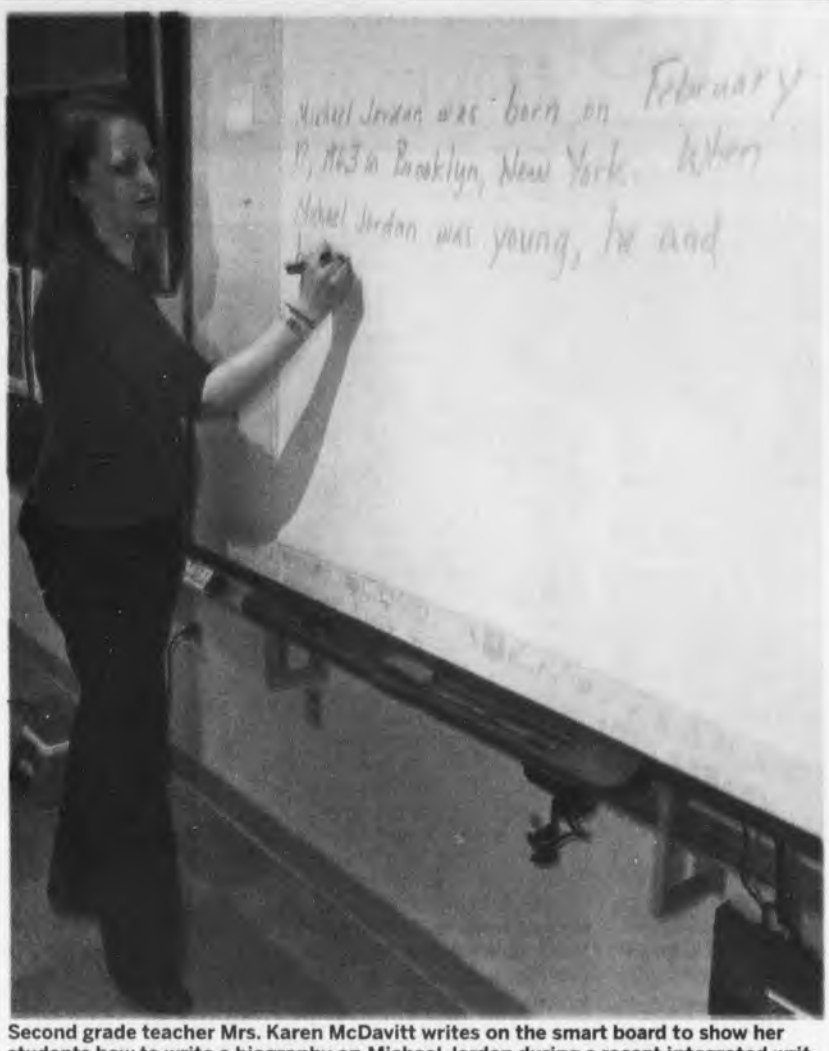
She is a semi-finalist in the state's annual "Teacher of the Year" program.

Her nomination for the award came in the most fitting way – by a former student. Current fourth grader Conor Joslin wrote an essay about McDavitt and how she influenced his young life.

"It's the biggest honor that a student thought enough of me to send in a nomination," McDavitt said. "That's why teachers do what they do. It's not for the money, or the recognition, it's for the kids."



McDavitt, 29, has been a teacher for eight years. Her first five years were spent in Ipswich, Mass. as a fourth-grade teacher and her last three as a second-grade teacher at Osgood.

As a teacher and a person, McDavitt has non-stop energy. She's the kind of person who wakes up in the middle of the night with an idea and writes it down. She's the kind of teacher who drives her husband crazy because she talks about her "24 kids" during dinner on a Friday night. She's the kind of mom who says she has 25 kids, her own one-year-old and the 24 students in her classroom.

"My teaching philosophy is to be a positive, encouraging influence in children's lives. My goal is to create lifelong learners who are curious and excited to learn new things," McDavitt said.

To achieve her goal of having each student reach their potential she starts by getting to know them inside and out and truly cares about them as an individual. With that knowledge she is able to tailor her teaching to each student. For example, if a student is struggling with math word problems and she knows he loves hockey, she will create an entire worksheet of hockey-based math word problems.

"I honor and respect what they care about," McDavitt said. This highly differentiated teaching style is what she is passionate about and finds challenging.

"As a teacher you never know when you're going to tap into somebody. You never know what's going to get them excited, what's going to make them say 'that's cool, that's what I want to know more about.' And it's at that point that learning takes off," McDavitt said. She has worked closely and collaboratively with her fellow Osgood teachers and said she shares the Teacher of the Year honor with them.

When a child does mark a personal accomplishment it is a cause for celebration. Her positive energy is contagious.

"It's so much fun to see a child succeed and be proud of themselves," McDavitt said. "I try really hard to model how I want my students to react to what I'm teaching."

Her former student, Conor Joslin, the one who nominated her, is proof she is succeeding in this manner. In his nomination essay he spoke to her contagious enthusiasm:

"Our year together was just as amazing as I thought it would be that (first) meeting day and even a little more spectacular than I though. It was because she made everything we did so much fun! We worked on many incredible projects in her class and she always did it with a big smile on her face and such excitement!"

McDavitt was notified this week that she was not selected to move on in the "Teacher of the Year" process. But, she was consoled immediately by her students' handwritten notes assuring her that – to them – she is the best teacher they could ask for.

"To be a teacher and to be a part of a child's life six hours a day, everyday for a year, is an honor. You have the opportunity to change lives, help form futures. The decisions I make in the classroom could make a difference in who these children become. What an honor."

Cara is a New York-based freelance producer for commercials, film, and television. McKenney won an Emmy in 2008 for the title sequence to Mad Men. In 2010, she was nominated for two Emmys for her work on the Nurse Jackie and Human Target title sequences. She has produced title sequences to films such as "Terminator Salvation," "Remember Me" and "Going the Distance," and television titles such as "Rubicon," "The Pacific" and "Boardwalk Empire." She graduated from Middlebury College with a degree in film.

Tze is a Brooklyn-based filmmaker and visual artist who wrote and directed the critically-acclaimed, semi-autobiographical independent film "Children of Invention," which premiered at the 2009 Sundance Film Festival. Prior to that, he wrote and directed the award-winning short film "Windowbreaker" and wrote for the ABC television drama "Cashmere Mafia." He is a graduate of Columbia University.

Although the couple met as high school freshmen while attending Milton Academy in Milton, they didn't start dating until eight years later. It was not until they both graduated from their respective colleges and were living in Brooklyn and working in film that they reconnected, and eventually started dating.

One night in May of 2010, after weeks of meticulous planning and secrecy, Chun surprised McKenney by proposing to her at the newly opened Brooklyn Bridge Park while a dozen of their friends and family watched from the Brooklyn Bridge. He also had a friend take photos from a hidden location to document the experience.

"I wanted to propose in a place we could walk by years from now and be reminded of that night. But with all those people watching, I guess it would have been awkward if Cara had said no." Chun said.

"I had been on set all day and was tired and grubby and didn't want to go for a walk in the park. He had a fresh haircut and looked adorable." McKenney said. "I was so surprised when he proposed. It was magical and perfect. And then to look up to the Brooklyn Bridge and see all of our friends cheering and waving glow sticks... it meant the world to me to be able to share the moment with them."

A June wedding in Cohasset is planned.

Zoning map amended

In a unanimous vote, Town Meeting altered the town's zoning map. Approval of the article allows the expansion of the Highway Business District zone located east of the Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) along the Scituate Town line. The expansion makes the business district more uniform with the west side of Chief Justice Cushing Highway. The change in zoning allows the Scituate Racquet Club to construct an indoor pool.

A similar article was brought forward via a citizen's petition at last fall's Special Town Meeting. The article failed when the proponents couldn't answer key questions asked by voted.

This time around the article was brought forward by the Planning Board and vetted in a public hearing process. There was no discussion on the floor of Town Meeting.

Setting a new course

Sailing Club raising money for new clubhouse

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

With summer fast approaching many minds are turning to the activities that bring us closer to the water. Since 1960 the Cohasset Sailing Club has been giving families the opportunity to take advantage of living on the coast by learning to sail.

Over the years, the sailing club has taught hundreds of kids (and adults) the joys of being on the water and the satisfaction of harnessing the wind to get around.

The sailing club is now turning to those who have been a part of the club's legacy to chart a new course. They have embarked on an effort to build a new clubhouse.

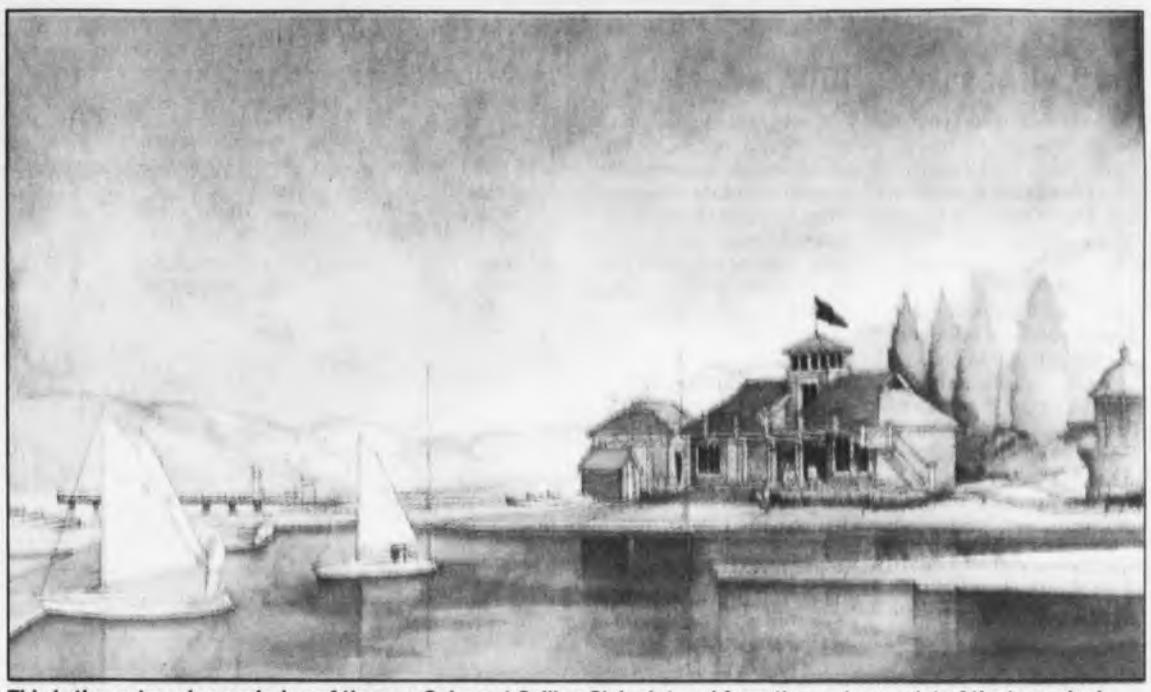
"Our building is in serious disrepair," said Diane Shipp, a member of the Board of Directors and chair of the new building fundraising committee. "It's been maintained over the years, but it needs to be replaced...The club was built on a concrete pad that is literally sinking into the ground."

An update to the Sailing Club has been in the plans for several years, ever since an assessment of the building was completed that revealed the underpinnings of the clubhouse were in bad shape. As time has gone on more things have been found that need to be replaced or updated.

The Cohasset Sailing Club clubhouse sits on Government Island in the harbor, next to the Minot Light replica. The project envisions a 2-1/2-story structure increasing the gross footage of the building by about 20 percent with a new total square footage of 1785 square feet. The adjacent shed will also be expanded.

The building also aims to be Cohasset's first non-residential LEED-registered "green" building.

"Because the building is in the harbor, and we know the harbor has been experiencing some (environmental) challenges it just makes sense to make this project as green as possible," Shipp said.



To achieve the goal of new and lasting clubhouse, the sailing club needs to raise roughly $500,000.

"We're reaching out to past sailors, current sailors, future sailors and their families," Shipp said. In addition to embarking on a large capital campaign, the sailing club is also applying for grants to defray the cost of the structure.

"The best part of this project is the spirit of community surrounding it," Shipp said. "It goes to show how beloved the club is."

Both the engineering and architectural services, by Cavanaro Consulting and Hoadley Martinez Architects, respectively, have been donated.

"We approached the project from the standpoint of efficiency. Everything has to pull double duty, the spaces need to be flexible and utilitarian," said architect and Cohasset resident Susan Hoadley. They also had to be conscious of the sailing club's prominent place in the harbor.

This is the watercolor rendering of the new Cohasset Sailing Club pictured from the vantage point of the town dock. The new building will be 20 percent bigger than the current building and be LEED-registered. The Sailing Club needs to raise about $500,000 to complete the project. RENDERING COURTESY OF HOADLEY MARTINEZ ARCHITECTS

"Boathouses and sailing clubs are very utilitarian by nature and they end up being very beautiful because of that simplicity," Hoadley said. "The building takes very careful aesthetic cues from the local vernacular."

The new building will be built on pilings and sheathed in woven white cedar shingles and roof. The building will have a timber frame construction, wood decking and flooring. The walls will be made of structural insulated panels, which are thermally tight. The building will be crowned with a cupola and flagpole.

The future clubhouse will largely sit on the current building's footprint, except for a slight rotation to improve visibility down to the harbor as well as be more welcoming on the Lighthouse Lane side. Two sets of stairs (one on Lighthouse Lane, one facing the harbor) will welcome the community to the new building.

Sustainable aspects of the building are found in all areas, Hoadley said. The building will include a water collection system that will gather all the stormwater from the roof and re-irrigate it out to the landscaping. Landscaping will include native plantings where possible and semi-permeable paving. The bathrooms will have low-flow fixtures. Where ever possible materials will be from sources within 500 miles of the site and many pieces of the current clubhouse will be salvaged an re-used.

Hoadley said the building has been designed to stay both hot and cool without energy consumption. To achieve that goal the architects took into account the orientation of the building, cross ventilation for prevailing winds and other natural ways to regulate the temperature in the building.

"We wanted to take advantage of the wonderful offshore breezes there...it's going to be a really nice building to be in," Hoadley said. The building is expected to be three-season.

For the first time, as well, the clubhouse will allow instructors to do onshore instruction facing the water.

The project has made the rounds to town boards gathering all the necessary permits; all that's left is to get a building permit and funding. The sailing club hopes to break ground on the project in fall 2012.

"We think this building is going to be so beautiful people will be clamoring to be there. It's going to be a beautiful addition to the harbor," Shipp said.

'One less terrorist this world does keep'

In light of the news about the death of Osma bin Laden, members of the Cohasset Mariner Readers Advisory Network were asked the following this week:

What emotions did you feel when you first heard the news that Osma bin Laden had been killed and why? Does it bring any closure to what you felt on 9/11?

"My reaction to the assassination of Osama was mainly one of alarm. His death will not stop the terrorism of his organization, it will only provoke revenge and further violence." — Eleanor Bleakie

"Having served in Afghanistan, my thoughts were of all the service members who have been deployed to that part of the world and those who are still currently serving. To the families who lost loved ones in Afghanistan, our country owes you a debt of gratitude that we will never be able to re-pay, but only acknowledge" — Bill Ramsey

"When the Danes learned that Osama Bin Laden had been killed by U.S. elite troops, the immediate reaction was a sigh of relief. Justice had finally taken place. At the same time we admired the President. Barrack Obama is popular here, but we have questioned if he can take USA out of the recession. As we all now, that means a long steady haul because there is no miracle cure. Then Obama proves to the world that he masters the long steady haul and, most importantly, by signing the order he showed that he can and will react when time is right.

"So justice took place because of a strong President and now where does that leave us? Although bin Laden's death is a milestone in the war against terror, it does not bring peace to the world. Danish troops are stationed in Balkan as peacekeepers. Danish troops are fighting side by side with Americans in Afghanistan and many are coming home in caskets. Danish fighter-bombers are in Libya, and finally a Danish warship is fighting pirates off the coast in Somalia. This is altogether a reminder that bin Laden was not the only bad guy.

"Let us be honest, justice took place. This is a major political achievement and speaks to the benefit of the American President. However, it does not bring terrorism to an end, but with a strong President at the rudder, willing to act when necessary, there is hope that the long steady haul will lead to a better world.

"God bless America" — Ove Pygh Wilche, Denmark

"I was elated to hear this news. The 'king' of global terrorism is now dead — therefore the threat of terrorism worldwide is at least reduced. No single person's death has brought such relief since the death of Hitler in 1945. I think many of the people who lost loved ones on 9/11 feel somewhat relieved — the man who orchestrated the deaths of their loved ones has been strategically eliminated as a future threat. This is the 'eye for an eye' that many of them had (understandably) wished for. God bless the special forces and their bravery and courage to accomplish this mission, and big thanks to our president and government for making it happen." — David Hazeltine

"I am glad that he had the wisdom to continue the Bush strategy on fighting this thing and I fully appreciate the courage required to go against his base for the good of the country. Today he's my president." — Ben Hammer

"I surprised myself by feeling joy and satisfaction. I have never experienced those emotions in connection with the death of another human being and am embarrassed by my reaction, but 'it is what it is.'" — Susan Ryer

"I think it sends a good message that the US attention span isn't so short anymore and that we will pursue criminals until they are brought to justice. I think it would be naive to think that terrorism ends here though. There will always be another to take Osama's place and we will have to remain vigilant during this war, which may never end. Though it doesn't provide good closure, I think it does gives us a point to move on. Osama was a killer, but we should still set an example and be above celebrating anyone's violent death. Time to move on." — Phil Redman

In light of the news about the death of Osma bin Laden, members of the Cohasset Mariner Readers Advisory Network were asked the following this week:

What emotions did you feel when you first heard the news that Osma bin Laden had been killed and why? Does it bring any closure to what you felt on 9/11?

"As soon as I heard the news late that evening I physically leaped from my bed and said YES, with a raised fist! Shortly thereafter my phone began to ring, and continued to ring well after midnight. A lifelong friend called to thank me for all I've done in the service to our Country. A former Navy comrade called to share in our pride.

"My Mother called to say that she hoped her sleepless nights of worry; worry of me on distant shores, would soon come to an end. She concluded the conversation with this prayer, [author unknown]...

"May 1st Prayer...Now I lay me down to sleep...one less terrorist this world does keep...with all my heart I give my thanks...to those in uniform regardless of ranks...you serve our country and serve it well...with humble hearts your stories tell...so as I rest my weary eyes...while freedom rings our flag still flies...you give your all, do what you must...with God we live and God we trust.....Amen." — Keith Jermyn

"I want to thank and congratulate all members of our armed forces and the intelligence community whose dedication, devotion and resolve made this happen. My thoughts and prayers continue to be with the families of those who were murdered by this evil man and I hope this brings some measure of closure to them. This is also a strong message to those who would seek to do us harm that we will hunt you down and bring you to justice no matter how long it takes." — Garrett Bradley

"It would seem appropriate to have a mixed reaction: one of gratitude and grief. Gratitude for the competence of the U.S. special forces and commitment of the administration to see that justice was done. But on the other hand, we should temper our nationalistic jingoism with some measure of remorse. We are reminded by Jesus to 'Love your enemies and prayer for those who persecute you.' The wisdom of Solomon seems in order: 'Do not rejoice when your enemy falls, and let not your heart be glad when he stumbles' (Proverbs 24:17). If ever these verses apply, they apply now." — John Seel

"He was evil, but the celebrations in the street were unseemly. Russell Arben Fox at Front Porch Republic (www.frontporchrepublic.com/2011/05/he-deserved-it/) put it well: "The moral plane of the universe is not somehow improved by the killing of a man. 'Rejoice not when thine enemy falleth, and let not thine heart be glad when he is overthrown' – the author of Proverbs had it right. I believe all that....but I still think he deserved it." — John D. Chapman

"Good for the Presidential decision-maker (though the Obama-haters will never credit him). We will now see how effective has been al Quada's recent decentralization and outsourcing strategy. I suspect it's mojo will never be the same, particularly since the real revolution in the Middle East has nothing to do with their lunatic dream of an 8th century Moslem Caliphate." — Linc Bloomfield

"President Obama made all the salient points during his late night speech. "Most importantly, he emphasized that bin Laden represents a radical fringe-not all Muslims. bin Laden's clique, like the Japanese and Germans did horrific things, but the Japanese and Germans are now amongst our strongest allies and their countries are examples of how adoption of democratic principles can discourage radicalism. Germany and Japan are strong allies because we learned from history (the WWI Versailles surrender terms) and did not repeat them after WWII.

"We must recognize that we have sometimes adopted expedient foreign policies and backed tyrannical regimes.

"Let us honor our intelligence and defense communities, maintain a high level of vigilance and do our best to remain an example for the world in practicing justice and fair play. Only than will radicals lose the ear of the disenfranchised." — Joe McElroy

"I felt some closure that this man's ability to direct harm and hatred towards anyone was ended. But then, I felt sorrow over the way the news was immediately filled with descriptions of the blood and wreckage evident in the rooms where Osama bin Laden and others had been killed" — Susi Coley

"Congratulations to our United States Naval Seals for their successfully completed mission; thank you to God that further lives were not lost." — J. Crocker

"As someone who considers himself a peace maker in his daily life, and who decries hatred and violence, I'd just like to say that I wish SEAL Team Six had set Bin Laden's clothes on fire, forced him to jump out a third story window, and then shot him in the face. But I guess we can't have everything." — John Lengyel

"I felt feelings heart ache, and despair for all the children, and families who try their best to live one day at a time through experiencing incomprehensible trauma 10 years ago. Every time I visit ground zero I cannot help but read the tiles of artwork and messages of hope and healing thru all the despair that children were so unfairly coping with. All the lives lost since then by soldiers and the suffering of loved ones left behind. The innocent victims being the children through all of this....I pray for PEACE and Healing through this next journey." —Tricia Zimbone-Ashe, Certified Child Life Specialist

"First startled, then hopeful his death matters to achieving US aims. I have no sense of closure, as one man's death could not make up for the lost lives and the lost freedoms of pre 9/11 America." — Patience Garrick Towle.

"My son was 13 months old when the Trade Towers collapsed and my initial reaction then was to go get him and give him a hug; not because I thought he was in danger, rather I simply wanted to be close to my child. This morning when I heard the news, I found myself having a very similar reaction; I simply wanted to hug my children.

"It is indeed a tremendous day for the war on terror, but it's also difficult to separate the moment with the fact that since 2001 the US government has spent $1.8 trillion on military actions in that region. Two trillion dollars — the adverse impact that this spending has had on our country is almost too great to comprehend yet it pales in comparison to the heart wrenching losses of military personnel during the same time span.

"While bin Laden's loss gives us all reason to celebrate, lets not do so without acknowledging the high cost our country has paid. Perhaps we all should hug our children just a bit stronger this week" — John McSheffrey

"WE GOT HIM!

"Justice being served to Osama Bin Laden by the US Navy SEALs is excellent news for a country that needs a lift right now.

"It gives some relief to families of the 3000 people who lost their lives on 9/11, the countless others murdered in the London and Madrid bombings, Mumbai shootings and many other atrocities.

"On that clear sunny September morning of 9/11, holding my then 3-year-old daughter, standing with neighbors on the New Jersey side of the Hudson river where we lived, we all watched in shock as the events unfolded. The worst moment being the fall of the first tower when we knew thousands had instantaneously lost their lives. In the subsequent days it was heartbreaking to see all the posters around of missing people that we knew were not coming back.

"Kudos to President Obama and all involved in the operation for undertaking it so effectively. Kudos also goes to President Bush whose actions allowed for the gathering of vital information which helped lead to OBL's death." — Adele Janssens

"Geronimo, EKIA

"Geronimo, the United States military code name for Osama Bin Laden, and EKIA, or Enemy Killed In Action were the words CIA Director, Leon Panetta uttered via video screen from his headquarters to President Obama, Vice President Biden, Secretary of State Clinton, Secretary of Defense Gates and other keys cabinet members at the White House. The jarring expression on Secretary of State Clinton face eerily mirrored the expressions of so many Americans on Sept. 11th, 2001.

"The President's words "we got him" are poignant. There were risks in this operation, and the President wisely sanctioned this mission to bring closure to this ten year pursuit. The President and his National Security Team deserve credit. As do the valiant efforts of the 80 Navy Seals, and all the other brave or wounded soldiers we have lost in this war. Let's hope Bin Laden's death doesn't reignite extremist actions of other jihadists, although sadly it likely will. The death of Bin Laden will never bring back the lives of 3,000 innocent Americans who were tragically taken from us, but will for a moment remind us of them and the challenges that lie ahead." — Susan Bell

"But it was ironic that Bob and I were flying into Boston yesterday with memories of our son's Eric and Paul who had left Boston on 9/11 on an American Airlines flight to Chicago on the plane that departed following the flight that went into the Trade Center Building. For many hours we did not know where they were. As it turned out they were in Canada and were able to rent a car and continue onto Michigan to meet their brother Carl for a fishing date.

"It was a day we shall never forget as it was an extraordinary mixture of feelings. Elation that they were safe but feeling devastated for all the people and families involved in that tragic event and almost having guilty feelings about the turn of events for our family." — Martha Hurtig

Town Election

Apart from a family or personal emergency, there are few good excuses for not voting on Saturday. We hope that a majority of registered voters will take a few minutes and make the effort to go to the polls. The polls are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Town Hall – so there is plenty of time between errands, youth sports, lunches, shopping and so on, to stop by and cast your ballot.

There one race on Saturday. If you are happy with the incumbent or incumbents – we think that person (or persons) would welcome the vote of confidence. If you are not happy and want to see a new face or faces of the Board of Selectmen — then those seeking to unseat the incumbent would welcome your vote.

Those running unopposed are usually encouraged by the number of votes they receive as a way of saying – "keep up the good work!" or "welcome aboard!"

There is also one declared write-in candidate for the Planning Board.

Most residents believe that Cohasset is a great place to live. However, that would not be the case if interested citizens did not step up to the plate and run for elected office. Those willing to run and subject themselves to long hours and a ton of homework on the issues – deserve an interested, involved, and participatory electorate (that's you!).

Here is a statement to ponder:

"Nobody will ever deprive the American people of the right to vote except the American people themselves and the only way they could do this is by not voting." Franklin D. Roosevelt.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Community spirit

The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) would like to extend a very special thank you to the Cohasset Community Preservation Committee and the Livingstone Companies of Cohasset for making the recent rehab of the historic Aubrey Parker House at Mariner's Park a reality. Our roof is tight, the basement is dry, and the building will continue to effectively serve the town and its families.

Both the CPC and the Livingstone Companies exemplified Cohasset's community spirit. The CPC recognized the need to protect a treasured town asset and went to bat for the project in front of the other town boards. While our work list was long and the budget very tight, Jack Livingstone, Scott Petrino and Beverly Livingstone made it all happen.

Our special thanks goes to the Livingstone Companies for the additions and improvements they made to the project without additional cost. If Jack and Scott encountered something outside of the job spec that appeared broken, they fixed it. If a better product was available, they used it. They reseeded the side yard and mulched our flowerbeds to boot. We are grateful for their civic-mindedness and their willingness to execute the project above and beyond the call of duty.

COMMENTARY

Setting goals, reaching targets

ALFRED SLANETZ

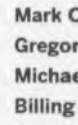
To the Cohasset Community, Faculty, Administration, Staff, Parents and Students,

As I complete my sixth year this week as a School Committee Member, I look back with pride and thank the Faculty, Administration, Staff, Parents and Students for all that has been accomplished to help Cohasset Schools provide an excellent education for all students to excel in life. In 2006, I worked with a number of dedicated school committee members to set a 5-year strategic plan and goals for the district to assure that each child achieved at or above their aptitude and had the opportunity to challenge themselves to their fullest. We wanted to assure the every Cohasset student would develop solid skills in reading writing and math, a firm understanding of science, technology, and a foundation with global perspective on history and culture of our international community. We strove to encourage a school where each child becomes the best version of them self and one which would be ranked within the top 10 in the State and top 100 in the country by multiple measures.

To drive the school towards this vision, we established a number of quantitative measures and targets. By setting these goals and empowering the Administration to achieve them our rankings have improved. While no one measure is perfect, we are achieving improvements by multiple measures. To name a few: In Boston Magazine, in 2004 we were 69th of 150 districts in the state, in 2008 we were 33rd and in 2010 we are 17th. In Business Week in 2004 we were not within the top 3000 schools in the country, in 2010 were 300th in the country and 3rd in the state. By MCAS, in 2004 we were 107th and 106th of 341 schools in the state in 10th grade Math and English respectively. By 2008 we were 26th in Math and 69th in English and in 2010 we were 2nd in Math and 21st in English. Additionally, the percent of students attending most competitive/ highly competitive colleges have increased as have the number of students participating and the competiveness of co-curricular activities such as debate team, drama and music competitions. Our athletics have always been competitive and continue to be strong.

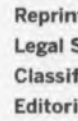
To accomplish these improvements we implemented differentiated instruction as our teaching model training our teachers to deliver each lesson in ways, which are optimal for each student's learning style. We held everyone to high standards and instituted employee reviews at every level. We assessed our student's achievement relative to their aptitude in reading and math using Stanford 10 tests. We aligned each of our curriculum areas K-12 with State, National and International Standards. In math, we provided professional development including hiring a math specialist for our elementary schools, purchased new textbooks and upgraded our K-12 scope and sequence so that Algebra I was completed before High School to clear the path for Calculus based Physics. Given the focus on reading and math, we added assessment (WRAP) to study and improve focus on the logic of writing, provided professional development and purchased new curriculum and textbooks for our K-12 reading and writing curriculum. In Special Education, we expanded inclusion based teaching, early assessment and in house early intervention program in our elementary schools to address points as they arose rather than upon first assessment in 4th grade. This decreased the number of 4th grade students requiring IEPs from 24 percent in 2004 to 12 percent in 2010. Finally we increased access to APs and honors level curriculum for students who wanted to challenge themselves quadrupling the number of students taking AP tests which maintaining an 80 percent or better pass rate and replacing a section of CP curriculum with honors track curriculum in the High School.

We accomplished all this and more without an override and without any layoffs (virtually every other school district in the state has implemented major layoffs). We installed a proper accounting system and, very simply, practiced fiscally conservative and sustainable budgeting together with savvy operational management. In every decision the children of Cohasset and our educational mission came first and budget was transferred into the classroom.



In Boston Magazine, in 2004 we were 69th of 150 districts in the state, in 2008 we were 33rd and in 2010 we are 17th. In Business Week in 2004 we were not within the top 3000 schools in the country, in 2010, we were 300th in the country and 3rd in the state.

It is my sincere hope that the progress continues. It is important to our students and to our community that we continue to nurture high educational quality for the 21stt century in a fiscally sustainable way. My heart and thoughts will be with you.



Alfred E. Slanetz, Ph.D., Vice-Chairman, Cohasset School Committee, lives at 14 Nichols Road.

MAKING TRACKS

Leaky joints can undermine a wall

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project — Once again, we will spend our time this week continuing to bring you up to date on the construction that took place during the winter to build the new channel next to the Legion building. This week we will review some of the last steps that took place to the precast channel sections as well as the installation of the gabions.

We spoke previously how the new concrete channel is made up of a series of precast concrete sections that key together, end to end, to make a continuous channel to carry the water to and from Jacobs Meadow. Since these channel section merely fit together the joints may not be watertight. If water from the channel is able to leak out, it can begin to wash away the supporting earth behind the concrete. This could cause deterioration of the wall due to a lack of structural support. In addition, water behind the wall can freeze and cause additional damage to the concrete channel wall. So, you can see that leaking joints could cause premature deterioration of our new culvert.

The contractor had to fill each of these joints with caulking material to make them watertight. Since the caulking was a special material made for this specific sealing purpose, the conditions under which it is applied was very important to assure a good seal. The area to which the caulk was applied had to be heated above the frigid winter temperatures to meet the material manufacturer's application requirements. The first photo shows the space to be caulked covered with tarpaulins and heated by a construction space heater. Only after the temperature reached an acceptable range could the caulking be applied. In the first photo you can see that the new channel was bone dry. To achieve this dry condition, the water that normally flows out of Jacobs Meadow had to be diverted by a dam. The dam can barely be seen at the far end of the photo. Pumps completed the bypass by pumping the water into a drain installed for this purpose near the edge of Elm Street.

At the northern end of the 128-foot-long concrete culvert an entirely different method was used to construct the channel walls. A series of wire baskets filled with stone were stacked up and side-by-side like giant bricks to form the wall sections. The stone filled wire baskets are called gabions. Why not just continue with concrete, you might ask? The answer is rather complex. The crux is that the meadow end of the culvert could not be designed with a permanent wall structure since we wanted the future flexibility to be able to reconfigure the area between the meadow itself and the concrete portion of the channel. Using gabions in this 90-foot-long channel section allows for this future flexibility, at lower cost, without the need to deal with a more permanent type of structure. Research shows that gabion life has been projected, in some applications, to exceed 50 years. Ours may be a bit less since we will have a partial salt-water environment, even though the wire baskets have an anti-corrosion coating.

The second photo shows the completed gabion walls in place on either side of the channel. The stakes that can be seen in the center of the water channel were used to set the proper grade for the channel floor. This was very important to assure proper functioning of that channel.

A Greenbush Reminder — There will be NO weekend service on the Greenbush Commuter train until further notice due the weekend tie replacement construction project currently under way from the Braintree to Boston section of the track. You may have seen an article in last week's Mariner outlining the size and scope of this effort.

Little Harbor Project Paving — This week we are meeting with the paving contractor to begin the work that will finally pave the last sections of Jerusalem Road, as well as several intersecting side roads. We plan to start grinding before the end of the month. The next steps will include a leveling course, where needed, and adjustment of the utility structures in the road. Final paving should happen early to mid June.

HEALTH NOTES

Differences in approach to goals

STEVE BOBO

The last Town Meeting was important for the Board of Health, since the town was allowed to continue its long standing plan to sewer high density parts of the entire town according to a rational plan, also demonstrated an important element in the town's ability to manage its fiscal responsibilities in an appropriate manner. The town needed to cope with a substantial amount of unfunded obligations and other fiscal mismanagement from a previous era, and now has responsible knowledgeable individuals in place to cope with such problems.

Ever worry about being left-handed? About your ability to balance your body in the face of a vastly different capability to do more with one side with your right vs. your left hand or vice versa? It's the physical comparison to balancing the cares of town government. A recent experiment involved 14 healthy participating volunteers ranging in age from 19 to 56 years without any observable gait deviations. A measure called lateral dominance was determined using an assessment method involving markers placed at points at the knee. A video/computer system measured velocity variables while the subjects walked at self-selected speeds along a 10-m walkway. Similar measurements were made at each joint over both legs and assessment of the characteristics of both left and right legs was made. Analysis of variance with repeated measurements revealed significant differences between limbs, across subjects in stance time and maximum knee extension. Results indicate that everyone walks slightly differently, but the same goal is achieved. This may be considered analogous to town politics? Assume we're all rational people interested in achieving the same goal, each with a different method of reaching it; there is little need to worry about slight differences in approach.

Not that our methods are perfect; all can stand improvement. Consider, for instance the Board of Health housing regulations. If anyone wants to pick on a Cohasset statute, why not choose one that may need improving?

Housing regulations may be a good choice. Cohasset standards apply to every owner-occupied or rented dwelling, dwelling unit, mobile dwelling unit or rooming house unit in Massachusetts that is used for living, sleeping, cooking and eating. Dwelling unit shall also mean a condominium unit. These regulations have the force of law. Local boards of health have the primary responsibility for their enforcement. The board has a brochure that summarizes those regulations. Chapter 2 pertains to essential living needs and describes enforcement procedures. In fact, the Board of Health has much free material on practically every regulation over which we have control.

For example, a kitchen must contain a kitchen sink, etc., bathroom facilities: water supply; hot water etc., heating: (i.e. supply and pay for) and keep in good working order the facilities capable of heating and lighting every habitable space. Also, the owner shall maintain all asbestos material that is used as insulation or covering on a pipe, boiler or furnace in good repair and free of defects, and insure that the foundation, floors, walls, etc. are safe and properly constructed. Furthermore, in a dwelling with one dwelling unit, the occupant is responsible for exterminating all rodents, cockroaches, skunks and insect infestation, etc. The owner of a dwelling is sometimes required to post a notice that is constructed of durable material and is no smaller than 20 square inches in size listing the owner's name, address and telephone number. We also sometimes need to post names and house numbers on our houses so people can find us. The Board of Health is specifically responsible for: Disease Control, housing sanitation, hazardous waste disposal, solid waste disposal, septage and garbage disposal, nuisances, food protection, swimming pool and beach sanitation, recreational camps for children, smoking regulations, private drinking water and irrigation wells, massage therapy, keeping of animals and vaccine distribution.

If anyone thinks they can save the town money by changing the language or coverage of any topics detailed in these regulations, please contact us with your draft proposal. There is little doubt that some town regulations could be improved and adjusted to save the town money. A part of the Selectmen's job and that of many town employees is to accomplish improvements aimed at just this end. Unfortunately, a small number of local public officials view positions they achieve as a job for their own benefit rather than a calling to find how a small town works and to benefit the town as well as all of its citizens.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

FOR THE RECORD

Teachers leave lasting impressions

GREGORY MATHIS

I find it interesting that days, weeks and sometimes months are set aside to acknowledge individuals, highlight historic events, draw attention to important health or social issues or just about anything else one can think of.

There are a couple of important "days" taking place this week, for instance.

Of course, Mother's Day is coming up on Sunday. Hopefully you knew that before reading this, especially if it's later in the week. You don't want to miss Mother's Day, right Mom?

One day you may have missed was National Teachers Day, which was Tuesday (May 3). Most of us — hopefully — had (or have) teachers who have been positive influences and inspired us along the way. I was fortunate enough to have many terrific teachers, but four come to mind as having a dramatic impact on the person I am today.

During middle school, my language arts teacher encouraged my interest in journalism by supporting an extracurricular project that allowed a couple of classmates and me to put together a "newspaper" for our class. It was before computers and copier machines as we know them today, so we used typewriters and a mimeograph machine to produce the paper. Talk about old school. But we put out several editions of the newspaper and the experience reinforced my interest in reporting. Thank you, Mr. Knox.

I had two influential teachers in high school. One was important because he continued to pique my interest in journalism and as the adviser for the high school newspaper, challenged me to take on real stories and held me to high standards. Thank you, Mr. Thorsen.

The other important high school teacher challenged me in a different way. As a quiet and somewhat introverted teenager, he helped bring me out of my shell. Some of the best days in class were spent talking about current events, as he allowed and encouraged his students to express opinions on various topics and events. It was an English class and we may have had Shakespeare or poetry on the lesson plan for the day, but the lively classroom discussions that ensued were terrific lessons in critical thinking, long before MCAS came into the picture. Thank you, Mr. Cohen.

I had several terrific professors in college, but one really stood out. In many ways, it was like being in Mr. Cohen's class. We had terrific classroom discussions and each student in his class was treated with respect. As brilliant as this professor is intellectually, he never dismissed an opinion and genuinely cared about what his students had to say. I took several classes with him throughout college and I'm a better person for having had the good fortune to cross his path. Thank you, Dr. Curley.

The politics of education — and teaching for that matter — seem to be different today than when I was in middle school, high school and college, but I like to think the principles are still the same. Like your mother, a teacher can make a huge difference in a person's life. So here's a belated Happy National Teachers Day to all the educators out there and thank you for all the work you do throughout the school year, year after year

ANNUAL TOWN MEETING

Winds of change

Turbine bylaw earns Town Meeting approval

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Since its unanimous approval at annual Town Meeting in 2008 the town's wind energy conversion bylaw has been the subject of much scrutiny, discussion and debate.

Under that zoning bylaw the Planning Board has reviewed two wind turbine projects; one was denied and another was approved, but now is facing a lawsuit. The controversial bylaw, which sets parameters for the building of large commercial-sized wind turbines, was reviewed and revised over the past year by the Alternative Energy Committee.

The amended bylaws set stricter requirements for turbine setbacks to property lines, lowered the maximum height, and clarified noise and flicker regulations.

It turned out the wind bylaw became the most discussed article of the day with debate continuing for more than an hour.

Underlying the bylaw amendments was a big picture question that became central topic of debate: does Cohasset really want wind turbines?

Some residents argued the bylaw changes were tantamount to excluding turbines from the Cohasset landscape, while others argued it enables appropriately proportioned turbines in the town.

Conrad Langenhagen, member of the Alternative Energy Committee, said the amended bylaw balances residents' concerns with the desire to have them in town.

"(This bylaw) welcomes wind power to the town of Cohasset with greater conditions and clarity," Langenhagen said.

Yet, the Planning Board, who recommended the article in a majority 3-1 vote, still seemed conflicted over the article.

"The degree of contention within the town over this issue during the first two hearings on wind turbines is nothing anyone should have to endure. This issue divides the town," said Planning Board chair Al Moore. He said voters should consider the bigger question of whether the turbines are even wanted in town.

Charles Samuelson, planning board member, said some changes had merit while others did not.

"These changes are pervasive and effectively eliminate the possibility of wind turbines in town," Samuelson said. He made a motion to indefinitely postpone the article. Later in the meeting that motion was defeated.

Several residents said the large wind turbine structures did not belong in Cohasset's largely residential community. Others said the amended bylaw provided appropriate limit to wind energy construction.

"The big issue is disproportion. I'm not concerned with the economic viability of a turbine. We're trying to get wind energy that's proportional and appropriate to Cohasset," said Chris Seebeck of Riverview Drive.

When it came down to a vote, after more than an hour of discussion, the article garnered the required two-thirds majority vote needed for approval. A round of applause erupted from a great portion of the audience.

Town operating budget approved

High debt service is a concern

Cohasset's chairman of the Advisory Board Sam Wakeman speaks about the fiscal 2012 budget and the extensive debt service facing the town over the next few years.

The town's budget, which was within the confines of Proposition 2-1/2, was approved with a two-thirds majority vote.

The town operating budget of $41,105,833, including water and sewer enterprise funds as well as the school department, includes expected tax levy $935,000 greater than the current fiscal year and an estimated 10 percent reduction in state aid.

Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard said the projections for fiscal 2012 are conservative and spending for the town departments reflects these conservative numbers. The budget included no rate increases for water and sewer rates.

This is the fifth consecutive year with a "no override" budget. Lombard brought forward an operating budget (not including water and sewer enterprise funds) of $33,379,854, which is an increase of $713,919, or 2.2 percent over fiscal 2011.

The school department budget of $15.732 million, a 2.4 percent increase ($368,000) over fiscal 2011, was approved.

Although the proposed budget was approved without any changes, Advisory Committee chair Sam Wakeman drew attention to the town's significant debt load.

The town is currently carrying more than $80 million in debt (including water and sewer enterprise funds), which translates to just over 20 percent of the town's entire operating budget. With interest, this debt number rises to $94 million. This percentage of debt service continues for the next six to seven years.

"We as a town have been just as irresponsible as the rest of the nation," Wakeman said. In fiscal 2012 leaves the town with little to no free cash and a general stabilization fund of less than $200,000.

"Fiscal 2012 leaves no leeway for lax management or irresponsibility," Wakeman said. "There's not safety valve left."

Wakeman said future capital projects involving borrowing would need to be fully and carefully vetted, as well as show long-term benefit to the town.

He called for all town boards to coordinate and integrate their decisions.

"Marching to the beat of your drummer will no longer be tolerated," Wakeman said.

Cohasset resident Leonora Jenkins asks a question about the budget from town meeting floor this past Saturday.

TOWN MEETING NOTEBOOK

Residents want warrant mailed

The Board of Selectmen put forth an article to make the mailing of Special Town Meeting warrants an option rather than a requirement according to the town bylaws. Selectmen chair Karen Quigley presented the article as a small "cost saving" measure. The printing and mailing of over 2,000 special town meeting warrants can cost thousands of dollars.

Quigley said instead the warrant would be posted in key town buildings as well as on the town's website.

Several residents voiced concern with the article. Jerusalem Road resident and former selectmen Gary Vanderweil called for an amendment to the article to make posting the warrant on the website part of the bylaw.

Agnes McCann of Doane Street said the article was "completely wrong-headed" and could prevent citizens from knowing about the town meeting. Because special town meetings come up on an irregular basis and it could be that some citizens would not know about the meeting.

Tom Gruber, Pratt Court resident, offered an alternative. Instead of mailing the entire warrant a postcard alerting citizens of the meeting be sent.

Chartis Tebbetts said special town meetings used to be called rarely and for very limited purposes, now they are called more regularly and to tackle big issues, like zoning.

Virginia Brophy of Beechwood Street made the final point.

"Everybody's time is on demand with a number of competing things. This town needs more involvement from its citizens, not less involvement. We need to be seeking citizens out, not the other way around...It's imperative there be a physical reminder to residents of something going on," Brophy said.

The motion was defeated in a majority vote.

CPC projects supported

Town Meeting unanimously supported the four recommendations for spending from the Community Preservation Committee. In those recommendations were two projects. First, $80,000 for the continued restoration of the town's vital records and archives put forth by the Town Clerk's Office. A new shelving system for the archives is also included in this item. A second project was a $109,000 (plus a $50,000 contingency amount) allocation to restore the library's roof.

Another recommendation authorized the setting aside of $80,000 to pay back an outstanding loan (when it comes due in 2015) for open space purchased to protect the watershed as well as to pay the debt service due this year on the open space purchase in the amount of $35,839.

Lastly, there was a "housekeeping" recommendation to put 10 percent of community preservation's revenues into each of its special accounts (historical preservation, open space and affordable housing).

Capital budget recommendations get OK

The Capital Budget Committee brought forth $212,400 of spending recommendations to the floor of Town Meeting. All were approved through single two-thirds majority vote. As a result of the approval, seven capital items/project will be purchased in the next fiscal year: kitchen equipment for the Osgood and Deer Hill schools ($15,000), computer server for regional dispatch center for the fire department ($10,000), resurfacing of the Milliken Field tennis courts and repair of retaining wall from the recreation department ($25,000), for the police department, jail cell upgrade ($20,000) and a marked cruiser ($31,000), new accounting software for town hall ($91,400) and permitting, engineering for Bound Brook dam/culvert repair ($20,000).

Town Clerk Marion Douglas took the minutes of Town Meeting for the last time on Saturday. She ie retiring after 19 years as Town Clerk.

Several voters asked questions related to the recommendation for a new accounting software system, including how it would be integrated with the school's accounting system.

In a related article, town meeting voted to place $513,876.46, comprised of debt roll-off and unexpended balances from prior appropriations, in the capital stabilization fund.

Reason for seeking office: Cohasset is at a serious crossroads and who sits on the Board of Selectmen will determine what road is taken. I advocate the road based on strong leadership, fiscal responsibility and reform. We must fix the structural, budgetary and management problems uncovered in the recent fiscal crisis and audit.

AN OPEN LETTER OF APOLOGY FROM THE ECONOMY

I'm sorry.

To state the obvious, it hasn't been pretty the last few years, especially for the job market.

I'm aware of the anger, and I don't blame you. This whole thing got away from me. But I think it's time we made a fresh start.

Here's what I propose:

1. If you have a job and you're happy with it, good for you. Keep it up.
2. If you're not happy in your job, it's time to rethink things. I'm not telling you to quit on the spot. But maybe there's a better job out there for you.
3. If you've taken a job that under normal circumstances you wouldn't have, my hat's off to you. You did what you had to do. But now maybe it's time to go back to doing what you do best.
4. If you don't have a job, again, I'm sorry. I know looking for a job can be, to put it nicely, challenging. But know this: it's not you, it's me. And if the recovery is here, I think you can lead the way.

So to everyone who's been affected the last few years, which is pretty much everyone, I accept complete responsibility. But now the ball is in your court. You have permission to move on with your life.

It's time to move forward, find a job you love and get back to work.

Sincerely,

x The Economy

Skippers win couple before big Abington game

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset baseball team was feeling pretty good heading into yesterday's big game at Abington.

Despite an 11-8 loss to Cardinal Spellman on Saturday in a non-league match, the Skippers had rebounded with convincing victories over Rockland and Carver, both in South Shore League games.

Cohasset beat Rockland 21-2, scoring 8 runs in the top of the first and never looking ack.

Jeff Cavanaro had four hits, knocked in three runs and scored three times, while Anders Goetz and Connor Goetz each had three hits.

Everyone in the starting lineup had a hit as Cohasset rapped 20 hits.

Drew Cobin allowd 2 runs and 3 hits in 5 innings of work and Shane Haggerty pitched a perfect sixth to close it out.

"Going into the game we weren't anticipating a one-sided game," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "Rockland has always been competitive up a division and in the Patriot League. I think we expected more."

Afanasiw said his hitters were pretty locked in either way.

"Every ball we hit was hit squarely," Afanasiw said. "Even our outs were shots. It was an impressive day swinging the bats. Rockland wasn't making errors. Our guys were hitting."

The Skippers followed that win with a 10-0 gem over Carver.

Cruising through three

Laxers set for challenges

By Susan N. Biddle
Special to the Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset girls lacrosse team had something of a working mid-season vacation this week, getting through the easiest stretch of its schedule and raising its record to 6-1 in games against Falmouth (19-12), Mashpee (17-1) and Quincy (24-4).

Of the three games, only Falmouth on April 29 was ever in doubt, as the visiting Clippers jumped out to a 3-0 lead before the homestanding Skippers ever had an offensive possession. Whitney Jaffe scored twice and Kelsey Erler tied it at 3, but Falmouth retook the lead just 8 seconds later and stretched it back to a three-goal edge with under nine minutes remaining in the first half.

That's when Cohasset took over, scoring six unanswered goals to take the game to the half with a 9-6 lead.

Cohasset extended its lead to 11-6 in the early going of the second half before Falmouth scored twice to narrow the gap. From there, a four-goal run by Cohasset pretty much put the game away, and the teams then traded goals until the game ended with the score Cohasset 19, Falmouth 12.

Cipolla led the Skippers in points on the day, with four goals and one assist. Erler added four goals, Jaffe had a 3-1 afternoon, and Alexander had her hat trick Freshman Lexa Grasz notched two goals and Katherine Dunn and Olivia Murphy each had one score.

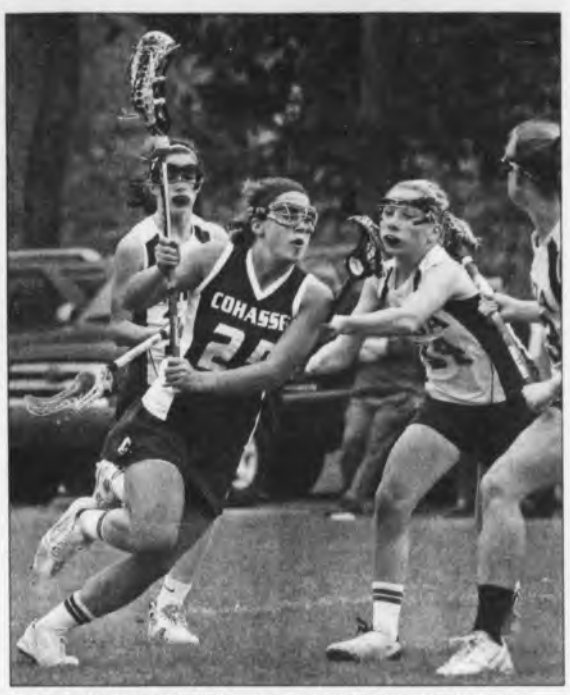
Stephanie Brierley made 11 saves in the Cohasset net.

On May 2, South Shore League rival Mashpee came to Cohasset as the lowest-rated varsity team in Massachusetts, according to LaxPower.com. In fact, that service was predicting that Cohasset would beat the visiting Falcons by 41, and there was a brief time in this game when that kind of blowout looked possible.

Mashpee started nine freshmen or sophomores, and it showed, as Cohasset scored five times in the first 1:13, and averaged better than a goal per minute in racing to a 17-1 lead just 16:42 into the first half. From there, however, Cohasset went into a stall, and the team played the entire second half with players working the ball with their weaker hands and not attacking the net, allowing Mashpee to escape with a 17-1 loss.



Kelsey Erler had four goals, Angela Cipolla had three goals and one assist, and Kristen Alexander had two goals and two assists to lead the way. Whitney Jaffe, Hope Kissick, Olivia Murphy, Taylor Kennedy, and freshmen Katherine Dunn, Maddie Curley and Lexa Grasz all scored single goals. Junior Olivia Franklin netted her first varsity goal in the game and Sage Stebbins added one assist.

Junior Stephanie Brierley and sophomore Kylie Coffman shared the goaltending duties and combined for four saves.

Two days later, it was nearly the same story when the Quincy Presidents rolled into Cohasset; like Mashpee, the team was in sniffing distance of the bottom of the LaxPower rankings, and it showed.

Kelsey Erler scored twice in the game's first 30 seconds, and while Quincy answered with a goal off the ensuing draw, Cohasset hit for the game's next seven goals en route to a 17-3 halftime lead. The second half was more of the same, with Cohasset outscoring Quincy 7-1 before stalling away the rest of the game time.

Erler led Cohasset with seven goals on the day, followed by Hope Kissick's six-goal performance. Katherine Dunn had two goals and two assists, while Whitney Jaffe and Kristen Alexander both added two goals and one assist. Senior Olivia Murphy and freshman Lexa Grasz each had a goal with two assists. Juniors Nicole Hajjar and Olivia Franklin each contributed a goal and an assist, and Sage Stebbins scored a goal for Cohasset.

Stephanie Brierley and Kylie Coffman combined for seven saves in the net.

The party of easy opponents stopped for Cohasset as this article was going to press, with the Skippers slated to host Duxbury on May 5.

In boys action, Cohasset picked up a nice 12-4 win over Scituate on Wednesday night to improve the Skippers to 10-3.

The boys will be back in action on Saturday at 5 p.m. at Lincoln-Sudbury.

Toros win Fall Season championship

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Correspondent

A snowstorm forced the postponement of the South Coastal Hockey League's Fall Season championship to this past Sunday and it was worth the wait for the Toros in the Legends Div.

Paul Brinkman scored the only goal in the shootout and goalie Ken Menkello of Pembroke came up with some big stops in the shootout as the Toros defeated the Stingers, 2-1.

It was the Toros' second Legends Div. title.

James Ward of Norwell scored assisted by Gerry DeLuca to give the Toros a 1-0 lead in the first period, but Joe Murray also of Norwell tipped in a rebound to tie the game for the Stingers in the second period. Alan smith of Marshfield and John Scag assisted on the Murray goal.

Stingers goalie Mark Frano of Pembroke had 35 saves many of them at point blank range in the game.

The Classics Div. title belonged to the Rangers as Marshfield's Tom Smith scored two first period goals as they rolled to a 5-1 win over the Canadiens.

Pembroke's Daron Jacobs and Jeff Uva had a goal and an assist each for the Rangers. Rockland's Jim O'Toole also scored for the Rangers.

Glen Harnisch of Marshfield scored for the Canadiens in the second period to bring them within two, 3-1, but O'Toole and Jacobs replied 17 seconds apart to give the Rangers control of the game.

The title was the Rangers fifth in the South Coastal Hockey League

Jamie Faber threw a complete game, striking out 6, while giving up 3 walks and 5 hits. He threw just 89 pitches in the shutout.

"It was a very good pitching performance from Jamie," Afanasiw said. "He was mixing speed and locations very well. We also made some stellar defensive plays behind him. In the fourth, they had second-and-third with two out. Jeff Cavanaro ws playing second with Jamie pitching and Jeff made a diving stab to his left. We were up 5-0, but if that ball gets off his glove, it's 5-2. It took the wind out of their sails."

Cohasset struck first in that game, scoring 5 in the first inning, fueled by a 3-RBI double from Connor Goetz.

Goetz finished with two hits and 4 RBI.

Anders Goetz rapped three hits with 3 RBI.

In the 11-8 Cardinal Spellman loss, Faber started and left the game after three innings with a 6-2 lead.

The bullpen couldn't hold it.

"It was frustrating," Afanasiw said. "We had the lead and could have won the game, but it was a non-league game and we wanted to have Jamie ready for the league game (Rockland). To Spellman's credit, they got back in it and did a good job."

With the Carver win, Cohasset improved to 7-3, but were 7-0 in South Shore League play heading into Thursday's showdown with Abington.

The Green Wave were also undefeated in South Shore League play.

Also over the weekend, Afanasiw had some fun throwing out the first pitch at the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association Opening Day ceremony.

"It was pretty cool," Afanasiw said of the honor. "There was a great turnout. It was a good morning. It was great seeing the kids running around. The high school kids seem so removed from it, but they were there and they had their old hats. You could hear them all telling stories about their days. They still remember those games, what was the count, who was on base. It was enjoyable to see."

YOUTH LACROSSE

U13 White downs Hingham Grey

Cohasset U13 White met Hingham Grey Sunday under perfect game conditions at the Deer Hill School. On a hunch after reviewing scouting reports, coaches shook up the starting lineup to try and tighten up the defense and spread the offense around. The result was a 12-4 win with 8 different Cohasset laxers hitting the back of the net. Marcella Flibotte had 3 goals, 1 assist, Elle Hansen had 2 goals 2 assists, Margaret Norton had 2 goals, Olivia Coveney, Margo Robbins, Nadiya Roy, Holly Maher and Emma Humphrey had one goal apiece. Goaltender Jenny Wolfe had 5 saves. Cohasset White remains undefeated at 4-0.

Girls U13 Blue Squad plays Norwell

Cohasset and Norwell played a back and forth game of run and gun with lots of fast transitions and never more than a goal or two difference. Although we came up short with a final score of 8-7, Cohasset was seconds away from scoring when the final whistle blew.

Kaitlin McGovern volunteered for goal duty in the first half and was amazing, then contributed 1goal and 1assist in the second half. Kate McCarthy filled in her usual goalie spot in the second half with several awesome saves and nice accurate clearing passes. Libby Mullaney netted 2 goals, Ellie Jackisch had 1goal and 1assist, Abby Thomas netted one as did Olivia Gomez and Minnie Stavis. Lilly Astino assisted, along with Olivia Sanderson, Maggie O'Donnell, and Lauren Cunning. It's tough to take a loss but it will only make us stronger.

Bestselling author Nathaniel Philbrick to speak in Cohasset

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

Nathaniel Philbrick

Cohasset is in for a real treat on Tuesday, May 17. The Cohasset Library Trust will host New York Times bestselling author, Nathaniel Philbrick at 7 p.m. at Cohasset High School Auditorium. Philbrick will be speaking as part of the Cohasset Library Trust Speaker's Program, which focuses on bringing distinguished authors to the Cohasset Community.

Philbrick is the author of In the Heart of the Sea: The Tragedy of the Whaleship Essex; Mayflower; Sea of Glory: America's Voyage of Discovery and The Last Stand: Custer, Sitting Bull and the Battle of Little Bighorn.

Philbrick's visit will coincide with Paul Pratt Memorial Library's 2011 Cohasset Reads Together Program, which encourages all town residents to read one of his most beloved books, In the Heart of the Sea.
Philbrick lives on Nantucket and is an avid sailor. He took some time out of his busy book tour schedule to speak about libraries, writing and the influence of both in his life. He answered the following questions for us.

What role do libraries play in your life?

When I moved to Nantucket I was home with our two young kids. The library, the Nantucket Antheneum, saved my life. It was a great refuge for all of us. That library, and all libraries are absolutely essential to not only being a parent but also being an author. When it came to the research of Away Offshore it was before the internet. I did a tremendous amount inter-library "loans" and could never have written the book without the help of the reference librarian or that ability to share the resources of other libraries. Coincidentally, my mother in law is a retired Falmouth Middle School librarian. In fact she's speaking at the American Library Association Meeting in New Orleans this year.

What do you think is the purpose of the library? How are they evolving?

As everything seems to be shrinking, including the number of independent bookstores, it is the people who staff the library who become who become more and more important to the public. Librarians themselves are on the front lines for readers.

Do you think libraries are less important than they used to be?

Years ago I thought that virtual libraries were the future, but now I think there will always be a need for a physical place for books. I'm very relieved. My kids are now 29 and 25 and they still read traditional paper books. Obviously the new technology has to be accommodated. I myself have a Kindle and an ipad. There are times when technology is very useful but find myself happiest when just reading a traditional book. I'm not quite sure where it's headed.

The important thing to remember is that what society desperately needs more of are "meeting grounds." Libraries are ever more important so that people have a place to discuss ideas and books and gather to share information and to simply get out of the house.

There is also the idea that librarians in the future are more advisors. Sometimes they are just the ones to say "have you seen this new book?" or to guide you in the right direction in a way that technology cannot. On Nantucket there are a lot of people for whom English is a second language and our library offers many language courses. It's an invaluable asset in any community that goes beyond books.

You live on Nantucket. Clearly you have a love of the ocean. Was it a welcome departure to write about the American West?

I'm associated with the sea. Everyone thinks of the wilderness as the West but before that the wilderness was the ocean. I wanted to trace what began as the English/Native conflict. Where did that lead me? Ultimately to the Battle of Little Big Horn. I was ready to take that leap. This book is more like a culmination than a departure. Nantucket and pursuing whales is very similar to Lacona and Cheyenne pursuing buffalo. In fact, Mayflower is a book that only has one chapter at sea. It ends with King's Philips War...a terrible war. It's all about America.

How long does it take you to write a book?

Usually three years. The Last Stand was four years because I had to spend so much time out West doing research. The first year is about research and the bibliography. I gain a rough sense of where I want to go with the writing. The 2nd year I write. Each chapter requires a new burst of research and gradually I'll work chapter by chapter. Then it takes another year to get it ready for publication.

You were also an editor of a sailing magazine. Which do you think is easier? Writing or editing?

I love to write...it's the part I enjoy. The challenge of writing about history is that I'm moving on to a topic that I really don't know anything about. The level of immersion means I'm predominantly in the archives and reading, and NOT writing for that phase. It is necessary, and I can get pent up and just want to get going before I'm actually ready. However, once there is a draft I enjoy the editing process. I'm lucky that I have had the same editor since the Heart of the Sea.

My dad was an English professor. Books and writing were part of the air that I breathed as a child. However, I was a typically rebellious adolescent and didn't want to necessarily follow that path. After college I went to grad school for English for a year and got frustrated by being in the library and classroom all the time. I needed to get out there in the world and interact. Writing about history is what interests me. In the journalistic sense I'm drawn to it because it's about life lived.

Philbrick's talk is open to the public and all are encouraged to attend. Tickets are a $10 donation and available at Buttonwood Books, Paul Pratt Memorial Library, or online at cohassetlibraryphilbrick.eventbrite.com.

GUEST EDITORIAL

Changing world of nursing

By Diane Gilworth, R.N., MPH, NP
Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates

The future for nurses and nurse practitioners is not just about surviving the next round of health care reform — it is about thriving.

As doctors, hospitals and other health care providers, through what are called accountable care organizations (ACOs), align financial incentives to improve health outcomes, nurses and nurse practitioners should stand at the forefront. The strength in ACOs lies in the development of new teams that leverage the talent and expertise of all clinicians, from hospital to the office practice.

Nurses and nurse practitioners have played the role of care giver and coach for years. It is common for patients to develop close bonds with nurses, and in the process nurses develop a unique understanding of the patient's needs.

Understanding the true needs of patients will be foundational for ACO teams to develop alternatives of care beyond the hospital for high-risk elderly patients, new types of office visits for patients who routinely seek care in emergency rooms, and ultimately new community-based outreach programs to combat the rising pediatric and adolescent obesity and type II diabetes rates.

ACOs cannot achieve the triple aim outlined in the Institute for Healthcare Improvement's goals: to improve population health, improve individual health and decrease per capita costs, without actively engaging the nursing workforce. Nurses and nurse practitioners must step beyond the silent assistant role to physicians and actively pursue solutions to our most vexing health care problems.

The solutions will not be highly technical. Rather, the solutions will be about developing continuous healing relationships with patients, and nurses are best positioned to do this. Patients will need help deciphering complex medication regimens and in some cases nurse practitioners may help to simplify regimens.

Nurses will need to spend more time with patients and their care givers, coaching them during all transitions, easing the process from hospital to discharge, assessing them in their homes, and helping to coordinate home-based services. Specialized case management programs are already beginning to realize the importance of providing horizontal care across the entire continuum of care.

As the shortage of primary care physicians (PCP) worsens, there will be a need for more nurse practitioners to see patients in clinic settings and at home. Reducing the high hospital readmission rate for Medicare patients will require that patients have urgent and semi-urgent medical issues taken care of in the comfort of their own homes. This is not only more cost-effective health care, it is also better care which encompasses a holistic understanding of the patient's life and health care needs. During hospitalization, nurses and nurse practitioners will bridge the communication gap that commonly occurs between the hospitalist (doctors who specialize in treating patients while they are in the hospital), patient, care givers and primary care physicians.

It is probably too early to fully understand the effects of health care reform for nurses. ACOs have created new opportunities within the team, and there are new funding opportunities for nursing education and reimbursement changes for nurse practitioners. Most importantly, health care reform will move nurses out of the shadows, and nurses who seize upon this opportunity will most assuredly transform health care.

How to become a nurse

GateHouse News Service

There are many levels of nursing for those interested in entering the industry. Here is information on education, duties and salary for some of the most popular levels:

Certified nursing assistant:

Students with a high school degree can begin CNA training at hospitals, colleges or online. Training can take only months, and state certification exams are necessary upon completion. CNAs can take further courses to become LPNs.

Licensed practical nurse:

LPNs go to school for about a year, and their work is usually supervised by a registered nurse. Many LPNs pursue RN education later. On average, an LPN can earn around $31,000-$45,000 a year.

Registered nurse:

RNs can attend nursing school for two years to receive an associates degree or four years to obtain a bachelor of science in nursing degree. If a nursing student already has a bachelor's degree in another field, it could take as little as one year to obtain a BSN or three years to receive a nursing doctorate.

Advanced practice registered nurse:

APRNs receive a master's degree on top of a BSN or other degree. APRNs can work as nurse practitioners, who act independently of physicians; certified nurse midwives; clinical nurse specialists, who diagnose and treat illnesses; and certified registered nurse anesthetists. APRNs may be required to earn doctorate degrees — coursework for which could take up to seven years to complete — starting in 2015. APRNs in some specialties must also be licensed and board-certified in their states. Average salary for an APRN is around $78,000 a year, $89,634 a year for nurse practitioners.

What to know about nursing education:

■ Make sure the school or program you choose is accredited by the National League for Nursing Accreditation Commission or the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education, the most widely recognized nurse accreditation organizations in the U.S.

■ Some schools require an admission test called the National League for Nursing Pre-Admission Exam. Learn more at www.nln.org or the National Council of State Boards of Nursing website, www.ncsbn.org.

■ Upon completing nursing coursework, you likely will have to take licensing exams for your state.

■ Some hospitals and junior colleges offer nursing diploma programs that require two to three years of study.

NATALIE DIGNAM

Welcome back CHS! After a well-deserved break, we're back in school for the last stretch. The senior countdown is up and it's finally not raining! The student council ice cream fundraiser, which raises money for the senior class, is still a favorite at CHS.

Also, we're back in the senior lounge after a difficult duration in the cafeteria. The culprits of the senior food fight are being dealt with severely for their crimes. In other news, Friday April 22nd was the annual Big Blue Goes Green cleanup on Bassing Beach. Thanks to all the Cohasset residents and CHS students, especially the lacrosse team, for their help.

And speaking of Green, May 20th is ride-your-bike-to-school day! If you don't have a bike, razor scooters and heelies are still cool and can be easily parked in the student parking lot.

Also, CHS is still giving back with Coins for Cures. We've raised $98 in the past 2 weeks, so keep giving! Coin jars are located at the cashiers in the cafeteria. This week, art mag met after school on Tuesday and is wrapping up this year's Art Mag. A reminder to CHS artists that the Arts Festival is coming up, so don't forget to submit your work.

CHS this week is all about A.Ps, and a hush has fallen over the still halls of academia. Just kidding, its business as usual at CHS and everyone is impatient with being stuck inside. Scandalously, all of the A.P. answer sheets, with students' I.D. numbers and some social security numbers, have been reported "stolen". I don't really know when CHS students turned to crime, but apparently A.P. answer sheets are in high demand, or else "stolen" actually means "lost". That's all for this week CHS, enjoy the spring weather!

Natalie Dignam is a senior at CHS; her column runs weekly during the school year.

Young musicians appreciate jazz!

To celebrate Jazz Appreciation Month in April, the Middle and High School jazz ensembles came together to put on a show. "A Journey Through Jazz" featured a variety of tunes from the past 10 decades, along with a multimedia presentation of historical videos clips and sound recordings.

Highlights included an improv jam session, a new student composition and both vocal and instrumental solos. Music teachers John DeWaal and Stephanie Moriarty orchestrated the event but still made time to pick up their own instruments – trumpet and clarinet/saxophone, respectively – and joined in several numbers alongside students.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 16, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A once-harmonious relationship appears to be hitting some sour notes. Spend some time together to see why things have gone off-key. What you learn might surprise you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You feel a need to make some changes. Good — you can do it on a small scale (some new clothes, for example), or go big and redecorate your home and/or office.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Control your tendency toward early boredom. A situation in your life might be taking a long time to develop, but patience pays off. Stay with it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel that you're on an emotional roller coaster this week. Don't fret; just ride it out and let things settle down. A Pisces shows understanding.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Do something different for once — compromise. A stubborn stand on an important issue proves counterproductive. You need to be open to new ideas.

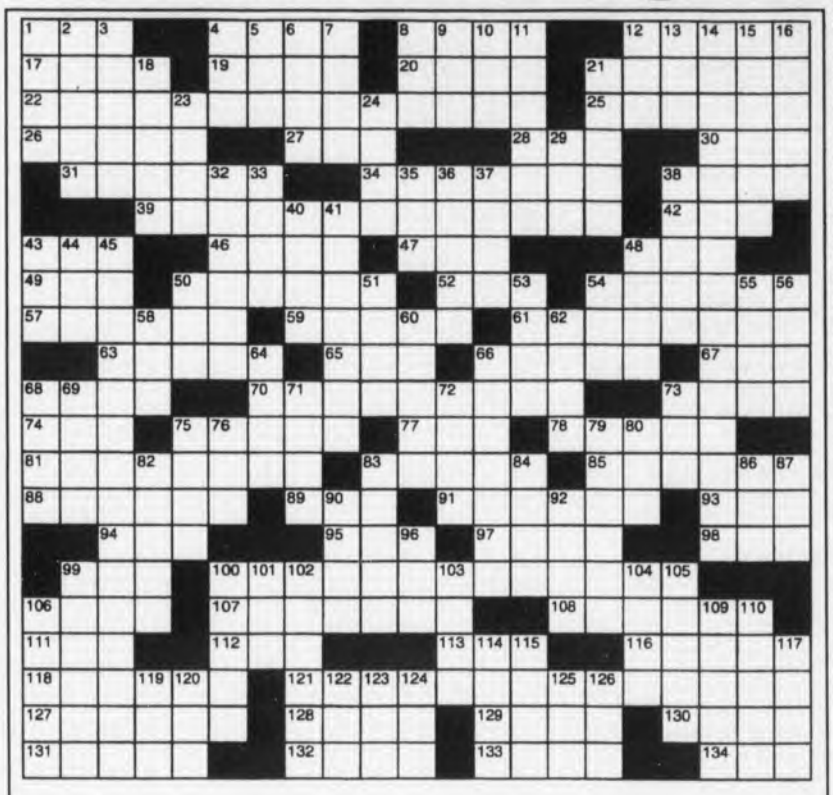
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A friend offers advice that you perceive as an act of betrayal. But before you turn against the messenger, pay attention to the message.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A year of riding an emotional pogo stick finally settles down. Use this calmer period to restore frayed relationships and to pursue new opportunities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your words can sting, so be careful how you respond to a friend's actions. A calm approach could produce some surprising facts.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Be careful about whose secrets you're being asked to keep. They could impose an unfair burden on a straight arrow like you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While you prefer taking the tried-and-true course in life, be adventurous this week and accept a challenge that can open new vistas.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your strong sense of justice helps you deal with a job- or school-related situation. Stay with your principles. A Sagittarius emerges as a supporter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You need to build a stronger on-the-job support system to convince doubting colleagues that your innovative proposals are workable.

BORN THIS WEEK: You might not say much, but you're capable of extraordinary achievements. You are a loyal friend and a devoted family

Level: Challenging

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

SENIOR SCENE

Lunch speakers share tips, information

LOUISE SMULLEN

The speaker at one of the luncheon seminars was Jody Hodgden, Volunteer Coordinator of South Shore Elder Services. Her topic was Elder Money Management. Sometimes as we grow older we may experience some confusion when it comes to bill-paying and in reconciling bank statements. S.S.E.S. has a free program whereby a volunteer will come to the home of a qualified person to help with the above. They can also help with budgeting and spending wisely. All volunteers have been carefully screened.

At another seminar Victoria Clappi, O.T., and Kelley Dugan, P.T., of Braintree Rehab were the speakers. Their topic was stroke education and wellness after stroke. They went into great detail about the signs of a stroke, types of stroke and risk factors.

Braintree Rehabilitation Hospital has an excellent program designed and run by licensed physical, occupational, and speech therapists. This is for people who have suffered a stroke and need help with their recovery.

Cohasset High School boys' championship basketball team joined the seniors at lunch in April. Of course, we ladies loved being among so many tall, handsome young men. Two of them sat at our table and were absolutely charming. Their coach introduced the boys and said a few words about each one. Some of our volunteers have grandsons on the team.

The Cohasset Coffee Café is off to a good start, with many coming to enjoy the fellowship. There is always room for more, and we'd like to see you there. Make a note of it – every Monday morning from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Lightkeepers – a beautiful setting.

All diners at the Wednesday luncheon before Easter received a lovely bunny basket filled with candies. These were made by Elinor Campbell, who has done this now for several years. Thank you, Elinor.

Officer Gregg Harnett of the Cohasset Police Department spoke about crime prevention at one Wednesday seminar. He was accompanied by Officer Pat Reardon and by Joe Canavan from the Norfolk County Sheriff's department. Gregg especially stressed types of crime committed against elders. Of course, everybody should keep their house and car doors locked and should not leave wallets and purses in plain sight. This is just one way to prevent theft. It seems that almost every week I read in the news about objects being stolen during the night from an unlocked car or from the seat of a car when the driver runs for a moment into the post office or on some other quick errand. Gregg also told us procedures to take if we receive a suspicious phone call.

Last Thursday the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs treated the volunteers to a luncheon at Atlantica in appreciation of their time given. One doesn't realize just how many there are until one sees them gathered together in one place. Since last July they have given freely over 6,500 hours of time.

Haven't' we had a run of perfectly beautiful days? Now if it doesn't get too hot too soon... Enjoy springtime and notice the beauty all around.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

SAILING CLUB

Racing team has two new coaches

ELIZABETH MURRY

My spirit soars over ocean tracts, the world's expanse,
Where the whales plough their paths through the deep.
It comes back to me eager and unsated,
Calling in my ears and urging my unresisting heart
To launch upon the whale's road.
— "The Seafarer," Anonymous Anglo-Saxon

One of the most famous Old English poems, this modern excerpt from "The Seafarer" captures the ocean's timeless lure. Fostering a love of sailing, and through the sport a small portion of mastery over the sea, is the mission of the Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC), which offers sailing instruction for the town's residents aged 10 years and over. Completion of the four-year Junior sailing program means teens are eligible to join the racing team, the focus of this week's article.

Luke Johnston sums up what the CSC experience has meant to him: "Over the past five years I have had a great time learning how to sail and bringing my passion for the sea to life. I love the ocean and being able to learn how to sail really helped me pursue a passion and meet many new friends. One of my most favorite experiences was the capsize test first and second year. In the beginning I was nervous and afraid, but after the first run I had such great fun I couldn't wait to do it again. It has been great to sail with friends and learn more about sailing, but this upcoming summer is the real deal. I am looking forward to the race team with an eager mind because I love competition, and though it will be different for me I am sure I will have lots of fun competing in one of my favorite activities: sailing."

The racing program accelerates the acquisition of more advanced techniques and strategies and uses the CSC's 420s. Students will train five days a week and qualifying sailors will compete in regattas along the coast on weekends and sometimes during the week. The most important point that the CSC wants to stress is that if a teen is qualified to race they are welcome to race. There are no formal tryouts or informal vetting procedures, as is sometimes the case with other sports.

There are two new racing team coaches this year, one of whom will already be familiar to Junior and adult sailors who have taken lessons over the past few years. Danielle Sookiasian, an experienced CSC instructor and a four-year veteran of the racing team, is taking over as head coach. She started in the Junior program when she was a 10-year-old, has raced the Club's 420s since she was 13, and is now a Cohasset High senior who will be majoring in science at the University of Rochester this fall. Bob Deutsch, the former commodore and adult program coordinator, described her as one of the best sailors of any age he has known — Danielle was essentially the head instructor for the adults in 2010. Nicknamed "D," she earned her Level 1 sailing certification last summer. Danielle writes that "Last year I helped start the collaborative sailing team at Cohasset High School with Hull High School and the South Shore Charter Public School. We had the opportunity to compete in the Mass Bay Championships, along with many other fleet and team races against teams from both Massachusetts and Maine. I was voted captain of this team both my junior and senior year." This is not surprising — anyone who has met Danielle cannot help but be impressed with her maturity and competence. The racing team is really lucky to have her as a coach and role model this season. Christa McCourt will be serving as the assistant coach. A Scituate native who is finishing her first year at Colby College, as a child she started out sailing Optis at the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club. When Christa was 12, she joined the SHYC's 420 race team, which she belonged to through the 2009 season. Last year she taught 420s for the Scituate Recreation Department.

More information on the race team and the Junior and adult instructional programs are posted at the CSC's website: www.cohassetsailingclub.com, where you can print out membership applications and program registration forms. Please note that Registration Weekend takes place next week. We request that you turn in these forms in person, either on Saturday, May 14 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. or on Sunday, May 15 from noon to 2 p.m. at the clubhouse on Government Island.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

SPECIALTY CAMPS & CAMPS FOR SPECIAL POPULATIONS: (PART 2)
THE CAMP EXPERIENCE IS SPECIAL! BUT, NOTE WHAT THE WORD "SPECIAL" MEANS AT CAMP

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

Part 2 of this article is continued from last week's Camp Directory

Specialty Camps – Some children have an interest or passion and an emerging aptitude and skill level in a particular program area. The fine and performing arts, computers, sports, and adventure (tripping (white water rafting, hiking, biking, and the like) are some popular types of specialty camp. Specialty camp can be a great way to explore and further a specialized interest in a community of like-minded adults and children who just love the interest area. While there are many ways to provide specialized programming – living, breathing, eating, sleeping the sport, art, adventure or other specialty is certainly the most common approach. There are two primary models of this sort of camp: a specialty camp which is single focus and a specialty session within a camp that might have other areas of focus. The specialty is almost always reflected in the name of the camp itself or the name of the program. When choosing a camp like this, find out how the day is structured. What activities, if any don't involve the area of specialty? Staff should know all about the area of specialty and the teaching approach should be well-articulated in the camp's print and online information. But what do these specialists know about camp and about child development? Expertise in the specialty area is critical; knowledge about creating camp communities and about child development should be a priority also!

Family Camp – These camp environments or sessions are focused on fostering family connections. Whether at a dedicated family camp, where the camp offers family sessions all summer long or at the family camp sessions that happen at the end of the season at traditional children's camps, most often after the campers leave and before Labor Day and fall arrive, the programming has been designed with the entire family in mind. The schedule (including family time vs. individual time), the program offerings, and the entire vibe of the experience happen because special attention is paid to fostering family experiences and adventures. That doesn't mean that families don't bond with other families – they certainly do! (And then they try to return to camp at the same time in subsequent summers.) What it does mean is that families can expect to bond and grow with their own family members. It's possible to search for a camp for the whole family in our online Find A Camp tool: www.ACANewEngland.org/findacamp/index.htm

Religious-Affiliated Camp – If you are looking for a camp with a particular religious focus, you'll find different styles of religious-specialty camp options. Some are more observant than others, and many are open to campers outside the religion. Some have services that campers attend while others might be more informal in the practice of the religion. Camps in this category do an excellent job of outlining their philosophies so families can explore how the camp experience might enhance the religious education a child already receives.

It's possible to search by religious affiliation in our online Find A Camp tool: www.ACANewEngland.org/findacamp/index.htm.

Budget transfers

Each year, as the town's fiscal year nears a close, there are some line items that have a surplus and others that have a deficit.

To correct this issue, both the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee have to approve the interdepartmental transfers.

Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard brought forward a request for five budget line item transfers totaling $54,800. Read the story to find out which accounts came up a little short.

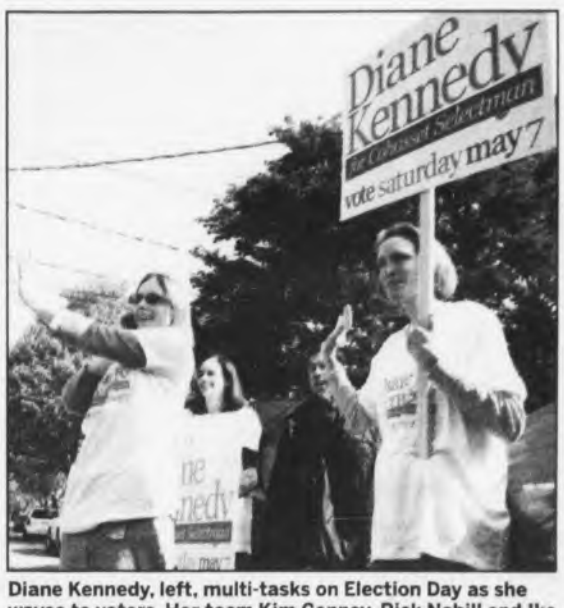
The US Marine Corps has the slogan: "The Few. The Proud. The Marines."



That slogan fits 18-year-old Christian Quebec of Cohasset to a "T."

The Few: The Cohasset High senior is about to ascend to the rank of Eagle Scout, the highest rank attainable in Boy Scouts. Only about 5 percent of scouts reach Eagle status.

The Proud: Christian, who got involved with scouting, as a Tiger Cub

Kennedy, Koed win town election

32 percent voter turnout

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

"I loved talking to people, finding out what makes them tick and what they are concerned about."
Selectman Diane Kennedy

It has been a whirlwind few weeks for the four candidates for the Board of Selectmen. They covered a lot of ground within Cohasset's 10 square miles, met with scores of voters, and discussed the many issues facing the town and its residents.

When the dust settled at Saturday's Election Day, it was a new face and a familiar face that earned the two open seats on the Board of Selectmen.

Newcomer Diane Kennedy topped the ticket receiving a total of 1062 votes; Fred Koed trailed that number by 249 votes to return to his seat on the Board of Selectmen for a fifth term (813 votes). Incumbent Karen Quigley, who was seeking her second term, and Mary Snow, came in third (714 votes) and fourth place (514 votes), respectively.

There were 430 blanks for the Board of Selectmen race, an indication that there was some "bullet voting" in which a voter only votes for one candidate even though there was a four-way race for two seats.

There was a lot of interest in this campaign as it was the first contested selectmen's race in four election cycles. The race, which was the only one on the ballot, likely helped to bring out a greater than predicted percentage of voters. A total of 1770 voters, or about 32 percent, cast a ballot on Saturday.

Both Kennedy and Koed took their seats at the Selectmen's table on Tuesday night.

Little Harbor project roads to be paved

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Flowers are blooming, trees have leaves, temperatures are warming; in short, springtime is in full effect. This time of year doesn't just mean leaving the house without a jacket — it means it's time for roadwork to get back into full swing.

Starting as early as next week paving equipment will be seen on Jerusalem Road to finish the last of the paving left over from Little Harbor sewer project. Jerusalem Road from its intersection with Atlantic Avenue to North Main Street (excluding the Jerusalem Road causeway) will be paved in the coming weeks.

This comes as welcome news to residents of the area who have had to frequently traverse the bumpy road for almost two years. The rest of the affected portion of Jerusalem Road was paved last year.

"The number of phone calls we and other people in Town Hall have gotten on this issue is just unbelievable. This paving is going to make a lot of people happy," said Tom Gruber, spe-

WHAT IS GOING ON HERE?

Speed board cropping up again

What is happening
Along with spring flowers, the Cohasset police speed board is poking its head up around town.

The device, which was purchased 4-1/2 years ago with grant money, records the speed a motorist is traveling and also displays the speed limit for the particular stretch of roadway.

History
Back in 2006, the $8,500 radar trailer was purchased through grant money from two sources, the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau, which rewarded the town for participating in various traffic safety initiatives such as the "Click it or Ticket" campaigns, and through a Community Policing grant from the Executive Office of Public Safety.

What does it do
The display on the trailer tells drivers how fast they are going, but if they are speeding a blue light also flashes.

Quote
"The radar board is a great tool to remind drivers of just how fast they are traveling," Chief Mark DeLuca said. "Life is so fast paced that I truly believe people don't realize just how fast they're going and the board prompts people to drive more responsibly."

Ted Carr elected Selectmen Chairman

The first order of business at Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen's meeting was to reorganize. A new chairman and vice chair were voted.

Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard took over the meeting to take nominations for Board of Selectmen chairman. Selectmen Leland Jenkins nominated Selectmen Ted Carr. By a vote of 5 to 0, Carr's chairmanship was approved.

"Thank you, I am very glad to serve," Carr said. Carr served as chairman once before in 2008 to 2009 and is in the final year of this second term as selectman.

Carr then entertained nominations for vice chair. Selectman Paul Carlson nominated Jenkins for the role. Jenkins refused the nomination.

"I don't feel I have sufficient time to take on this responsibility," Jenkins said.

Selectman Fred Koed, who was re-elected on Saturday to a fifth term, nominated Carlson as vice chair. His nomination got unanimous approval from the board. Carlson served as vice chair last year as well.

"I'm looking forward to doing what I can," Carlson said.

Raccoon incident leads to rabies warning

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A caller reported to police at about 10:28 p.m. on Saturday (May 7) that her kids had lured a raccoon into a dog crate and she wanted to know what to do with it. She was going to leave the raccoon at police headquarters but decided to leave it at Whitney Woods, police said. Officers met her at the Whitney Woods parking lot. Police remind residents that it is illegal to trap wild animals. Police said in this case, there was no malicious intent. They also warned there is rabies in Cohasset and any wild animal acting strangely might be rabid.

Lawnmower

Charges were dismissed without prejudice against a 57-year-old Cohasset man, who allegedly ran into a neighbor with a lawnmower before getting into a wrestling match with the neighbor, at the request of the alleged victim last Friday at Quincy District Court.

The Beechwood Street man was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, a lawnmower.

He allegedly drove his riding mower up a neighbor's driveway and rammed into the man shortly before 7 p.m. Thursday (May 5), police said. The two men then got into a wrestling match. Police were called and had probable cause for the arrest.

The incident was apparently sparked by a dispute that had been escalating between the Beechwood Street man and the neighbor. Police said the man who was struck by the lawnmower was bruised and scraped but did not require hospital treatment.

Dog breed

Police said a man checked out OK after a woman who was walking her dog near Forest Avenue and Old Coach Road said he made her uncomfortable when he stopped to ask her about the breed of her dog. The report came in at about 10 a.m. on Saturday (May 7).

Cat hit

Police placed a cat that had been hit by a car at the side of the road on Saturday (May 7) at about 4 p.m. A caller reported seeing the deceased cat and reported it to police. A woman, who was concerned about the cat, later went to the station. Police explained that they cannot bring a deceased animal to the station.

Thefts

Two boys, ages 14 and 16, reported to police on Tuesday (May 3) that belongings were taken from their duffel bags that were in the boys' locker room at Cohasset High while they were at track practice.

One boy reported that a calculator valued at $125 and a droid cell phone, valued at $400, were missing. The other boy was missing a Texas Instruments calculator valued at $100, police said. The school is checking their video cameras and detectives are investigating.

Stolen car

At 4:24 a.m. on Monday (May 2), Cohasset police were notified by Quincy Police that they had found a Mercedes Benz that had been reported as stolen from Tad Lane back in February. Quincy police investigated after receiving a call from the condo complex that the car had been parked there for a couple of months. The car was not damaged but the keys were missing, police said.

MV crashes

- At 11:23 a.m. on Wednesday (May 4), a caller reported a minor motor vehicle accident in the Stop & Shop parking lot. Police said an 85-year-old Cohasset man in a 2009 Subaru Legacy was backing up out of a parking spot when he hit the side of a 2010 Chevrolet SUV, operated by a 28-year-old Hingham woman. There was minor damage, police said.
- At 3:52 p.m. on Thursday (May 5), police responded to a two-vehicle accident at the lights at Stop & Shop. Police said a 35-year-old Scituate man in a 1996 Honda Accord "rear-ended" a 2003 GMC Denali, operated by a 47-year-old Boston man who had stopped at the lights. The Denali was towed. There were no apparent injuries. The Scituate man was cited for following too closely.
- AT 10:58 a.m. on Friday (May 6), a caller reported he was hit from behind on King Street. Police said a 59-year-old Cohasset man operating a 2010 Mercedes south on Route 3A by Sunrise "rear-ended" a 2002 Nissan Altima, operated by a 24-year-old Hingham man, who had slowed down for someone making a left-hand turn. Neither car had to be towed. The operator of the Mercedes was cited for following too closely.

Intoxicated

An employee at a King Street establishment reported at 10:38 p.m. on Thursday (May 5) that after serving a woman who was in her 60s, she became very drunk and pushed a bartender. She then refused to take a cab when offered. The caller said she overheard the woman say she lived in Hull but left and headed south on Route 3A in a silver Mercedes. Police notified Scituate and Hull but did not locate the woman.

Doorbell

Police put on some patrols after a Wheelwright Park caller reported last Friday (May 6) at 4:16 a.m. that someone had been ringing her doorbell for 20 minutes but she could not see anyone.

Comments

Police spoke to a teen after he reportedly had shouted derogatory comments to a girl from his car. The girl's mother reported the incident to police at about 5:37 p.m. on Saturday (May 7).

Police respond to report of a prowler

On Sunday, May 8 at about 2:30 a.m., police responded to a report of a prowler in the area of Route 3A and Pond Street. When officers arrived, two young men fled into nearby woods. Officers pursued the males on foot and stopped one of them, who appeared to be highly intoxicated. This male was identified as Christian Lemaire, 19, of King Street. Lemaire was in possession of a quantity of marijuana, a digital scale, and multiple plastic Baggies, which are consistent with the distribution of marijuana. Christian Lemaire was arrested and charged with possession of marijuana with the intent to distribute.

The other young man that ran on foot eventually led officers to a large underage drinking party at the Lemaire home on King Street. As officers arrived several teenagers fled the home, which was littered with beer cans, liquor, and a keg of beer. Through investigation, officers determined that Thomas Lemaire Jr., 21, purchased the keg of beer. Thomas Lemaire was found passed out inside the home and was transported to the hospital by the CFD ambulance. He will be summonsed to Quincy District Court for furnishing liquor to minors in violation of the social host law.

Five teenagers, all between the ages of 18 and 20, will be summonsed to Quincy District Court for being minors in possession of liquor. They were released to their parents on scene (3 girls and 2 boys).

Additionally, police were alerted at approximately 3 a.m., that a 2010 Porsche Panamera was stolen from a King Street driveway during the time of the party. The Porsche was unlocked and the keys were inside. Police then learned that the Porsche had just been involved in two hit-and-run accidents on Route 95 in Attleboro. State Police are investigating those accidents. The Porsche was recovered in a motel parking lot in Foxboro early Sunday morning. The vehicle had heavy damage when it was found.

Cohasset Detectives have determined that a 19-year-old man, formerly from Cohasset, now from Quincy, had attempted to check into the Foxboro hotel where the Porsche was recovered.

This man was refused service by the hotel staff due to his level of intoxication. Hotel staff called police and Foxboro Police subsequently placed him into protective custody.

Police are in the process of attempting to link this 19-year-old male to the Porsche forensically. Lt. William Quigley expects additional arrests.

DA awards officers who saved a life

Norfolk District Attorney Michael Morrissey has recognized two Cohasset Police Officers who saved an elderly man's life in December with the 2011 Robert L. Dana Award for excellence in policing.

Detective Garrett Hunt and Officer Patrick Reardon were given the award during the celebration of Law Day at the Quincy District Court on May 4.

"On Dec. 15, 2010, at about 11:15 a.m., the Cohasset Police Department received a 9-1-1- call reporting an elderly man slumped over his steering wheel at the Shaw's Plaza on Cushing Highway," Morrissey said in presenting the award. "Officer Reardon was on patrol in that sector and Detective Hunt happened to be conducting a follow-up investigation in that vicinity. Both officers heard the radio broadcast and responded immediately. What they found was an 86-year-old man in full cardiac arrest.

"Utilizing their training, the officers immediately began what would be several rounds of cardio-pulmonary resuscitation," Morrissey said. "With the help of Cohasset Fire Department paramedics, they were able to save this man's life."

In his letter to the District Attorney nominating the officers for the award, Police Chief Mark M. DeLuca wrote "Detective Hunt and Police Officer Reardon have consistently performed their duties with dedication and excellence. In this case, they both saved a human life."

The Robert P. Dana award is named for a Metropolitan District Commission police officer killed in Milton in the line of duty in 1984.

TOWN FINANCES

Budget transfers

Lombard brings requests forward

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Each year, as the town's fiscal year nears a close, there are some line items that have a surplus and others that have a deficit.

To correct this issue, both the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee have to approve the interdepartmental transfers.

Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard brought forward a request for five budget line item transfers totaling $54,800.

The first transfer is needed to cover additional overtime expenses in the police department. The department's original request was for $80,000 for this year. Part of that amount, roughly $52,000, was transferred from free cash by a Town Meeting vote in April. To cover the remaining amount, Lombard said there is remaining money in the police full-time salaries budget line item ($27,800) due to vacant positions unfilled in the department.

In past years, police full-time salaries and police overtime have been treated as the same budget line item, but 2010 Annual Town Meeting delineated them as two separate budget line items with a limit on each budget line item amount.

Lombard said higher than budgeted costs for police overtime has been the norm over the past few years.

"(The fiscal 2012) budget accommodates that and (the need for additional money) shouldn't happen next year," Lombard said. Next year's police overtime budget line item is $350,000, up from fiscal 2011 the budgeted $285,000 in fiscal 2011 (the current fiscal year).

Selectman Leland Jenkins asked to be provided with a weekly overtime report from the police, fire and Department of Public Works to ensure a close eye was kept on those costs.

The second transfer request was $5,000 from payroll services to two building department accounts ($4,000 to gas and plumbing inspector inspections and $1,000 to wire department contracted services).

The transfer is needed to cover additional inspection expenses related to the Avalon apartment complex construction. These costs will be reimbursed by Avalon, but likely not until after the close of the fiscal year (June 30). Lombard said the additional money in the finance expense budget was due to proper enterprise fund allocations of indirect costs related to town operations.

The third transfer request is $5,000 from the Treasure/Collector contracted services line item to be transferred to the wire department contracted services ($2,000) and unemployment ($3,000).

The number four request transfers $11,000 from health insurance line item to be split between unemployment ($1,000) and Veterans' Services General Relief ($10,000).

The final transfer request is to take $6,000 from the fire electricity budget line item and put it in the police vehicle maintenance line item. Lombard said the money is needed to cover additional police cruiser maintenance costs.

Jenkins asked to see a maintenance cost breakdown on a monthly basis as well.

The Board of Selectmen approved the transfers in a unanimous vote.

The Advisory Committee will review these transfer requests at their meeting on May 24. Both the Selectmen and the Advisory Committee have to approve the transfers under Massachusetts General Law.

Penguin Lady coming to library

What it is Program title: The Great Penguin Rescue.
On June 23, 2000 a ship named the MV Treasure sank off the coast of South Africa, spilling its oil and threatening the lives of 75,000 African penguins, a species that is now classified as Endangered. Nearly 20,000 penguins were covered with oil, and another 20,000 had to be quickly moved out of the path of the approaching oil slick. More than 12,500 volunteers from around the world flew to Cape Town and worked for 556,000 grueling hours to save the penguins from certain death. Dyan deNapoli, a former Senior Penguin Aquarist with Boston's New England Aquarium, worked as a rehabilitation supervisor during this massive rescue, which was historic in its size and success rate. Due to the tremendous international response to the crisis, 95 percent of the penguins were successfully returned to the wild.

cial assistant to the town manager, who has helped oversee the paving for the Little Harbor project.

Gruber said Jerusalem Road is going to be completely ground, leveled, the structures raised and then, finally, the road paved. The edges will be dressed up and at the various intersections the paving will be matched up with previously done new paving.

"This paving is going to make a lot of people happy."
– TOM GRUBER

In addition, two side roads, Little Harbor Road and Jerusalem Lane, will get a new topcoat of asphalt, Gruber said.

Once this paving project is complete, all the roads that were affected by the Little Harbor project will have been resurfaced.

The cost of this project will likely come up at the fall Special Town Meeting. The Sewer Commission is paying for the paving out of funds from the sewer project authorization in order to get the paving done this year. But, town officials think the cost should be borne by the town as a whole.

"We did not feel all the costs for paving should be paid for by the 483 homes of the Little Harbor sewer district. The paving benefits the town as a whole," said Sewer Commission chair John Beck.

In discussions with the previous Town Manager Bill Griffin and interim Town Manager Steve Lombard, as well as an informal discussion with the Capital Budget Committee, the targeted funds to complete the paving were in the Capital Stabilization Fund, a memo between Lombard and Beck states.

Town Meeting will likely be asked in the fall to authorize about $200,000 to be transferred from the Capital Stabilization Fund to the Sewer Commission's general expenses fund to pay down the debt associated with the paving. It's like it would be done in $20,000 increments over a 10-year period, Beck states in the memo.

A portion of the cost of the paving is expected to be offset by other utilities whose work in the area increased the degradation of the road.

"The key is to get the paving done," Beck said. Without this financial maneuvering it would be another year before Jerusalem Road could be paved, which, he said, would not be acceptable.

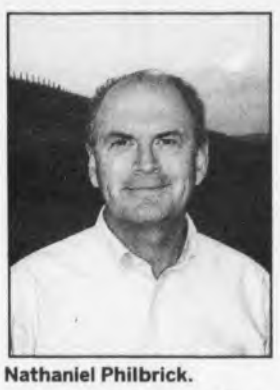
More paving in fiscal 2012

There are two other area targeted for paving in the coming year.

In a memo, DPW superintendent Carl Sestito targets two other streets to be paved in the coming year with the town's Chapter 90 funds allocated from the state. North Main Street from the commuter rail station to the Cedar Street intersection and Cedar Street itself have been identified as the roads in town in need of the most work.

The town's Chapter 90 allocation for fiscal 2012 (which begins July 1, 2011) is roughly $210,000. In his memo, there is about $66,000 in the account currently.

The estimated cost to pave both the portion of North Main and Cedar streets is $312,000. The two paving projects would deplete the town's Chapter 90 account for fiscal 2012.



"If asphalt prices escalate unexpectedly, the entire length of Cedar Street planned would be reduced to a smaller portion and would need to get completed in 2012 (when more Chapter 90 funds are available)," Sestito said.

'Fair Game' docudrama May 20

The following was provided by the Democratic Town Committee:

The next "movie night" feature of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be the docudrama, "Fair Game."

This spy story is based on the experiences of real-life CIA officer, Valerie Plame, played by Naomi Watts. In January of 2001 Plame was sent by the CIA, as the head of the Joint Task Force on Iraq, to investigate the possibility of nuclear build-up in Iraq. She turned up no evidence of any buildup finding that the capability for building nuclear weapons had been destroyed in the Desert Storm War.

Plane's Husband, American Diplomat, Joe Wilson, at the recommendation of Plame, was sent by the CIA to Niger in February of 2002 to investigate the Bush administration's finding that the government of Iraq had been seeking to buy uranium from that African country in order to re-start Iraq's nuclear capability. Wilson reported to the CIA that he had found no evidence of the Bush Administration's claim. Shortly after Wilson's trip to Africa, George Bush, in his Jan. '03 State of the Union speech, said that Saddam Hussein had recently sought significant quantities of uranium from Niger. Two weeks later Baghdad was bombed by the US beginning the Iraq War. In July of '03, as you may recall, Wilson, played by Sean Penn, wrote an editorial for the NY times entitled "What I Didn't Find in Africa," in which he challenged the basis of the US war on Iraq as he had found no evidence of the Bush Administration's claim regarding Iraq's uranium purchase.

In response to Joe Wilson's NY Times story, a White House official leaked Palme's undercover status through a Times editorialist leaving Plame and her contacts vulnerable and ruining her career with the CIA. An investigation revealed that a White House official had, in fact, revealed Palme's identity. Was Valerie Plame "fair game?" Was justice served in this real- life, real- time story of intrigue and suspense?

Please join us for this intense and exciting film at the Paul Pratt Library on May 20 at 7 p.m. in the Meeting Room. All are welcome. Refreshments are served.

AROUND TOWN

Anthony DiPaolo graduates with honors

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Applause

Hello Cohasset. The month of May is proving to be a rather chilly one but hoping it starts to warm up very soon. The news this week is about a number of events coming up but I want to kick it off with a piece about a wonderful person in town, Oliver Inman.

Last year on the day of the MS walk, Oliver set up his lemonade stand and gave away his lemonade for free and received donations of $ 61.81 for his effort which he donated to his Spanish Teacher's MS team. This year he was determined to raise more money than last year. He enlisted the help of his sister Grace and two of his friends Caroline Hillier and Reed Koropey. Together at his lemonade stand they raised $130.58, which will be donated to the team of Diane's Dreamers.

It was so nice that many of those on the walk remembered Oliver's lemonade stand from last year. Oliver would like to thank all of the walkers for their support. This is such a great piece to write about and share with our readers Oliver! You should be very proud of yourself and know that you are making a difference. Keep up the great work with your lemonade stand. Sending you a big round of applause Oliver, nice work.

Graduate

Anthony L. DiPaolo of Cohasset, son of Anthony and Gloria, has graduated cum laude from the Moore School of Business at the University of South Carolina and was awarded a Bachelor's degree of Science in finance during its commencement ceremony on May 7th. Anthony spent the summer of 2010 interning at the Heritage Foundation, a think tank in Washington, DC. Anthony has accepted a position in Boston to begin his career this summer.

Congratulations!

Food drive

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be sponsoring a drive for the Cohasset Food pantry on May 21st. The staff at the food pantry would like to increase its available supply of food products prior to the Memorial Day Weekend. Committee volunteers will be at Shaw's from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. to pass out lists of needed items and to collect food donations. The Food Pantry also welcomes donations of cash, which will be gratefully accepted as well. The need is still there despite improvements in some sectors of the economy, according to Food Pantry staff. Many thanks to all those who so generously keep the Cohasset Food Pantry going in order to help those currently in need of food assistance!

Muir will share a little of his fascination with "The Wild West," not as depicted in the genre of Hollywood movies, but rather as events actually happened. Looking at the lives of some of the famous figures of the time, the audience will see life as it was. Muir will focus on the customs and conventions of the times and some events so controversial that their validity and morality is the subject of ongoing debate.

The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St. All are welcome to attend, there is no charge and light refreshment will be served.

'Alice in Wonderland' on stage

Cohasset ballerinas to shine this weekend

Alice sits on a riverbank, basking in the warm summer sun. She is drowsily reading over her sister's shoulder, when suddenly a White Rabbit in a waistcoat scurries by. The White Rabbit pulls out a pocket watch, declares he's late and pops down a rabbit hole. Intrigued, Alice follows the White Rabbit down the rabbit hole, and so the adventure begins. South Shore Ballet Theatre's interpretation of the classic Lewis Carroll tale has something for everyone: a grinning Cheshire Cat, a crazy Mad Hatter, a confused March Hare, a chronically late White Rabbit, twins Tweedle-Dee and Tweedle Dum, a furious Red Queen and a huge cast of supporting characters including dormouse, caterpillar, trees, mushrooms, moving grass, sugar cubes, tea cups, flowers, hedgehogs and a whole pack of playing cards. If you have not seen Alice in Wonderland as a ballet you won't believe your eyes. Great fun for the entire family. SSBT's Spring Performing Group includes 55 local students from all over the South Shore.

There will be two performances of Alice in Wonderland: Saturday, May 14th at 1pm and 6pm. Both performances will be at Derby Academy in Hingham. Tickets on sale now: General admission, $10; reserved tickets, $20. Stop by the school at 24 Rockland St, Hanover, call 781-312-7224; visit www.southshoreballettheatre.com. EAGLE SCOUT when he was five, is rightly proud of his accomplishment, as are others.

The Marines: Christian reports to Parris Island, South Carolina on August 1 for recruit training.

In an interview this week, Christian explained his motivation to become and Eagle Scout and his determination to become a Marine.

"This is something I have always wanted to do," Christian, who was accepted to the Massachusetts Maritime Academy but opted to enlist in the Marines. "I don't know what I want to do with my life yet, and that played a factor in my joining the Marines."

A member of Troop 28 Cohasset, Christian got the idea for his project from the Cohasset Police Department. As a student in high school teacher Jack Buckley's law class, Christian was always asking questions about police work; more recently he became involved in the Police Explorer Program at the CPD. He has also volunteered at the police department and has helped the police at events such as the road race and Cohasset Day.

To reach Eagle Scout status, the scout must complete 21 merit badges; the area Boy Scout Council must approve an Eagle project and the workbook detailing the scout's project. The Eagle Scout Project Workbook contains all the scout's records, letters of recommendations, plus pictures and details of the project itself.

All requirements must be completed by the time the scout reaches 18. Only one in 50 boys, who enter scouting, attain Eagle rank.

Police Lt. William Quigley, who knew that Christian would be a candidate for Eagle Scout, asked for his help with getting a project that Quigley could not get off the ground.

"His sense of service, leadership skills, and self-discipline, truly speaks to what a great job his parents did raising him. I'm sure that Christian will go on to do great things, starting with becoming a US Marine this summer."

— LT. WILLIAM QUIGLEY

Quigley suggested Christian take on the project of constructing police barricades that could be used for diverting and restricting traffic during emergencies, such as flooding or accidents, to major town events, such as the road race.

The project involved building, designing, painting and stenciling the barricades. The Cohasset Police Association, a non-profit, offered to cover the cost of materials that were not donated.

Christian, 18, who enjoys bike riding and is a triathlete, explains that an Eagle Scout project must benefit the community in some way. The scout must also show leadership and recruit others to help with the project. Once he decided on the barricades project, Christian presented his proposal to the Boy Scout Council that approved his idea.

Christian started about a year ago and set up shop in the basement of the library with the help of his project advisor, Paul Murphy, who is the animal control officer. Ultimately, Christian's project yielded 12 sawhorses constructed from some 60 pieces of lumber; he recruited a band of other scouts and friends to help.

Murphy described Christian as a "remarkable young man."

"I could not be happier that he is pursing the Marines, I am really proud of him," said Murphy, pointing out that an Eagle Scout gets an automatic rank advancement in the Marines. Christian will be advanced from private to private first class.

Boy Scouting is a family affair for Christian. His dad, Richard, is Scoutmaster and his older brother, Richard, is an Eagle Scout.

Lt. Quigley said it has really been a pleasure to have Christian working around the station over the past year.

"His sense of service, leadership skills, and self-discipline, truly speaks to what a great job his parents did raising him. I'm sure that Christian will go on to do great things, starting with becoming a US Marine this summer," he said.

The Eagle Scout rank will officially be bestowed upon Christian at the Court of Honor in June.

In the meantime, Christian is looking forward to the future.

"I am excited about going into the Marines," he said. "I am looking for an adventure."

ELECTION

Kennedy said the campaign process was "exhausting," but she always felt encouraged after each event.

"I loved talking to people, finding out what makes them tick and what they are concerned about," Kennedy said.

In her new role as Selectman she is looking forward to delving into issues and going to other committee meetings to find out what they are wrestling with.

"Hopefully then I can provide a big picture view as a selectman and help shepherd some of those projects through the process," Kennedy said.

Both Kennedy and Koed commended the other candidates and the willingness to run for an elected seat.

"When you have a series of uncontested elections things can get a little stale; it's good to liven things up," Koed said, adding he hopes more citizens will come forward to serve the community in the coming years.

"The best thing to come out of the contested election is it forces the candidates to define and hone their positions and it provides the opportunity for general debate in town," Koed said.

With 12 years as a selectmen under his belt, Koed said he would do some things differently over the next few years. In particular, he said he would pay more attention to the town's debt service load.

"The town over the years has done projects that everyone was in favor of but now we're realizing the stress it has on the budget," Koed said. His top priority will be "getting the town's fiscal house in order," something he said he heard over and over from residents during the campaign.

Both Quigley and Snow expressed disappointment on their loss.

Karen Quigley, who spent the last year as chair of the Board of Selectmen, said she knew she ran the best campaign she could and did the best job she could as a selectman.

"I always made decisions in what I thought was the best interest of the town, unfortunately that angered some people," Quigley said. "It was an honor to serve the people of Cohasset."

She hopes to spend more time focusing on her professional and personal life, but doesn't see herself completely checking out of town issues.

"I've invested so much in town government, it's a part of me now," Quigley said. "I didn't take interest (in the issues) just because I was a selectmen."

Mary Snow, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, said she was disappointed in the results of the election, but was proud of the votes she did get.

"I had a great committee to help me along the way, I learned a lot, and met a lot of new people," Snow said of the benefits of running for Selectman. She also does not plan on fading into the distance.

"I love this town and I want to see it properly run," Snow said, adding she would stay active in town issues and continue to attend Selectmen and other committee meetings.

She plans on launching another bid for the Board of Selectmen in 2012.

Write-in for Water Commission

Jenkins earns spot with 13 votes

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

It may have come as a surprise once the votes were counted on Election Day: Leonora Jenkins of 198 Jerusalem Road earned a seat on the Water Commission with 13 write-in votes.

The one-year seat on the Water Commission was considered an "open seat" and did not have a balloted candidate.

When reached this week Jenkins said she hopes to bring her small business expertise to the Water Department and help to get the enterprise fund back on track.

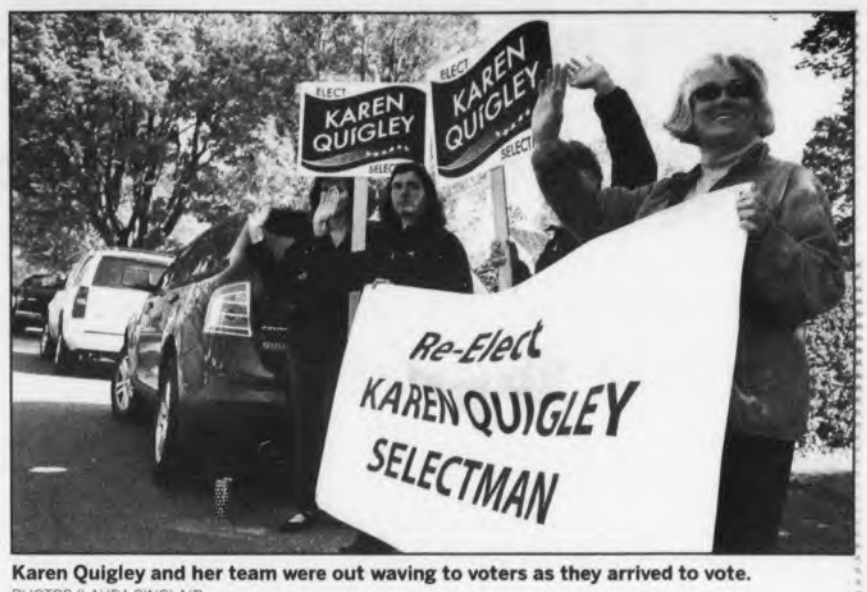
Jenkins is a familiar face at Town Meeting and has tried unsuccessfully to be appointed or elected to other boards previously.

"(I) previously rain for office three times (for School Committee) and just spent 10 years attempting an appointment to the Advisory Committee. After being turned down again by the Troika last month, I concluded that I had to seek another venue to offer my services," Jenkins said. With no apparent interest in the one-year seat for the Water Commission from the citizenry, Jenkins decided to do a write-in campaign for the position. She called on her friends and neighbors to write her in on the ballot.

This is the second time Jenkins has launched a write-in campaign. In 2007, she sought a seat on the School Committee through a write-in campaign. Jenkins had two unsuccessful bids for a school committee seat as a balloted candidate. Her write-in campaign was announced virtually on the eve of an election and prompted another write-in campaign by Lucia Flibotte, who ended up gaining the three-year seat on the School Committee.

This time was different. With just 13 votes, Jenkins is now a member of the commission. According to Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre, a write-in candidate needs at least five votes to be elected.

Jenkins said she wasn't surprised another resident hadn't come forward to take on the water commissioner role "given the amount of animosity toward the water department."



The water department's bad image is not deserved, Jenkins said, because the issues facing that department are indicative of larger town issues.

She aims to bring a "common sense approach" and is looking forward to working with the other members of the board, Chris Seebeck and also recently elected member, Peter DeCaprio.

"I think I'll be a fresh set of eyes," Jenkins said. "I don't want to step on people's toes, but work to clean things up and get this ship righted."

Jenkins said she would spend the next couple of weeks delving into the finances and getting to know the issues of the department.

"I hope to bring my small business expertise to the Water Department to assist in interfacing with the new policies and procedures that are being developed to get Cohasset on track as a smoothly functioning entity," Jenkins said.

Karen Quigley and her team were out waving to voters as they arrived to vote.

Stamp Out Hunger Saturday

While many Cohasset families are planning their summer vacations — others are wondering how they will put food on their tables.

Food pantry donations tend to go down during the summer months. That's why Cohasset postal workers are again joining the annual nationwide effort to help "Stamp Out Hunger."

Cohasset residents are encouraged to place canned and other non-perishable food items by their mailboxes for pick-up by letter carriers on Saturday, May 14.

On this day, letter carriers across the country — including those in Cohasset — in partnership with the United States Postal Service, will be collecting food for families in need. This annual effort dates back to 1994.

Postal customers are encouraged to leave a bag of non-perishable food items at their mailboxes for pick-up and delivery to a local food pantry, including the Cohasset Food Pantry.

Suggested donations include canned meat, fish, soup, vegetables, bottled juice, pasta, cereal, rice, and other items that don't require refrigeration. Customers are asked not to include items with expired dates or anything in glass containers.

The drive is co-sponsored by Feeding America, Campbell's, the AFL-CIO, the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association, Valpak, and Uncle Bob's Self-Storage.

Feeding America is the nation's leading domestic hunger-relief charity. Its mission is to feed America's hungry through a nationwide network of member food banks and to engage the country in the fight to end hunger.

A recent survey conducted by Feeding America found that 46 percent of households served reported choosing between paying for utilities/heating fuel and food.

Food drive organizers are encouraging residents in every community nationwide to Help Stamp Out Hunger this Saturday with a non-perishable food donation to help your neighbors in need.

Visit helpstampouthunger.com for more information.

Cohasset Food Pantry

This Saturday, the US Postal Service is running their annual Stamp out Hunger food drive. The Cohasset Food Pantry asks residents who choose to participate in this food drive to please NOT donate expired and opened products.

They are currently not in need of any pasta or canned vegetables at this time, with the exception of canned white potatoes.

What they do need is: coffee, tea, peanut butter, jams, jellies, tuna, condiments, juice, canned fruit and dish detergent, bar soap and toothpaste.

The Food Pantry thanks you in advance for your cooperation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thank you to all

I wish to take the opportunity to thank everyone who took the time to come to the town elections and chose to exercise their right to vote. It's one of the most important ways that people have to continue being part of a democracy.

Although defeat is not an easy pill to swallow, I take great comfort in knowing that every single vote I received was gotten through honest means. There was no one on my team who used slanderous emails or made disparaging remarks about other candidates. We did not prescribe to former and sitting selectmen's influences. Nor did we make promises to residents that cannot be kept. My hands are clean.

I am ever so grateful to the residents of Cohasset who allowed me to place signs on their property and through personal and phone conversations, pushed me onward on the campaign trail. I would also like to thank my family, my committee and most of all the residents who sent their vote my way. You will continue to see me at Selectmen and other committee meetings, town events and of course the DPW Office where I am always available to residents. I have also decided to keep my email address marysnow2011@yahoo.com for anyone who may have questions or concerns that they feel are not being addressed. I will also be working toward running again in next year's election. "Let It Snow in 2012". - Mary Snow, 317 North Main St.

Memorial Day efforts appreciated

Every Memorial Day I participate in the festivities that make this holiday so special: Enjoying the parade, the speeches at the podium in the Memorial Circle, then the flags that have been strategically set up across the street at the Sons of American Legion, the Field of Honor going on its fifth year.

I want to thank all the people who are so generous to volunteer their time so Cohasset can have a wonderful day. Also thanks to the Town of Cohasset for acknowledging and honoring all generations of veterans who are serving our country both past and present. Kudos to the Commander of the Sons of the American Legion 118 and the President of the Auxiliary League, Tom Wigmore and his wife, Deirdre.

A truly appreciative spectator:

COMMENTARY

Government run amok

SAL LANUTO

One of the major controversies on the national scene today is a concern that our government has gotten too big and too intrusive. Big government costs taxpayers big money to support and that means higher taxes. We may have an example of that here in Cohasset.

Cat Dam is a tidal gate that lets the tide flow into Inner Little Harbor (ILH) unimpeded on the incoming tides, but when the gates are closed slows down the outgoing tide. Originally built a century ago, its purpose is to provide minimum water coverage to reduce the noxious odors that emanate from the exposed mudflats.

Big government has agencies whose role is to restore estuaries, or improve water quality, or in general let Mother Nature take its course. In general these may be noble goals. But Little Harbor is an estuary with physical characteristics that inhibit good flushing. Fresh water runoff from a large watershed feeding Richardson's Brook dilutes the water's salinity, and the shallowness of ILH promotes rising water temperatures during the summer. Nature has dealt us a difficult hand. So a compromise between natural flushing and restricted flushing must be used.

But here is the rub. The Dam Is situated on the private property of two citizens living on Nichols Road, with about half of the dam on each property. The town has a restrictive easement, letting the town come onto their private property to maintain and operate the dam, but not alter the water level. In addition, much of the water is over land that is owned by individuals...it is in their deeds...they pay taxes on the land under water...and they have property rights.

So there is a conflict between the owners who have property rights and who want to protect their quality of life, and the advocacy agencies who disregard those concerns in favor of a more perfect environment. But then the old adage "you cannot fight city hall" becomes apparent. Outside quasi-governmental agencies have been brought in and have introduced a new thrust: what is best to "restore ILH to a salt marsh", or what is best to restore commercial fishing, or what is best if you want to make the best environment for shell fishing?

Who in these agencies asks: "what is the best balance between the property owners and the environment"? I suggest none of those who have weighed in on the schedule for Cat Dam that is part of the NOI before the Conservation Commission. Homes were built and the area was settled by hard working families to create a vibrant community. Now, a group of overzealous environmentalists solicit the involvement of outside agencies to criticize how Inner Little Harbor has been managed and to suggest a radical alteration to the environment. The hard working families who have invested in these properties know that home values will plummet — resulting in less tax revenue for the town — and the odors that the gates were built to eliminate will return making the area undesirable if not uninhabitable, and will not likely improve water quality very much. In fact, one of the many studies (IEP) says increased flushing will be of little help.

So how is it that at the flip of a switch, outside agencies with questionable jurisdiction can suddenly swoop down and threaten to decimate the property values of hard working families who have lived here for decades? There is no regard for the negative consequences associated with implementing a radical change. There is no regard for property rights. We have spent tens of thousands of dollars to hire the scientists, engineers, and an environmental attorney to review their findings and to defend our property rights. Why do we need to spend the money to defend ourselves in the first place...because of the overreach of government?

And worse, the money to fund these agencies comes from us...on top of almost $40,000 per household around ILH to pay for sewering that addresses the root problem with water quality. Have we come to the point in our society when government can intrude into private property under unsubstantiated pretenses? One of the regulators stated that open flow would be better for Cohasset's commercial fishing interests and argued in his review that the commercial fisheries in our town would be harmed. MAKING TRACKS

A little trash talk about outfall

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project — Recently, most of the finishing touches were made to the culvert next to the Legion to put it into ready-to-use condition. One of the finishing touches was to add the trash rack to the entrance to the underground culverts at the edge of the street. So what's a trash rack? Well, it's not to collect used old paper cups, soda cans or other similar trash. Even though when we think of trash, things like these come to mind, that's not the trash we are worried about.

The main purpose for a trash rack is to prevent debris from dead meadow vegetation from clogging up the underground pipes. The debris is the natural effect of dead vegetation from Jacobs Marsh that finds its way into the streambed. The trash rack could be considered to be sort of a filtering system. The reeds and other dead plant material are trapped on the sloped surface of the rack. After a reasonable amount of debris accumulates on the trash rack the DPW will lift the debris with long rakes onto a grating at the top of the rack. Here the debris will dry out, reducing its weight considerably. When the reeds are dry, the DPW will remove them for disposal. If you stop by and look at the trash rack, you will usually be able to see a few reeds piled up waiting for removal.

It turns out that for the same reason we are installing this trash rack, a trash rack was previously installed at this location. We were a bit lucky that the old rack, constructed of stainless steel, could be fit to the new installation without modification. The only modification that was needed was to reconstruct the horizontal grating at the top of the trash rack to fit the new channel alignment. The ability to reuse the old trash rack for this project saved the Town a fair amount of money.

The photo shows the trash rack, at the far end of the open channel, after it was installed and water was allowed to flow in the rebuilt channel once again. When this photo was taken only a few finishing details were needed to complete the channel rebuild portion of the project. Among these were the addition of a protective fence along side the concrete channel and loaming and seeding the bare dirt portions of the construction site. The only remaining work that is needed, as of this week is to repave the parking lot that was used to stage all of the heavy construction equipment and materials. Since this is actually private property the Town has the obligation to put it back into serviceable condition. That paving will be done shortly.

So far, in describing the work done during the winter, we have focused entirely on the open channel that leads from Jacobs Meadow to Elm Street. Before we continue with more construction details, let's take a look at the big picture as a refresher course. There are a couple very important facts. First, Jacobs Meadow is the recipient of about 20 percent or more of all the storm water collected in Cohasset. When we have a large rainstorm, the storm water backs up in Jacobs Meadow until such time as it can pass to the harbor. If the meadow drains slowly and the storm water keeps coming into the meadow, the net result is rising water in the meadow, which has caused major damage to some of the surrounding properties. Second, Jacobs Meadow, a naturally occurring salt marsh, has been infiltrated by phragmites, which is a very invasive reed-type weed. When the salt content of the water in the meadow drops below a certain threshold, phragmites thrives. The solution to phragmites is to introduce more salt water into the meadow. This project has been structured to address both of these situations, storm water flooding and salt marsh health, including reducing the phragmites.

The solution the Town has designed will improve the flow in the old collapsing stone channel at the Legion to better match the higher capacity of the underground pipes that drain to the harbor. That's why the collapsed channel was rebuilt. The other half of the solution lies at the harbor. In the past, we had erected a several tide gates, one at the end of each of the three large pipes that flow into the harbor. After the gate performance was monitored for a few years, it was pretty well recognized by the Town and the oversight federal and state agencies that the existing gate structures were not doing the job effectively. The solution was to replace the ineffective gates with a gate structure that would allow better flow of storm water out of the meadow in a controlled fashion, when the tides permit. The new gate also must allow a controlled amount of salt water back into the meadow to deal with the phragmites. But, it must be able to cut off the salt-water inflow to avoid flooding in the meadow.

The harbor-side solution was to allow the three outfall pipes to drain into a single harbor-side chamber. That chamber will contain a vertical sluice gate that will allow up to 100 percent flow in either direction in a controlled manner. That is, limit inflow to avoid salt water flooding in the meadow and to maximize outflow to avoid storm water flooding. The vertical sluice gate is a 6 foot by 10 foot automated gate that can go from wide open to totally closed, by either automatic or manual control.

However, we must caution the reader, that no one can say that this solution will prevent all future stormwater flooding. It's always possible that a giant rain event can overwhelm any fixed drainage system. But, the chance of flooding will be reduced in a major way. Next week we will start describing the work that was and is being done on the harbor-side to implement the balance of the design.

One last thing - Jerusalem Road update: Just as a reminder, we will begin grinding the surface of Jerusalem Road from Atlantic to North Main Street next week. At this point in time we don't have the exact day it will begin, so be on the lookout for the work crews and possible detours and delays.

FOR THE RECORD

Where were you when...

GREGORY MATHIS

Post you reflections of Sept. 11 or Osama bin Laden's death at blogs.wickedlocal.com/fortherecord.

The day began like any other Tuesday, which meant gearing up to meet a few newspaper deadlines.

I was listening to the radio during my drive to work and the music was interrupted by a report that a plane had flown into one of the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center in New York City. "Wow, what a terrible accident," I thought.

By the time I arrived in the newsroom that morning, a couple of colleagues were huddled around the television tucked away in the corner of the room. As I walked toward the television, we saw a plane crash into the Twin Tower. At first we thought we were watching some sort of replay, but we quickly realized we were watching a second plane crash into the other Twin Tower. Oh my God, what was going on? This was no accident.

Our fear grew as the morning progressed and we learned of another plane crashing into the Pentagon and yet another targeted for the White House forced to crash in a field in central Pennsylvania. Our country was under attack this Tuesday morning, and thoughts of producing newspapers and meeting deadlines were quickly replaced with fear and confusion. Mission accomplished for the terrorists, who instilled the kind of fear few of us have ever experienced.

Cooler heads prevailed, and we were able to collect our thoughts and deploy reporters and photographers throughout the area. While this was a breaking national story, it would undoubtedly have local impact. We saw what it was doing in our newsroom. Little did we know at the time just how close it would hit home, as many local families lost loved ones in the plane crashes, in the Twin Towers and as a direct result of the terrorist attacks.

Sept. 11, 2001, is one of those days everyone will remember where he or she was when they heard the news. Pearl Harbor being attacked, JFK being shot, Neil Armstrong walking on the moon fit into that category. For me, "those days" include the night John Lennon was shot, the day the Space Shuttle Challenger exploded and the night we first bombed Baghdad. Who knew you could watch a war as it was happening with Wolf Blitzer providing live commentary on CNN?

We had another one of "those days" last week when reports began to surface late last Sunday night that Osama bin Laden, the mastermind of the Sept. 11 attacks, was killed by U.S. Special Forces. I was not at work, but home watching Sunday Night Baseball. As the ESPN play-by-play announcer began to describe the details of bin Laden's death, chants of "USA, USA, USA" echoed throughout Philadelphia's Citizens Bank Park during the telecast.

Much has happened in the last 10 years, and the death of bin Laden, while welcome news for many, does not close the book on Sept. 11, 2001.

With the 10th remembrance of Sept. 11 approaching, we're interested in your reflections on that terrible day and how your life has changed in the 10 years between the horrific terrorist attacks and the recent killing of Al Qaeda's leader. Please log on to my blog at blogs.wickedlocal.com/fortherecord and leave a comment, or send me an email at gmathis@wickedlocal.com, and we'll print some comments from readers in upcoming editions of the newspaper.

PUSHING THE EDGE

A teachable moment

GLENN MANGURIAN

Every now and then an event happens that provides a teachable moment. The death of Osama Bin Laden is such a moment. While some see his death as revenge and retribution, many take solace in justice served. Each of us will reflect over the next several weeks and months about the lessons learned. For me, there are five important life lessons:

1. Clear and Compelling Mission

President Bush addressed a shocked nation the evening of September 11, 2001. From the Oval Office, he stated, "This is a day when all Americans from every walk of life unite in our resolve for justice and peace. America has stood down enemies before, and we will do so this time. None of us will ever forget this day, yet we go forward to defend freedom and all that is good and just in our world." That declaration galvanized a nation and set a goal to bring those responsible to justice. Moreover, it underscored the importance of "defending freedom and all that is good and just." That mission endured and transcended presidencies and political parties because it was clear and compelling.

2. Persistence and Patience

In this age of 24/7 information and instant gratification, we wanted that mission accomplished in the first month or first year. But we don't live in the fictitious world of Jack Bauer where the world is saved from the "bad guys" in "24" hours (including commercial breaks). Rather, it takes painstaking work by many, many people. Intelligence must be gathered. Leads must be followed. I suspect the search for Bin Laden yielded many dead ends and contradictory pieces of data. Fortunately, we had a coordinated team of smart, dedicated and persistent people making sense of the intelligence.

3. Execution Excellence

We are fortunate to have the greatest military on earth. Once the mission was approved, execution was assigned to the best of the best. Execution required practice, practice and then more practice. But the Special Forces involved could not anticipate every scenario or predict every challenge. Rather, the elite soldiers were prepared through years of training to deal with the unexpected. That's what execution excellence requires.

4. Courage and Bravery

The decision to send the Navy Seals into Pakistan took guts. Up until the assault, it was uncertain whether Bin Laden was actually there. Of course, the bravery of the several dozen Seals is beyond our understanding.

5. Shared Credit

Presidents Bush and Obama shared credit and are the face of success. But the real credit belongs to people we will never know – the covert agents on the ground collecting data, the intelligence analysts trying to make sense of the information and the Seals jumping out the helicopter on assault to their target. We don't know their names and won't see their faces. They did their jobs because the mission was clear and compelling not because they would get credit.

Each of us will glean different lessons from this historic event. I encourage you to discuss and explore with your children your lessons. An opportunity like this, God willing, will occur only once in a lifetime.

Pushing the Edge of Your Thinking

- What type of mission would motivate you to action?
- Are you patient and persistent in your pursuit of enduring missions?
- For motivates you to execute with excellence?
- What objectives challenge your courage?
- Would you pursue a mission if you knew you would not get public credit?

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

A man. A plan. A canal. Panama. (A palindrome)

MARY KENNEDY

The Panama Canal, a 50-mile shortcut between the Atlantic and Pacific, one of the greatest engineering marvels in human construction. It has been named one of the Seven Modern Wonders of the world. Truly, even by Boston standards, a Big Dig.

In the early 1500s, Spanish explorers realized at once the importance of this narrow strip of land connecting continents and dividing oceans. Balboa wrote to King Charles V of Spain that ships filled with gold from Peru could sail north to the canal and then east to Spain. The king, always eager to fill his treasury, ordered surveyors to draw up plans. Alas, the project was deemed technologically impossible and abandoned. A road was built instead.

During the California Gold Rush of 1849 ambitious prospectors sailed from Atlantic coast ports to Panama, then crossed that muddy "road to hell" on mules. In 1850 Columbia, which owned Panama, granted a group of New York executives the deed to build a railroad across the isthmus. The Panama Railroad soon reported the heaviest traffic per mile of all railroads in the world. It operates even today.

Still, in the courts of Europe, plans for a canal to facilitate world trade simmered for centuries. In the 1880s the French, flush with success over the building of the Suez Canal, decided to tackle the project. Director Ferdinand de Lesseps, proposed the same construction he had used in Egypt: a sea-level canal dug through a flat sandy desert. What followed was an 11-year nightmare, costing hundreds of millions of dollars and more than 20,000 lives lost, many to malaria and yellow fever. Day after day in hellish heat and torrential rains, through mile after mile of impassable jungle, workers dug and dug. The canal zone was not flat and sandy, however, but mountainous. Time and again, monstrous mudslides and the mighty Chagres River, which crisscrossed the canal route 14 times, destroyed the results of their labor.

Newspapers all over the world commented on the growing shareholder scandal unfolding in France. In the United States, Harper's Weekly cartoonist Thomas Nast portrayed a confounded de Lesseps wondering whether he was a canal digger or a gravedigger. Fortunately, one lucky young laborer lasted only a few weeks before being laid off. Paul Gauguin pocketed his meager earnings and lived to continue painting. Like the Spaniards, the French finally abandoned the project.

Enter Theodore Roosevelt, convinced that a canal across Panama was essential both for world trade and American interests. A canal would shorten the sailing distance from New York to San Francisco by 7,800 miles, and the journey would be far safer than rounding the treacherous currents of Cape Horn at the tip of South America. Since Colombia was unwilling to sign a treaty, Roosevelt encouraged the already restless Panamanians to declare their independence.

Matters moved swiftly. In November 1903, (in one of his "walk softly, but carry a big stick" tactics), he sent the USS Nashville to anchor quietly off the Panama coast to discourage interference from Colombia. Only three months later, a newly independent Panama gave the United States control of the Panama Canal Zone in exchange for $10 million. On May 4, Lieutenant Jatara Oneel of the U.S. Army was formally presented with the keys of the canal.

With expertise, ingenuity and sheer genius, the Americans went to work on what was then called "The Big Ditch."

HEALTH NOTES

'Dog do' complaints are on the rise

STEVE BOBO

Recently greater than normal numbers of complaints have come to the Board of Health about dog droppings; not necessarily from those little dogs, but big dogs. Health Notes is sure that the mention of such a present condition will do much to assuage the problem.

It's a guess, but the appearance of dog droppings is probably limited to discrete parts of Town and those finding instances of such carelessness should report specific occurrences to the Board of Health. The town beach parking lot is sure to generate numerous calls during the summer, but the board is interested in any place in Town where unsanitary practices occur.

Pets are popular because they are an attractive addition to a family, but mostly because they're fun and interesting — and theraputic. The Harvard Office of Community Affairs has a program: Pets as Therapy which matches volunteers with dogs from the Harvard Square area, and each Sunday the entire group visits the residents of nursing homes which many describe as the highlight of their week.

Illnesses from pets and animals include Lyme disease, bird flu and intestinal disease associated with places where the public has contact with farm animals. Campylobacter, a bacterial disease associated with kittens, puppies, poultry, livestock, and unpasteurized milk is the culprit. Another is Cryptosporidiosis, a parasitic disease associated with calves, goat kids, lambs and unpasteurized milk. Also included in this litany is Salmonella, a bacterial disease associated with reptiles, baby chicks and ducklings, adult poultry, livestock, dogs, cats, and unpasteurized milk. Allergies from cats, far more common in children and now more treatable, are still a concern to parents of young children.

Pet therapeutic dogs can be big or little. Cats: generally old or young (therapy-wise). All have unique characteristics and should be carefully matched to the family. Michelle White, a graduating senior from Harvard, worked for its Pets as Therapy program, the student-run organization which brings dogs into area nursing homes to give residents a taste of the outside world — and a bit of unconditional love. "Dogs have a joie de vivre that's infectious," White said, as she's seen people who hadn't spoken in two years talk when a new dog comes in and people who are crying or angry become soothed.

Cats, on the other hand, tend to be aloof. Older ones generally get accustomed to their owners and tend to become familiar and demanding, requiring love and comforting, beneficial to both cat and family.

People sometimes keep strange animals: skunks, boa constrictors, etc. Many keep smaller animals such as gerbils. Depending on the relationship the animals can be therapeutic or otherwise — life is complicated.

All pets need care. Make sure your pet is on year-round heartworm preventive medication, as well as a flea and tick control program. Ask your vet to recommend a plan designed specifically for your pet; perhaps with a microchip for identification and an id tag. If you suspect your pet may have come in contact with a potentially poisonous substance, contact your local veterinarian or the ASPCA.

Pets have long been loved by many of us. As we go on with our lives they're a real help to keeping us healthy.

CHIEF'S CORNER

Making good choices

MARK DELUCA

We are once again approaching prom and graduation season. Years of hard work for both parents and students are celebrated. It's a time for parents, students, friends and family to come together and commemorate this memorable event in a teenager's life. Inevitably, instead of celebrating a huge accomplishment, a community is devastated by a tragedy relating to drugs or alcohol.

Parents, many parties have started out with the best of intentions and have quickly taken a turn towards tragedy. Hosting a party that supplies or allows minors to consume alcohol is not only illegal, but also irresponsible and dangerous. As parents we all need to protect our kids from making bad choices and putting themselves or others in danger. Parents need to be aware of the facts surrounding the Massachusetts Social Host Law. Some points regarding the law to be aware of;

- minors consuming alcohol on any premise you control without your knowledge is not a defense.
- not being home at the time of the incident is not a defense.

Students, don't let a bad choice negatively change the course of your lives. Celebration need not include alcohol or drugs. In these difficult times competition has increased and incidents involving drugs and alcohol can easily disqualify you for many opportunities, such as college admission, job opportunities and even volunteer positions. Don't let the years of hard work and planning be overshadowed by a momentary lapse in judgment.

Please celebrate responsibly, and congratulations!

Volume 37 - Report No. 18 May 6, 2011

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 413F

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2120 Room 472

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. This week, Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on three roll calls from prior legislative sessions. All the roll calls are on proposed amendments to the House version of a $30.5 billion fiscal 2012 state budget. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

MOVE $1.5 MILLION FROM WELFARE TO EMPLOYMENT SERVICES (H 3500)

House 32-125, rejected an amendment that would move $1.5 million from the Department of Transitional Assistance (Welfare Department) to the Employment Services Program that provides welfare recipients with the skills, education and support needed to get a job.

Amendment supporters said this shift in funding would help give people the skills and incentive to go to work. They argued it is a wiser investment than continuing the old ways, which encourage them to stay on welfare.

Amendment opponents said the $1.5 million cut would hurt the effectiveness of the Transitional Assistance Department. They argued it could lead to the state not meeting federal standards and eventually losing millions in federal funding for food stamps.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment that would move $1.5 million from the Department of Transitional Assistance to the Employment Services Program. A "No" vote is against the move.)

EVACUATION DAY AND BUNKER HILL DAY (H 3500)

House 79-75, barely approved an amendment that would retain the current law relating to the Suffolk County (Boston, Chelsea, Revere and Winthrop) holidays of Evacuation Day (March 17) and Bunker Hill Day (June 17.) The measure would keep intact the current law approved by the Legislature in 2010 that retained the holidays' official status and the day off for most state and local government workers, but also required that all government offices in the four communities "be open for business and appropriately staffed." The law does not define "appropriately staffed." Prior to 2010, all state and local government and public offices were closed on those two days.

Evacuation Day, a controversial legal holiday celebrated since 1941 only in those four communities, commemorates a victory for the American patriots in 1776 when General George Washington and his troops drove the British out of Boston. March 17 is also St. Patrick's Day, and critics charge that Evacuation Day is a hack holiday invented to allow state workers to celebrate St. Patrick's Day. Bunker Hill Day commemorates the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The current law was a compromise between legislators who wanted to keep all Suffolk County government offices closed on those days and others, who wanted to abolish the two holidays altogether and keep all the offices open with full staffs.

The Statehouse and other state and local government buildings in Suffolk County were open on March 17 for the first time in many years and will be open on June 17. Thousands of local and state workers in these communities took off March 17 and will do the same on June 17. Thousands of other union state employees in all other cities and towns across the state are also given the day off per their collective bargaining agreements or may use it as a "floating holiday" — a procedure under which they can take off a day of their choice during the year.

Supporters of retaining the two holidays argued that both dates commemorate important events in the city of Boston and said it is unfair and cynical to attempt to eliminate them. They said critics should spend time educating people about the historical significance of these two dates instead of complaining about them. They noted these two holidays are not unreasonable in light of the salary cuts many public employees have been forced to accept over the past few years.

Opponents of the two holidays argued they cost taxpayers millions of dollars in pay for thousands of public employees who do not work on those days. Critics are even more vehement about the Evacuation Day holiday and contend it is just an excuse to provide a day off to celebrate St. Patrick's Day in Boston. They noted most residents have no idea of the significance of Evacuation Day and that nothing is really done to celebrate this "important" event. Some say that many years ago Boston's Mayor James Michael Curley assigned an aide to find an "important" historical American event that occurred on St. Patrick's Day and the aide came up with Evacuation Day.

The roll call vote was on a motion to retain the two holidays. A "Yes" vote is for retaining the two holidays. A "No" vote is against retaining them and favors abolishing them altogether.)

CUT $13.1 MILLION FOR PUBLIC DEFENDERS (H 3500)

House 36-120, rejected an amendment reducing funding for the compensation of public defenders for indigent defendants by $13.1 million from $45.3 million to 32.2 million.

Amendment supporters said this will save money and help balance the state budget. They noted additional money should go to district attorneys who prosecute the crimes and not to the criminals who commit them.

Amendment opponents said the $13.1 million cut will hamper the administration of these services and noted the constitution requires that even poor criminals have a right to an adequate defense.

(A "Yes" vote is for the $13.1 million cut. A "No" vote is against the $13.1 million cut.)

Kids and the Internet

DIANE K. DANIELSON

Why we're really going to miss Facebook.

Life changes quickly online. It's not easy to keep up, but here's the first of a series of articles about what parents need to know about kids and the Internet in 2011.

Facebook

With 500 million users, Facebook is not going away anytime soon. But, remember MySpace? Yeah, kids thought that was cool once, too. Now that parents are flocking to Facebook, the kids are already starting to head elsewhere.

What we will miss most about Facebook when it comes to kids are the privacy controls; the requirement to use real pictures, which prevents anonymous trolling; the ability to block/report people; and that it is basically a closed network.

While some are moving on, most kids will maintain a presence on Facebook. This means we still need to worry about kids cyberbullying, inviting strangers into their networks and posting inappropriate content and pictures. But, for now, it is the safest alternative provided you do the following.

Parental tasks

- Find out if your child is on Facebook. Almost all teenagers and nearly one-third of children under the age of 13 have profiles – many without their parents' knowledge.
- Have your child "friend" you or a trusted adult on Facebook. You bought the computer and/or smartphone, so you get to make the rules.
- Make sure that they don't block you or put you in a "friend list" from which they can hide information. I personally have a "friend list" called "See Nothing" that I use so certain people can still be my "friend" but literally see nothing that I post. They probably assume I never use Facebook. I also block others so that even if they look for me, they will never find me. Kids know how to do this, too.
- Check the Facebook account on your child's smartphone. Some kids have resorted to creating duplicate accounts. The one on their smartphone is likely the one they use most.
- If they use Facebook on their smartphone, encourage them to password protect their phone. Other kids can grab the phone and send out inappropriate messages from your child's account. Mandate that they tell you the password.

Twitter

Last weekend, as I was searching Twitter with regard to some town politics, I inadvertently discovered that the local high school students have adopted Twitter as a form of communication. Unfortunately, Twitter is much more problematic than Facebook when it comes to kids.

- Twitter can be accessed from a normal cell phone as well as a smartphone and/or a computer. This makes it easier for everyone to use.
- As we've seen, kids send some really bad messages by text: inappropriate photos, messages intent on bullying, and dumb things that would cause a college admissions officer to take pause. Now imagine that your kids are making these texts public to the world; and, that the world can comment, forward them, print them out and even start "following" your child.
- Kids can create accounts with false names and hide behind avatars and icons.
- It's even more public than you think. Google indexes tweets so they end up in Google search results. Facebook does not do this for personal profiles.

Missing Facebook yet? No? Then keep reading.

While doing the town meeting research, I noticed a tweet from a local teen that was offensive enough to question that child's college potential. Yep. Hope it's not your kid. Now in this teen's defense, they had attempted to use Twitter's privacy settings (unlike some of their friends). Unfortunately, due to a glitch that I've been working to sort out with Twitter, that tweet is still publicly viewable on certain search engines.

Even with a protected account that is set up properly, a child's name and picture, where they live as well as the names and pictures of the kids in their network are all public information. A quick Google search of the teen who authored the offensive tweet revealed their age, home address, more pictures, interests and the fact that a sibling has some disturbing URLs registered to the parents' home address.

Parental tasks

- Find out if your child is on Twitter. Twitter has 100 million users. Justin Beiber and Lady Gaga have 9 million-plus followers each. Sports stars are all over it. Where the celebrities go, the kids will follow.
- Explain that whatever they send out on Twitter can be taken out of context and made public even if they use privacy controls. All it takes is a technical glitch, an easy hack, or, more likely, one angry friend taking a screen capture of a tweet and publishing it to the world.
- Discuss the importance of not putting information with regard to their geographic location. Twitter is not meant to be a closed network. Strangers can see everything.
- Join Twitter and follow them.

While you can and should do all of the above, the best way to approach kids about the Internet is always to talk with your child about using common sense online. This means that you have to educate yourself about what's out there. That's part of your job as a parent. Sure, we all did dumb things as teenagers, but we never wrote it down in public or videotaped it and uploaded it to YouTube. It's time for parents to take back control.

You bought the computers and phones.

You pay for the ISPs and wireless services.

You have the power to limit access and develop boundaries.

Coming up next: How smartphones can lead to dumb moves by even the brightest children and what you can do to prevent it.

Insurance advisory committee update

One of the single biggest costs in the town's budget is health insurance. Earlier this year, the Board of Selectmen asked a group of union representatives to take an in-depth look at various insurance plans out there, both through the state's Government Insurance Commission (GIC) and the current insurance provider.

The group, dubbed the Insurance Advisory Committee, is outlined in the state's general laws and is a required first step for any town looking to make changes to the town employees' health insurance. The committee's charge is to review and make a recommendation for changes in health insurance.

The committee includes at least seven members from different unions within the town and one retiree. The town has 11 unions and, at this time, any changes to health insurance must involve contract negotiations.

The committee has been meeting over the past several months and was expected to present their recommendation to the selectmen early this month. They have requested a couple of additional weeks, and expect to have their findings in time for the Selectmen's Tuesday, May 24 meeting.

After hearing their recommendation, the selectmen can either accept or deny it. Any changes to health insurance still have to be negotiated through the unions.

cial fisheries? The water depth of ILH makes it not navigable for any commercial enterprise. Some of these organizations have not even taken the time to visit ILH and get a clear view of the issue. And somehow, these agencies can wield enough power as to jeopardize our property and quality of life values.

There seems to be wanton disregard for property rights.

We are all for the health and wellbeing of our environment but to ignore the rights of property owners is un-American and the last I checked, we are still part of the United States of America where we pride ourselves on limiting the power of government to limit the opportunity for abuse.

First Parish to host lobster roll sale

For many years, First Parish in Cohasset has offered the community a lobster roll sale during Father's Day weekend accompanying the South Shore Art Center's show and artists' sale on Cohasset Common. The Lobster Roll sale now runs under the direction of Art and Penny Myles with more than 60 volunteers handling all the details and enjoying the fun.

The sale has grown to reach many surrounding towns and businesses; some even plan Employee Appreciation Days around the sale. The Second Congregational Church's Strawberry Shortcake sale on the same weekend has helped to develop a tradition for many to enjoy the lobster rolls followed by this dessert.

Skippers stun Norwell

Win vaults Cohasset into first place in South Shore League

The Cohasset Boys Tennis team had two huge league victories over Harwich at home on Monday and at Norwell away on Tuesday.

In both matches the boys once again had to battle the elements as well as their opponents.

On a cold, windy Monday afternoon at Milliken field the Skippers fielded a new lineup against Harwich that featured three freshman, two sophomores, and senior captains Robbie Hill and Travers Craven.

Robbie Hill fought hard at first singles and lost to the very talented Nick Robbie in a battle of booming cross-court forehands.

Travers Craven outsteadied Ryan Spalt at second singles 6-4, 6-4. Freshman Doug Fitzgerald couldn't find his serve in the wind and fell to Brad Schultz 6-2, 6-2 at third singles. The match would be decided by the doubles teams with CHS trailing 2-1.

Luck not so good at Norwell

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

In what was the biggest game of the season to date, the Cohasset baseball team did everything it had to and a little more to take sole possession of the South Shore League lead.

Cohasset pitcher Jeff Cavanaro pitched a gem last Thursday, tossing a two-hit complete game shutout, and the Skippers took an 8-0 win over previously unbeaten Abington on the road.

Cohasset followed that win with a 9-0 win over Harwich on the strength of a gem by Drew Cobin, who fanned 15 in a three-hitter and had two hits and 2 RBI.

Cavanaro chipped in two hits in the win with 2 RBI.

The momentum slowed however, with a 7-6 loss in extra innings at Norwell on Tuesday when Cohasset let a 6-0 lead slip away in the last two innings.

In the Abington win, Cavanaro struck out five of the first six batters he faced and took a no-hitter into the fifth

Hingham comeback stuns Skippers

When Thomas Flibotte scored the third of his five goals with 4:19 left in the first half of Tuesday night's home game against neighboring Hingham, it looked like everything was going just as planned for the Skippers.

The goal gave Cohasset a 7-3 lead on their home turf, and Flibotte looked to have a hot hand.

Unfortunatley, momentum can change quickly, and when Hingham's Karl Weller put one by goalie T.J. Bicknell, the momentum was for all purposes changed, and Cohasset never completely recovered as Hingham scored six straight goals on the way to a thrilling 11-10 Hingham win.

"It was a great game," Cohasset coach Tom Flanagan said. "Unfortunately we came up on the short end. Losses like this you remember a long time, but I'm proud of my guys. When they got down by 2 they could have checked out and lost by 4, but they didn't. We took the last shot. We put the ball in Thomas' hands. They (Hingham goalie Derek McInnis) made a great save. They did a great job."

HIGH SCHOOL SAILING

Four wins in four weeks

New program off to great start

The high school sailing team, a seemingly impossible dream of local parents and students just a year ago, has started its second season off with four big wins against Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, Dover-Sherborne and Swampscott.

A collaborative team consisting of students from Cohasset HS, Hull HS, and the South Shore Charter School, named the Nantasket Nor'easters, competes in the Massachusetts Bay League and is coached by a team of coaches led by former collegiate coach, Kevin Broome

Thanks to the support and generosity of Sail Nantasket and the Hull Yacht Club, the team operates out of the yacht club sailing in the eight Club 420's which Sail Nantasket has purchased over the last several years. With school athletic budgets facing both significant cuts and increasing costs, there would be no possible way for a team to have formed without the volunteers and donors who have invested years of effort toward launching this endeavor.

Sail Nantasket is relying on the continued generosity of the community to volunteer their time and talents in running the program and for donations.

chair to get to the courts at 3:59 for the 4 p.m. match and paired with freshman Trevor Tedeschi to win at first doubles over Bill Milligan and Arum Patel in a close battle 6-4, 6-4.

The newly minted team of sophomore Justin Cobin and freshman Eric Weinstein would decide the match and volleyed the talented eighth grade twins Tom and Mike Logie off the courts with aggressive net play, overheads, and consistent first serves winning 6-4, 5-7, 6-2 to keep the chance of a repeat South Shore League Title alive.

Thanks to Coach Buffum for bringing Justin's new spin serve to the table just in time.

On Tuesday at Norwell the Skippers played in the wind and rain against the previously undefeated Clippers. Norwell had nipped CHS at home earlier in the season 3-2 with the Skippers losing in the third set at second doubles.

Cohasset started fast. Doug Fitz quickly put the first set up for Cohasset and went on to beat Andrew Cibotti 6-2, 6-3 at third singles.

The first doubles team of Jack Thomae and Eric Weinstein fell to the experienced senior captains Mike Logue and Tim Koch 6-1, 6-2. Trevor Tedeschi and Justin Cobin got in sync too late to recover after advice from coach Victor Hartman and lost to Matt Titlebaum and Mike McDonald 6-1, 6-3.

The match was decided by the senior captains, Hill and Craven.

Hill played smart, aggressive tennis and attacked sophomore George Robbie with punishing forehands, crisp volleys, and a very steady serve. He won the first set 6-4 despite breaking the strings in both of his rackets and using a loaner from the coach. Hill's confidence grew in the second set after pulverizing an obscenely angled crosscourt forehand blast for a winner to break serve and go ahead 5-2 and closing out the match in the next game.

Travers Craven won the first set over the crafty and steady Kyle Freeman at second singles.

He was losing 4-5 in the second set when Hill had knotted the match at 2-2. With all of the Norwell and CHS fans and players moving to courtside to watch the final outcome, Craven ratcheted up his game to another level and stole the last three games by going into lockdown and making no errors to close out the match for the Skippers 3-2.

The team is now 7-4 overall and 7-1 in SSL League play with final league matches against Carver, Mashpee, and Abington.

Robbie Hill, Travers Craven, and Doug Fitzgerald will compete in the Mass Individual State Championships this weekend at Newton South HS.

The Cohasset boys tennis team picked up a nice victory on the road last Thursday with a 5-0 win at Abington.

Doug Fitzgerald picked up a 6-1, 6-1 victory in his first start of the season playing second singles and Travers Craven notched a 6-2, 6-2 win in his debut at first singles.

Trevor Tedeschi and Nick Brown won their doubles match.

For Brown, it was his first varsity match.

Coastal Stars U12 in Championship game

After finishing an undefeated regular season the Coastal Stars U12 girls played the Championship game Saturday against highly rated Parkway at the Asiaf rink in Brockton. In a fast paced and physical game both teams came out strong at the first puck drop. Stars Goalie Alexa Hendrickson was on fire stopping a flurry of shots while forwards Alex Martini, Katie Talacci and Kaitlin McGovern kept the pressure on Parkway throughout the first period. Defensive players Olivia Leong and Molly Norton made several attempts to drive the puck from the Stars defensive zone down into Parkway territory with rifling shots on net then executing great back checking.

With determination at the start of the second period, Katie Talacci picked up a rebound off of a blistering shot from Olivia Leong and scored to get the Stars on board first. Unfortunately Parkway followed with 2 goals to get on top. Emma Boudreau and Brooke Harte made a continuous effort to regain control of the puck and move it into the neutral zone towards Parkway's net. With minutes left, Molly Norton grabbed the puck and put it past Parkway's goalie and tied the game to end the second period.

The third period was all about defense again as Elle Jackish and Maddy Welch worked hard breaking up several of Parkway's attempts. Forward Lindsey Malmin worked hard throughout the game to rush Parkways net while Erin Murray and Allie Siroonian were effective on the boards moving the puck out of the Stars defensive zone to give their teammates attacking opportunities.

With the third period ending in a tie, the game went into an unprecedented four overtimes with Parkway ending up on top.

Despite the loss the Stars had an impressive season playing as a cohesive unit employing team work and endless effort with a regular season record of 37 wins, 2 ties and 0 losses. The team was well coached by Blake Martini and assistant coaches Tony Talacci and Kirk Jackish. The coaches constantly focused the girls on skills and development, good sportsmanship, hard work and mostly having fun.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

SIGN UP FOR SUMMER CAMP WHERE PLAYING IS LEARNING!

By Bette Bussel – Executive Director American Camp Association, New England

Children's schedules seem to be more packed with activities and responsibilities -- homework, chores, music lessons, and organized sports -- than ever before. Not enough time for good, old-fashioned play for children can result in health and psychological consequences. Child development theories are based on the fundamental concept that play IS learning.

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) stresses the importance of play in children's learning. In a report written in defense of play and in response to forces threatening free play and unscheduled time, AAP concludes free and unstructured play is healthy and—in fact—essential for helping children develop important social, emotional, and cognitive skills. It can also help children deal with stress in a healthy manner.

Quality summer camp experiences meet the developmental needs of children by offering environments designed to encourage kids to be kids:

- Experiential education and experiences (learning by doing)
- Opportunities for healthy, safe risk-taking (physical and emotional)
- Skill building in a broad array of interest/activity areas
- Friendship and decision making skill building
- An "unplugged" environment
- A community that includes caring adults, who are teachers and role models
- Opportunities to engage in unstructured play

Summer camps offer day and overnight experiences for children that maximize opportunities to play in a tremendous variety of ways. From free play to performing plays, from intense athletic contests to non-competitive games, opportunities for play are paramount at camp.

GIRLS LAX

hasset on a high, unbeaten in play in the Patriot League and with a memory of crushing an upstart Cohasset squad a year ago.

The game started as something of a track meet, as the teams scored 13 goals in the first 13 minutes, with the lead changing hands three times during that stretch. But just as important as Cohasset answering Scituate's runs during that opening exchange was the double yellow-card assessed to Scituate senior captain Alanna Woodford just after the 12-minute mark, disqualifying her from the contest.

In girls lacrosse, two yellow-cards results in a player's ejection from the game – and the subsequent game – but three cards on any one team forces the offenders to play minus a player for the remainder of the game. With under a minute left in the half, Scituate's Kate Lemire got her second yellow card of the game, leaving the Sailors two players down for the entire second half.

The first half for Cohasset saw senior captain Kelsey Erler score three goals, and freshman Lexa Grasz – inserted into the lineup when junior Whitney Jaffe turned an ankle – add three of her own, as the Skippers held a 10-9 lead at the break.

Cohasset relinquished the lead at the 9:41 mark of the second half, and the track meet seemed to be on again. Sophomore Hope Kissick netted her second of the night just 13 seconds later, but it took just 24 more seconds for Scituate's Kelly Martin to score her fourth of six on the night.

It was the last lead Scituate would hold.

Jaffe – who returned to the game before the first half ended – scored a minute after Martin to tie things up at 13. Within the next 60 seconds, Angela Cipolla gave the Skippers the lead and freshman Maddie Curley extended it.

Ultimately, Cohasset's numbers advantage started to pay off. While teams play short, they are allowed to play close defense at full strength. Choosing to do that, Scituate was giving up its biggest advantage in the game, its fastbreak.

Cohasset's close defense of Anna Seraikas, Eliza Kinnealey and Molly Fitzgerald – with strong support from defensive midfielder Sage Stebbins – forced Scituate to slow down and to settle for lesser scoring opportunities. Junior goalie Stephanie Brierley snuffed most of those chances, finishing the night with 13 saves.

Cohasset also was able to start its own fast break against the depleted Sailors, with Erler throwing a long break-out pass to Jaffe to make the score 16-14. From there, Jaffe and Scituate's Martin traded scores, with Cohasset killing the clock against a desperate Scituate press to close the game up 18-16.

On the night, Jaffe led Cohasset scorers with 5 goals and one assist. Erler finished 4-1, and Grasz and Kissick each added an assist to their previously mentioned goal totals. Sophomore midfielder Kristen Alexander netted two goals and an assist, freshmen Katherine Dunn and Curley both had a goal and an assist, and Cipolla had her single marker.

With the win – plus a 17-2 blowout over North Quincy on Friday, May 6 – the Skippers improved to 8-2, good enough to ensure a berth in the Massachusetts state tournament. Cohasset played South Shore League rival Norwell yesterday with the league championship on the line; Norwell, the two-time defending state champions, has won every league title since the South Shore League started playing lacrosse in 2007.

Results were not available at press time.

inning before Abington broke the no-no.

He finished with nine strikeouts.

"Jeff pitched a great game," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "He was in control. He threw the curve for strikes a lot."

The defending Div. 4 State Champion Skippers put the pressure on quickly, pushing across a run in the top of the first and four more in the second against ace Zach Littman.

Anders Goetz scored the first run after getting on first, stealing second and third base, and scoring on a single by Jamie Faber.

"We knew they had a young catcher and we have a lot of team speed," Afanasiw said of running early. "Looking at his arm strength we wanted to run."

Drew Cobin and Faber added RBI singles in the second inning and Anders Goetz sacrificed his brother Connor Goetz home in the frame.

Cavanaro knocked in Shane Haggerty in the fourth for a 5-0 lead in the fourth.

Cohasset added another run in the sixth, courtesy of a Haggerty single, a bad pickoff throw, passed ball and an Anders Goetz RBI single.

Cohasset closed out the scoring with two runs in the eighth.

"This was a good win," Afanasiw said. "They were undefeated. Abington is a very good program. To come to their home field and do this was great."

The win was a boost for the Skippers.

Cohasset's Drew Cobin dives safely back to first in the fifth inning of Cohasset's 8-0 win at Abington.

"Aside from the Spellman game, they have confidence in themselves," Afanasiw said. "When Jeff is on the mound they're in control. Aside from two minor mistakes (a throwing error in the sixth and a bad-hop grounder that snuck through) we played error-free baseball."

Cohasset improved to 9-3 with the win, with an 8-0 mark in South Shore League play.

With the win, Afanasiw said his team is now the hunted.

"We've got a target on our back now," he said.

BOYS LAX

The outcome was never predetermined in this one, even after Hingham had scored the six straight goals to take a 9-7 lead.

Trailing by two, Cohasset fought back with goals by John McGoldrick and Flibotte to tie it back up before Hingham's Tim Driscoll scored on a break to give the Harbormen the lead again with 2:47 left to play.

Noah Ellis followed with an insurance goal that turned out to be huge with Flibotte looming.

And looming he was.

With 1:33 left, Flibotte scored a beauty with a behind-the-back, over the shoulder shot that cut the lead to 11-10.

One minute later, Flibotte had a chance to even things up with a blast from just in front of the net.

McInnis made the perfect save on that shot and Hingham hung on.

"That was a great game," Hingham coach John Todd said. "Thomas is amazing. We had all we could just to be with him.

"Clearly, they're one of the best teams in the state. They have high expectations. They'll make a run (in the Div. 3 tournament)."

The loss dropped Cohasset to 10-4, while Hingham improved to 11-2.

Flanagan said that while losses aren't is favorite thing, his team can only benefit from games like Tuesday's.

"Losses are losses," he said. "All of our losses are against Top-10 teams. We're a Div. 3 team playing a Div. 1 schedule. This will help us. We're battle tested going into the playoffs. We have a great group of kids who work hard. No one likes to lose, but to be iron, you have to play iron. We will be ready during playoff time."

A big positive Flanagan has seen the past few games is a scoring threat not named Flibotte emerging.

"Thomas had five goals, but in the past two games we've had five different scorers," he said. "Last night we had five different scorers."

Along with Flibotte, Cohasset got goals from Kyle Livingstone, who made a triumphant return after missing five weeks with an injury, Drew Nahill, McGoldrick and Charlie Neaves.

"When Kyle went out we started to rely on Thomas," Flanagan said. "Teams looked to stop him and others were standing around. Now we're getting others scoring. Kyle came back and and scored two goals. That was huge."

For the Hingham game, Sam Leahy was named an honorary captain.

Flanagan said that his defense has played well all season long, and the offense is starting to gel.

He praised several of his players for going above and beyond.

"We asked two players to play different positions when Kyle was hurt," he said. "Charlie Neaves started at attack and was asked to play middie when Kyle went down. He did a good job. Pat Dunn was asked to go from close to long stick middie and back. Those guys were the unsung heroes."

Flanagan said a few more players were playing well.

"Alex Kinnealey is winning faceoffs and sparking the attack," he said. "John McGoldrick has stepped up on the attack and played well."

Cohasset is at Bishop Guertin on Saturday at 3:30 p.m. and hosts Hanover on Monday.

CHS commended students named

Principal Joel Antolini of Cohasset Middle-High School announced that William Craven, Patrick Dunn, Mike Monaco, Greta Shwachman and Emily Toomey have been named Commended Students in the 2011 National Merit Scholarship Program. A Letter of Commendation from the school and National, Merit Scholarship Corporation, which conducts the program, will be presented by the principal to these scholastically talented seniors at class night on June 2.

About 34,000 commended students throughout the nation are being recognized for their exceptional academic promise. Although they have not continued in the 2011 competition for National Merit Scholarships, Commended Students placed among the top 5 percent of more than 1.5 million students who entered the 2011 competition by taking the 2009 Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test.

"Recognition of high achieving students is essential to advancing educational excellence in our nation," said a spokesperson for NMSC. "As demonstrated by their outstanding performance in our highly competitive program, the young men and women named Commended Students represent some of the most academically talented students in our country. We sincerely hope this recognition will enhance their educational opportunities and encourage them in then pursuit of academic success."

Antolini also announced that Samuel Green has advanced to finalist standing in the National Merit Scholarship Program by demonstrating through distinguished performance high potential for future academic accomplishment. Samuel will also be recognized at class night with a National Merit Scholarship Program Certificate of Merit. "It is an honor to recognize and congratulate the efforts of these students," Antolini said, "and it is a wonderful opportunity for the community to share in our tradition for academic excellence and success."

LIFE AT CHS

Finals are coming up

It seems that A.P. exams are finally coming to an end. But really, it never ends, because finals are coming up and the last day of school (only 2 weeks!) doesn't seem close at all!

On Friday, the band and chorus visited Six Flags and to compete in the annual band and chorus festival. Good luck to the CHS musicians!

Last Tuesday, the sailing team ended its undefeated season after a tough race against Lincoln Sudbury. Hopefully, Captains Danielle Sookiasian and

NATALIE DIGNAM

Morgan Graz can get the Skippers back on track this Thursday for another tough race against Wellesley

The Arts Festival will be held on the common from June 17th to June 19th, so don't forget to sign for a chance to showcase your art! Also, CHS will having Arts Night on June 19th, which will include senior tables displaying artistic accomplishments from the past four years.

Amid the anticipation of graduation, CHS seniors have been restless for that famous end of the year BBQ! As we're waiting for the warmer weather, enjoy the sun at least for this week and good luck to the sailing team!

Students sharing love of music

CARLY ODDLEIFSON

I have been a violinist with South Shore Conservatory's Bay Youth Symphony (BaYS) for four years. In eighth grade, I wanted an opportunity to play in a regional orchestra and was excited when I learned that BaYS was being formed.

There are many aspects of BaYS that I enjoy. Playing music with a full orchestra of strings and winds makes my years of studying violin feel worthwhile. We play a variety of music from many different composers including Dvorak, Rimsky-Korsakov, Mozart, Copland, Bizet, and Stravinsky. The music is very challenging, but, with practice, very rewarding.

I also enjoy meeting and playing with students from other high schools. Because you must audition to get accepted into BaYS, we all share a love of music and want to be there. Our rehearsals are very focused and we work hard preparing for our three annual concerts.

BaYS is special because of our connection with the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra (the Phil). Before most concerts, artistic advisor Steven Karidoyanes, who is also the conductor of the Phil, rehearses with us. Also, every two years we have the opportunity to play in concert with the Phil. It's an amazing experience to play side by side with professional musicians!

Although weekly attendance is important for the success of BaYS, managing director Candace Kniffen understands when students have conflicts with school or family. The program is intended to enhance and enrich, but not replace, existing school music programs.

BaYS has helped me grow musically. This year has been especially interesting as I have learned a lot from the three different conductors we have played with during BaYS search for a new music director/conductor. Every conductor has their own style and it hugely affects how we play together. Also this year, I have played in the Honors String Quartet, which has been a lot of fun.

Anyone who loves to play music should definitely consider auditioning for BaYS. And, it's not just for string players; there are openings for wind players and percussionists as well. BaYS rehearsals are in Duxbury, which is a closer alternative than going all the way into Boston to play in a youth symphony. Because it is somewhat competitive, it's important to spend time preparing your audition piece.

For more information about BaYS, South Shore Conservatory's three-tiered youth orchestra program, visit www.sscmusic.org/orchestra.html. Auditions for BaYS' 2011/2012 season take place in June. Students interested in scheduling an audition should contact Candace Kniffen at c.kniffen@sscmusic.org.

Carly is a junior at Cohasset High School. In addition to playing the violin with BaYS, and clarinet in the Cohasset High School Band, she also enjoys traveling and spending time in the White Mountains.

GIMME SHELTER

Kittens too cute for words

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue currently has a litter of six kittens, all looking for homes. We give preference to those who are willing to adopt two littermates. This is an ideal situation, both for the kittens and for the families who adopt them. If any haven't been adopted by the time they're 4 months old, they should then be mature enough to be adopted singly.

We have five orange kittens, and one little black one. They are all adorable and irresistible, and they'll be ready to go by the end of May. You can check them out on the website, along with many of our other felines, at www.hsar.org.

The shelter's hours are from 2 to 3 p.m. Saturdays, and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Mondays. If these hours aren't convenient, please call the shelter at 781-925-3121 and leave a message for Judy, the adoption coordinator.

The shelter is at 50 L Street, Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email, hsar@verizon.net.

The shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on Thursday, May 26. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

We are always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 782-925-3638.

Thanks to the many people who generously donate to our cause. We couldn't do it without you.

SWEET RELIEF NURSERY AND PRESCHOOL:

From Reading to Relay

Sweet Relief Nursery and Preschool, an Early Education Learning Center in Cohasset, hosted its first Usborne Book Fair on Wednesday, May 4. The goal: To foster the love of reading among its preschool students while fundraising for the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life.

Sweet Relief is a home-based preschool environment enrolling students, ages 20 months to 4 years old. Sweet Relief is licensed through the State of Massachusetts Department of Early Education and Care and provides the foundation that supports all children in their development as life-long learners and contributing members of the community.

Lyn Congdon Previte, director and owner of Sweet Relief, is an 11-year cancer survivor and has led her Sweet Relief team of parents, students, community members and friends at the Cohasset ACS Relay for Life for many years. This year, Sweet Relief has partnered with Usborne Books in an effort to raise the Sweet Relief Team's fundraising goal.

A percentage of the proceeds from the May 4 book fair at Sweet Relief will go directly to Sweet Relief's Team fundraising efforts for Relay For Life. An online book fair, accessible until May 31, provides an opportunity for the entire community to purchase these award-winning books with full credit applied toward Sweet Relief's team fundraising goal. Community members interested in purchasing Usborne Books via the Sweet Relief Team webpage can visit www.ubah.com/bf46733.

The book fair is complemented in the classroom through Usborne's "Reach For The Stars" program. Sweet Relief students are asked to commit to reading with their parents for 30 minutes per day. The students have the opportunity to involve their loved ones via sponsorships for their literacy efforts. Dollars raised will be divided between the team's Relay for Life fundraising efforts and a portion is given back, in the form of books, to the participating student-readers.

Usborne Books are written by educators and designed to graphically draw the students in, make them want to learn the material on the pages and help them retain that knowledge. With more than 1,300 titles to choose from, parents and educators are able to build an age-appropriate library for their children and students.

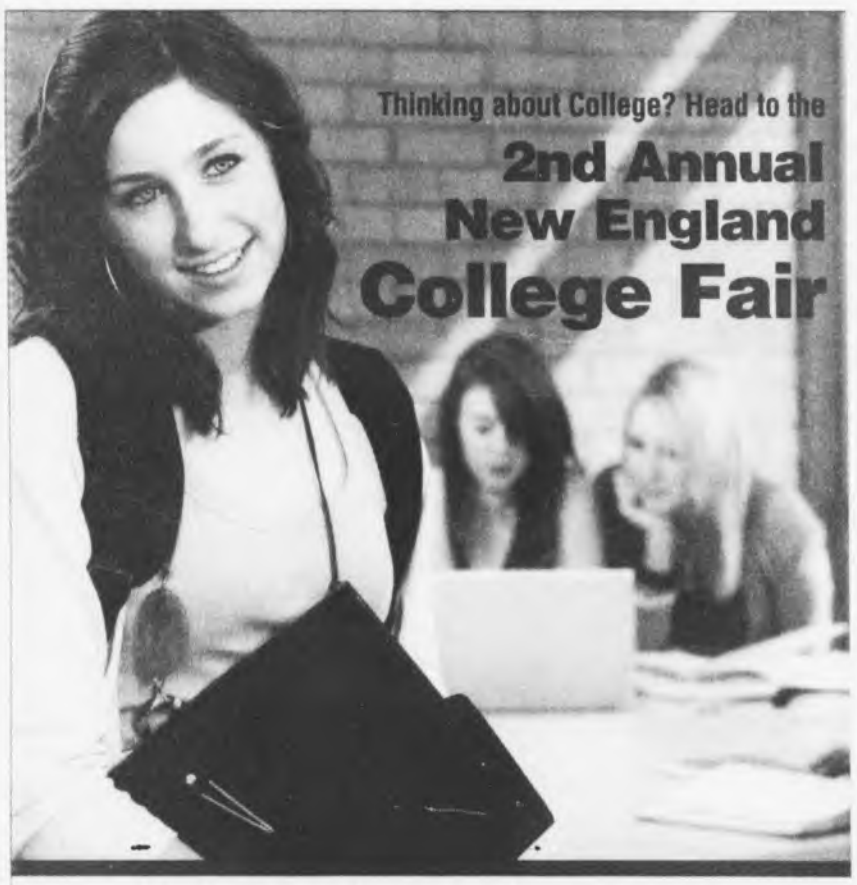
The American Cancer Society Relay For Life is an event that gives everyone in communities across the globe a chance to celebrate the lives of people who have battled cancer, remember loved ones lost and fight back against the disease.

Teams participating in the 2011 Cohasset Relay, scheduled for June 24 and 25 at Cohasset High School, will take turns walking or running around a track for 24 hours. Each team is asked to have a representative on the track at all times during the event. Because cancer never sleeps, Relays are overnight events up to 24 hours in length.

"I am very passionate about involving our Sweet Relief students in community service from a very early age," said Previte. "Each year, our Sweet Relief Relay for Life Team grows in participation, fundraising dollars and in the number of lives touched by the magnitude of realizing they are taking part in a very special event that is sure to make a difference in the fight against cancer. I am very proud of my students, and their families, for making this such an important part of our community outreach curriculum component," Previte said.

To find out more about Sweet Relief Nursery and Preschool, visit the school's website at www.sweetrelief-cohasset.com.

For more information regarding the ACS Cohasset Relay For Life, or to find out how to donate to Sweet Relief's Relay For Life efforts through Usborne Books, call Lyn Congdon Previte at 781-383-9723 or email to sweetrelief143@aol.com.



Prepare to be surprised and delighted

Local artist, Lennie Peterson, will be creating a 6-foot by 3-foot portrait of a surprise musician in front of a live audience from noon until 1.30 p.m. in the reception hall at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Avenue.

Guitarist Mark Campbell and saxophonist Tom Hall, will perform improvised music while Peterson draws. The event is free and open to all; optional cash donations will benefit the "Why Me, Inc." charity which helps children with cancer and their families.

The afternoon event is titled "Un-Think It! (The Arts of the Flow)" and is designed to encourage interaction and discussion about the role of instinct and improvisation in everyday life. The concept of "flow" is relevant to people of all ages and backgrounds and ideally everyone will walk away from the 90-minute presentation with food for thought – if not a whole host of their own ideas.

Peterson, Campbell and Hall are all professional musicians who have been performing individually and collectively for the past 20 years. Their repertoire ranges from Bach to Billie Holiday so the musician featured in the May 15 presentation will be a surprise for the audience. In addition, Peterson's complete collection of musicians' portraits is due to open in June at the Boston Convention Center.

High School students, Transfer students, and Parents are all invited!

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Work in the village

Last week, Pilgrim Bank began construction of their new corporate headquarters to be located in the former Cohasset Hardware Store. The familiar building will undergo renovations to enhance it and meet the needs of Pilgrim Bank, its staff and its customers, however, the changes to the outside were designed with an eye towards maintaining the historic integrity of the building.

RAISING 'CANE'

The 'Dear Crossing' signs will remain on the lawn of the South Shore Community Center through Memorial Day before they head off on a months-long adventure around town. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Senior Center building fundraiser kicks off

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

In front of the South Shore Community Center this week a peculiar grouping of signs cropped up. The signs look a bit like misplaced street signs with the phrase "Dear Crossing" and an icon of an elderly couple.

But, these signs were not misplaced. Instead, they are part of a deliberate effort to raise awareness and money for the building of a new senior center for the Town of Cohasset.

The fundraiser, which has been dubbed "Raising cane and raising cash," will move these signs all over Cohasset during the next few months. Each time the "Dear Crossing" signs end up on someone's lawn, the homeowners give a donation to have them moved to another home.

"Our goal is to raise awareness and raise money," said Marita Carpenter, president of the Social Service League, and one of the key proponents of the senior center project.

The way the fundraiser works is the signs will be placed on a lawn of an unknowing homeowner, ideally overnight or while they are not home. A letter explaining why suddenly there are lawn signs on their lawn will be placed in the mailbox. Each time the "Dear Crossing" signs end up on someone's lawn, the homeowners give a donation to have them moved to another home. Once the donation comes in the signs will be removed and off to find another unsuspecting resident.

"We want people to wonder what it's all about."

Mary Sease,
Capital Campaign Committee

The hope is to get people all over town talking about the need for a new senior center, Carpenter said.

All the donations will go to the Friends of Elder Affairs New Building Fund.

The money raised will be part of building a foundation (both literally and figuratively) for the new senior center.

The signs will remain on the lawn of the Chief DeLuca will present proposal to Selectmen

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

The police department wants to add a new officer to its ranks – one with four legs and a lot of fur.

In the coming weeks, Police Chief Mark DeLuca will bring forward a proposal to the Board of Selectmen to add a police K-9 unit to the department.

Right now, the police department is dependent on other town's police dogs when a situation calls for it.

"When it comes to response time having our own K-9 will be worth its weight in gold," DeLuca said in a phone interview this week. A copy of the police department's K-9 proposal was provided to the Mariner by a selectman.

Police K-9 units have had to be called into town on several occasions over the past year. In all those instances time was of the essence, DeLuca said.

"Should one of our seniors or kids with a disability wander, a readily accessible K-9 would be invaluable," DeLuca said.

The majority of local towns have a K-9 officer, including Hull, Hingham, Scituate, Quincy, Rockland and Duxbury. In instances where a K-9 was needed Cohasset has relied on those towns mutual aid for assistance.

"In these tough economic times it is not very realistic, or fair, to expect surrounding communities to provide Cohasset services at their resident's expense," DeLuca said. "(The other towns) are as fiscally challenged as we are."

When a K-9 team is called to Cohasset, the K-9's home unit pays the overtime for that officer.

"It's time for our town to step up and provide the services we need," DeLuca said.

This week, Hingham's K-9 was called in to help in the investigation of car break-ins on Reservoir Road. Previous to that, Cohasset PD had to

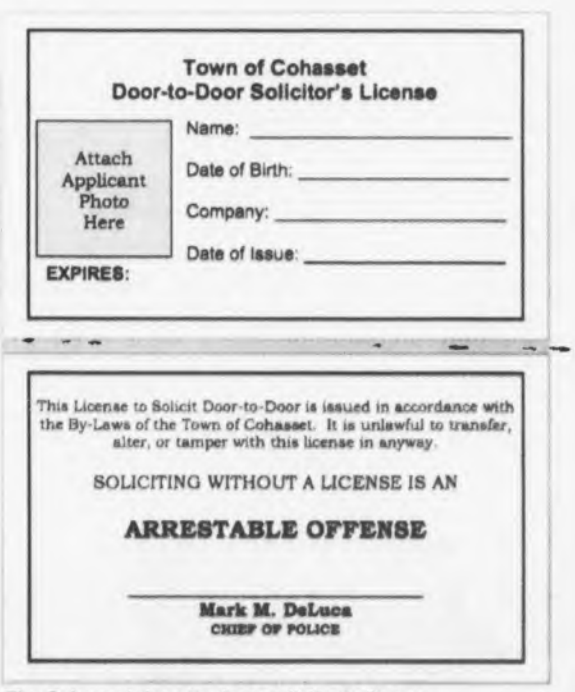
TOWN BYLAW EXPLAINED By Mary Ford/mford@wickedlocal.com

Door-to-door solicitors must register with CPD

EXTRA IN YOUR MARINER



What it is
The Cohasset bylaw regulating door-to-door solicitors, adopted five years ago and approved by the Attorney General's Office, has been effective in limiting the number of solicitors who come to town with the intention of getting in and quickly getting out, police said. It has also provided some comfort to residents that the people who are soliciting have background checks performed by the police department.

Bylaw at a glance

- Solicitors are required to register with the police, where they can apply for a $25 license.
- Solicitors are required to wear a badge, issued by the police, that includes their name and photograph.
- Solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.
- The licenses are good for a period to be determined by the police chief up to one year and are non-transferable.

Violation
Any willful violation of a town bylaw, such as the solicitation bylaw, is an arrestable offense, police said. The bylaw requires that those selling magazines, for example, must first register with the police department.

Exceptions
Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18, unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes; and those soliciting for charitable organizations, unless those solicitors are paid.

This week the Mariner caught up with Rosee Uttal-Duffy, the membership coordinator for Holly Hill Farm. There are lots of activities at the Farm this spring and summer for all ages. Give Rosee a call to find out the benefits of being a member of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm. PHOTO/NANCY WHITE

Rosee Uttal-Duffy

Name: Rosee Uttal-Duffy.

Occupation: Membership coordinator at Holly Hill Farm.

Best day of your life: April 7, 1989, the day I became a bubbe.

Best vacation: May 2009. I returned to suburban Philadelphia for my 50th high school reunion and New York areas where I spent most of my growing up years.

Favorite season: Summer.

Favorite meal: Grilled salmon.

Best book: "The Immense Journey" by Loren Eiseley. Sub-title: An imaginative naturalist (and anthopologist) explores the mysteries of man and nature. The London Times Literary Supplement says, "Dr. Eiseley has written a work of true science which must surely take its place also as great literature."

Best movie: "Bad Day at Black Rock."

Best TV show: Character driven dramas, i.e. "Numbers," "Blue Bloods."

Favorite music: Classical piano.

Most embarrassing moment: At age 9, I hit my head on a mailbox near the bus stop. I walked on, but then remembered I had a letter to mail. I returned to the mailbox and a woman waiting for the bus said how lucky that was. I rudely responded. When I saw my mother later she berated me because that woman knew me (I didn't know her!) and reported me to my mother.

Pet peeve: Lack of requested information in a voicemail.

Goal: To outlive my mother who lived to be 101 and a half and one week old.

Person you'd most like to meet: Dalai Lama.

Biggest worry: Current state of the real estate market.

Best part of Cohasset: Holly Hill Farm.

Transient vendor licenses approved

Two ice cream trucks and a lemonade stand will be making the rounds in Cohasset, in particular Sandy Beach, once again this summer. The Board of Selectmen approved the renewal of three transient vendor licenses on Tuesday night.

Ice cream trucks, Zak's Ice Cream and Nona's Homemade Ice Cream, are returning, as well as Del's Lemonade.

Town Manager search process

The search for the next Town Manager is on the brink of the public portion of the process. For several weeks, a screening committee has been meeting and reviewing the more than 90 applicants for the position. They have conducted interviews with who they felt were the top candidates and expect to give the Selectmen a recommendation of finalists by next week.

The Board of Selectmen will then conduct public interviews with the finalists (the number of finalists is unknown at this time).

The Selectmen chose to have the interviews over two nights, Wednesday, June 1 and Thursday, June 2. It is expected they will offer the job to their top candidate by early to mid-June to give interim Town Manager Steve Lombard some overlap time with the new permanent town manager.

Car crashes into Little League fields

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police are investigating a hit and run accident that took place overnight Thursday (May 19). A Nissan Maxima registered to at 20-year-old Cohasset man came out of Red Gate Lane, went across North Main Street and through the fences into the Little League fields without stopping, police said.

At 6 a.m. on Thursday (May 19) police received a call reporting heavy damage to the Little League fields. Police found a debris field that included a side-mirror, several other miscellaneous pieces of a Nissan Maxima and a license plate embedded in the ground.

The plate came back to the 20-year-old. Officers located the car at an address off Forest Avenue and are conducting an investigation. Charges are expected to be imminent, police said.

Police said there is substantial damage to the fences on the new part of the fields.

Car seats

Scituate and Cohasset police will offer free child safety seat inspections from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Sun day, May 29 at the Scituate Police Department, 604 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

No appointments are necessary. Seats will be inspected on a first-come, first-served basis. Participants should bring the owner's manual for both their vehicle and the car seat, and children should be present to en sure proper installation and fit tings.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, a correctly used safety seat reduces the risk of a fatality by 71 percent and serious injury risk by 67 percent.

Shoplifting

Police have summonsed a 65-year-old North Scituate man to court on the charge of shoplifting following an incident last week (Monday, May 9) at Stop & Shop. Police responded to a report of shoplifting at 11:15 a.m. that Monday and learned the North Scituate man had left the story without paying for $186 in groceries. Police said the suspect had a history of this type of thing and has been issued a no trespass order from Stop & Shop and is no longer allowed to go there. The suspect complained of chest pains after police arrived and was taken to the hospital. The suspect faces the charge of shoplifting over $100.

Dog bite

Police responded to the home of a 77-year-old Church Street woman at about 10:08 a.m. on Tuesday (May 10) after she called to report a dog had bitten her. Police said she was walking her dog near the reservoir when a stray dog described as having reddish brown fur came up and began to fight her dog. The stray dog bit her on the upper thigh when she tried to break them up. Police said the dog did not break the skin and she did not require stitches. She was able to provide a description of the other dog and the plate number of a vehicle in the area. Police ran the plate and went to the Pleasant Street home that turned out to be the dog's owner. Police said there is no fear of rabies; the other dog owner said his dog ran ahead of him on their walk. The Animal Control Officer is following up.

Bikes missing

A 44-year-old North Main Street woman went to the police station last Tuesday at about 5:24 p.m. to report that two bicycles had been stolen from her garage. One is a white woman's Puegot bike valued at $50 and the other is a boy's black mountain bike, also valued at $50. She said the bikes were taken sometime during the past three weeks.

MV accidents

• At 5:34 p.m. on Wednesday (May 11), police responded to a two-car accident at North Main Street and Forest Avenue. Police said an 81-year-old Cohasset woman who was traveling south on North Main in a Chrysler Sebring attempted to make a left from N. Main onto Forest Avenue. Police said she failed to yield to a 2010 Nissan Altima, driven by a 56-year-old Cohasset woman, who was headed north on North Main. The Sebring had to be towed; there were no apparent injuries and the 81-year-old was cited for failure to yield, police said.

• At 7:58 p.m. on Friday (May 13), police responded to a single-car crash on South Main Street just past Beechwood Street if you are headed toward Scituate. Police said a 63-year-old Scituate man in a 2005 Toyota Sienna reported he had a coughing fit and lost consciousness before hitting a rock. His car sustained substantial damage to the front and right side. He was taken to South Shore Hospital with non-life threatening injuries. His car was towed.

Raccoon put down

A 67-year-old landscaper on Howard Gleason Road notified police last Thursday (May 12) at about 12:11 p.m. about a raccoon that was acting strangely. An officer responded and found the raccoon shaking and unable to walk. The officer put the animal down. Police said any wild animal acting strangely is now considered rabid in Cohasset. They do not test the animal unless it has come in contact with a person.

Solicitor

Police found a nicely dressed man selling windows in Kendall Village after a Hammond Avenue resident called to complain. Police advised the man about the town bylaw requiring solicitors to register with the police and told him to cease and desist until he obtains the proper paperwork.

NEWS UPDATE

Regional dispatch center expected to open in October

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Come this fall, the Town of Cohasset will be transitioning over the regional dispatch center in Hingham.

After a number of delays in getting the center up and running since the project was first considered in 2007, Hingham Town Manager Ted Alexiades said recently that the four towns – Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, and Norwell – are making "great progress" in pulling "a lot of loose ends together between now and [when the center becomes fully operational]." October is the targeted date for that to happen.

"It's been a very long project," Alexiades said. "The end is not only within our sight but within our grasp."

On Aug. 16, Hingham's "roll-out" into the new facility at Town Hall will begin. "It's a fairly complex transition process requiring shutting off local 911 service and turning it on at the regional level," Alexiades said. "This will be a cooperative effort between the town and Verizon in conjunction with the State 911 Department, which coordinates all 911 services in Massachusetts."

Despite the complexities, Alexiades said, it will be a seamless and instantaneous switchover, with no break in emergency service.

The transition into the new facility will be accomplished in two-week intervals, with each community having that amount of time "to work out the bugs and to prepare for the next community's move here," Alexiades said. "By the end of September, all four towns should be moved in and up and running."

Alexiades explained that once a community moves its dispatchers to the new facility, it becomes a fully operational part of the center. "We just can't move everyone at the same time," he said.

The benefits of such a facility are expected to include enhanced safety for fire and police personnel, improved services to the public, more effective information-sharing among the four towns, and a cost savings.

The new dispatch center will be one of 15 regional emergency response facilities of its kind in the state, but this is the first time that communities have banded together to form one of their own. All four towns have signed the required inter-municipal agreement.

The four communities are taking advantage of a state grant program designed to encourage these types of regionalization efforts. Eventually, more communities could hook into the Hingham dispatch center.

Last summer, the legislature gave final approval to a bill creating the new regional facility. Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, played a major role in the passage of the bill, as did the late Rep. Robert Nyman, D-Hanover, who co-sponsored the legislation in early 2010 and was instrumental in advocating for its passage.

Outstanding issues

When the Cohasset Board of Selectmen was considering signing the inter-municipal agreement with Hingham, Hull and Norwell to form the regional dispatch center it was not without considerable controversy and discussion.

The Cohasset Police Association and several residents raised questions about the various logistics involved in the transition to the regional dispatch center. Among the key concerns raised was how — and if — the police station would be manned during the overnight hours. Under the current structure the only person in the station overnight is the dispatcher.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr said this issue, and the regional dispatch center as a whole, will be discussed at an upcoming selectmen's meeting.

"We want our public safety officials to educate us on the new system. We want to be sure everyone in the public is comfortable interacting with the new system," Carr said in a phone interview this week.

State grants

The project is funded by $3.6 million in state grants to cover construction, operating, and capital costs. In addition, several months ago the State 911 Department awarded a $2.2 million grant on top of the previous funding to go toward constructing, furnishing, and equipping the center.

"Without a doubt this has been a very difficult and arduous process," Alexiades said. "Something as sensitive as public safety requires small steps to avoid any errors."

Alexiades commended Hull Town Manager Phil Lemnios, Norwell Town Administrator James Boudreau, and former Cohasset Town Manager Bill Griffin and Cohasset Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard for their role in bringing the center to reality.

It will be run as a separate intergovernmental agency among the four towns.

Alexiades also credits Hingham resident Kevin Bulman, the project manager; the Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, and Norwell police and fire chiefs; Hingham Information Technology Director Steve Becker; and Hingham Deputy Fire Chief Robert Olsson for their part.

All this translates into "an outstanding public safety service that will be provided," Alexiades said. "We all know that all the other communities in the state will be watching us to see how our regional dispatch center works before deciding if they want to take the plunge themselves into such a sensitive service area.

"We're confident, though, that when they see what we've done here, they'll also consider doing it," he said.

Reporter Nancy White contributed to this report.

The view of the new downtown Pilgrim Bank site from Main and Elm streets.

Pilgrim Bank work begins

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

Last week, Pilgrim Bank began construction of their new corporate headquarters to be located in the former Cohasset Hardware Store. The familiar building will undergo renovations to enhance it and meet the needs of Pilgrim Bank, its staff and its customers, however, the changes to the outside were designed with an eye towards maintaining the historic integrity of the building.

A Building Committee of the Board of Directors along with Garry Gardner of Sheskey Architects in Quincy spent months reviewing designs to ensure that the new space would not be a complete departure from what has stood as an icon in Cohasset for decades. In fact, the front of the building, which faces North Main, will not significantly change its look. The contractor, Holland Construction, of Weymouth, says the new Pilgrim "World Headquarters" will take approximately 6-8 months to complete.

"We take our tag line seriously," says Frank Campbell, President and Chief Executive Officer of Pilgrim Bank. "We are Cohasset's 'hometown' bank and are excited to be able to expand our business right here in the Village. We anticipate that the effects of construction on traffic and pedestrians will be minimal."

The only major changes to the outside look of the building will be on the 2nd floor where the familiar large floor to ceiling windows that can be seen on South Main and Elm streets will be replaced with more standard sized windows to be more consistent with the details of the Village and to accommodate the office space that will be built on that floor. There will also be a new "porch" entrance to the bank on Elm Street to make it more convenient for customers. The third floor of the building will include storage space, and training/conference area.

Pilgrim Bank will maintain ownership of the adjacent building and offer it for lease beginning in January.

Founded in 1916, Pilgrim Bank is committed to giving local residents the best banking value around. As a mutual institution, Pilgrim Bank is owned by its customers, not by stockholders, which allows it to remain focused on superior level of customer service. The commitment to quality is what is known as the "Pilgrim Difference." Pilgrim Bank has two branches in Cohasset, and one in Marion, Mass.

NEWS UPDATE

The Cat Dam debate continues

Public hearing resumes Thursday, June 9.

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

"This application has more information than any other NOI ever filed in the history of the Conservation Commission. To say we don't have enough information or knowledge to make a decision is like punting this into a smoke screen... "
David Farrag, Conservation Commission

Given the long and complex history of the Cat Dam issue, it was no surprise much of the discussion at the recent Conservation Commission meeting went back in time.

Various perspectives came forward on how the town got to this point and how to deal with it going forward. Both experts and neighbors weighed in on the issue.

The Conservation Commission has the task of evaluating and synthesizing this data and making a determination on how to move forward. In particular, the Conservation Commission has to approve a new operation and maintenance schedule for the tide gates.

The public hearing has been continued to Thursday, June 9.

A new opinion was presented to the Conservation Commission on Thursday, May 12, with a key change to the most controversial aspect of the Cat Dam application: the opening and closing schedule of the gates.

"I don't think the town has enough data to make a drastic change in the operation of the gates," said Marc Garrett, president of The Garrett Group, an environmental consulting firm of Plymouth hired by the Environmental 20 group, a collection of 20 property owners in the inner Little Harbor area. He recommended a more strategic approach to the opening and closing of the gates as an interim solution while more studies/data could be collected.

His recommendation, which amounts to an amendment to the Cat Dam Notice of Intent, is, during the warmer months, to synchronize the gate opening with the twice a month "neap tides," the lowest level of a high tide that coincides with the first and third quarters of the moon.

Garrett said during the majority of the month the high tides are high enough to allow water to overtop the gates allowing flow to happen even when the gates are closed. He did not change the recommendation to open the gates during the highest high tides of the month.

"My advice is to take incremental baby steps. What I'm proposing now keeps in line with the current flow, but improves the quality of that flow," Garrett said. "This would increase tidal flushing each month from two to three times, and would reduce the period of non-circulating water by four to six days each cycle per month."

In order to make "wholesale" changes to the operation of the tide gates, Garrett said more data needed to be collected.

In addition to considering the operation of the gates, a portion of the NOI also calls for substantial repairs to be made to the Cat Dam structure.

Several Conservation Commission members commented on Garrett's recommendation for more data before making a decision, but chairman David Farrag more or less stopped that debate.

"This application has more information than any other NOI ever filed in the history of the Conservation Commission. To say we don't have enough information or knowledge to make a decision is like punting this into a smoke screen. I'd argue (this application) has more information than anything that's been before any board in this town," Farrag said.

Adding to the complexity of the NOI application is what Conservation Commission agent Paul Shea commented on the "unusual" situation with this application.

"None of the experts commenting on this application are working for the Town of Cohasset (the applicant)," Shea said. A majority of the Board of Selectmen approved the NOI earlier this year, but did not consider Garrett's most recent recommendations and report.

At the heart of the issue is a balancing act between two concerns. On one hand is the health and water quality of the inner Little Harbor. On the other hand (and all parties seem to agree to this) is the need for increased flushing in the estuary. But, the property owners many of whom own tidal lands in the inner Little Harbor area, in particular, are concerned with the low tide odors that come with an uncovered estuary.

Nichols Road resident Jim Marten made this case for "balance" in the Conservation Commission's decision.

"The mud is so pungent when the gates are open we've had to remove children from the garden because they became ill," Marten said. He called for consideration of the human inhabitants of the water area, in addition to the other marine wildlife, such as fish, shellfish and birds.

This issue of the health of the inner Little Harbor has been a subject and concern in town for quite some time. The degradation of the estuary area was one of the driving forces behind the Little Harbor sewer expansion project; one of the expected outcomes of the sewering project is improved health of the water body.

The hearing has been continued to Thursday, June 9.

Cat Dam history in brief

It's been more than three years since the first time the Board of Selectmen hosted a discussion on Cat Dam – a more than 50-year old mechanism on Nichols Road that limits tidal flow in inner Little Harbor.

At that time the neighbors were at odds over how much flushing the body of water truly needed. Now, three years and almost $20,000 of town funding later, it is still being debated on how to move forward.

In 2008, Town Meeting approved spending for an engineering study of Cat Dam and the surrounding area with the end result being brought forward to the Conservation Commission as a Notice of Intent (NOI). A NOI is presentation of information to the Conservation Commission that addresses the operation and maintenance of the tide gates, among other things.

The issue most significantly affects the surrounding neighborhood of Inner Little Harbor, but it is the town that has paid for the consulting engineer to develop the Notice of Intent at a cost of $17,000 and it is the town that is the applicant.

In late October, a majority of the Selectmen voted to withdraw the Notice of Intent (NOI) application that was before the Conservation Commission.

After several more lengthy discussions on the issue a majority of the selectmen voted to send a new NOI, one that had been prepared and paid for by a neighbor group calling themselves the Environmental 20.

It was the same three selectmen (Paul Carlson, Fred Koed and Leland Jenkins) who voted to withdraw the NOI application from the Conservation Commission that voted in favor of the NOI sponsored by the group of neighbors.

The first public hearing before the Conservation Commission on the new NOI was held on Feb. 10. A second hearing was postponed for several months until last week (May 12). The Board of Selectmen has supported these postponements at the request of the Environmental 20 as they sought a new environmental consultant.

Here is a wonderful way to give to those in need and "pay it forward" in ways that are pretty easy to do and make a difference. The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be sponsoring a drive for the Cohasset Food pantry on May 21st. The staff at the food pantry would like to increase its available supply of food products prior to the Memorial Day Weekend. Committee volunteers will be at Shaw's from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. to pass out lists of needed items and to collect food donations. The Food Pantry also welcomes donations of cash, which will be gratefully accepted as well. The need is still there despite improvements in some sectors of the economy according to Food Pantry staff. Many thanks to all those who so generously keep the Cohasset Food Pantry going in order to help those currently in need of food assistance! Check your coupons, pantries and find ways that will benefit your family and also, many other families who are in need and can use the help.

That is the news for the week. Send in all your news for next weeks Memorial Day edition to me no later than Tuesday by 5 pm.

Mother, daughter team opens village shop

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

When Maria Monaco decided to move from New Jersey to the South Shore to be closer to her two grandsons she said to her daughter, Scituate resident Tracy Cameron, "wouldn't it be great to open a shop together?"

With that simple thought came the now very much a reality, Outside In, one of the new shops in Cohasset Village.

Capitalizing on the Cohasset residents' love for the outdoors and athletic prowess, the mother-daughter team hopes to become locals go-to place for outdoor gear.

"This all kind of snowballed before we knew it," said Monaco, one of Cohasset's newest residents. "People have been so supportive and want to see shops in the village succeed."

While the shop does carry some gear appropriate for yoga and other indoor workouts, its specialty is gear for outside activities, no matter the season or sport.

"Our tagline is 'play hard outside, feel good inside,'" Cameron said. That motto not only applies to their apparel, but also the feel they want to create within the four walls of the shop.

"We want this to be a friendly place, very casual, very fun; a place you can stop by and bring your kids," Cameron said. Her two young boys are regulars at the shop and there is a space downstairs where kids can play.

Creating a community of active people is also a goal. The active happenings (road races, triathlons, bike races) are posted on a chalkboard inside the shop.

Cameron, drawing on her experience working in a ski shop in Jackson Hole, Wyoming, has put together a diverse collection of brands and apparel in the hope of providing something for every demographic.

The shop has brands that many will recognize (Patagonia, Mountain Hardware) and some more "boutique" and technical lines.

Isis for Women is designed by and for the fairer sex. Carve Designs was created by women surfers — after they had kids.

"They make really flattering bathing suits and beach wear," Cameron said.

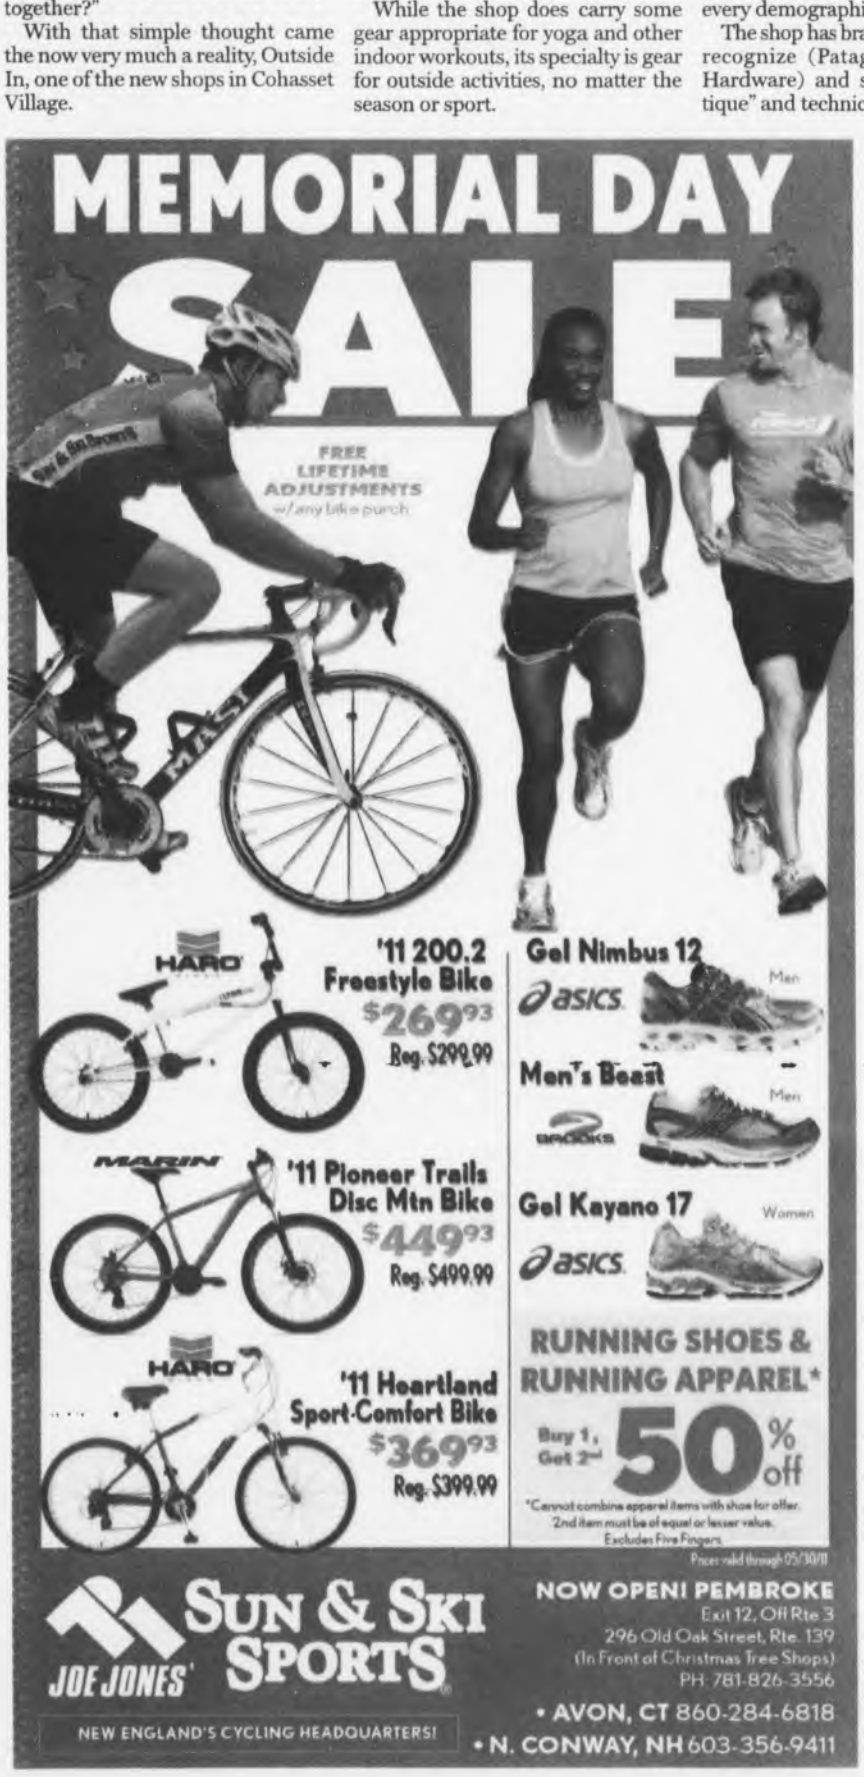
The shop carries a variety of active gear that is not sport-specific, but also has the technical gear for those die-hard athletics. Craft is technical gear designed with the biker and runner in mind. As the winter approaches, Outside In will carry the Arc'teryx brand for skiers.

There is also outdoor wear for kids, including a line just for little girls called Lime Apple.

"People when they come in are very happy to know these items are here. We want people to feel really good about themselves when they put our clothes on because they are really stylish," Monaco said.

In addition to apparel, Outside In offers sunglasses, water bottles, energy bars and gels — basically, everything one might need to get active outside.

Being family and business partners can be a challenge to navigate, but Monaco and Cameron have divided up duties to play to each of their strengths.



Monaco has owned several retail businesses and does interior design. She has a keen attention to detail, as well as a passion for fashion. Cameron does nearly all the buying for store and keeps a pulse on what's new in the athletic wear industry. Both are taking turns working in the store.

"We're getting into a routine...(and) we're really excited about being in the village," Cameron said.

An avid golfer, Monaco has also designed her own line of women's golf wear, under the name Vanessa Tracy (her two daughter's names) and will be available in the shop shortly.

Outside In is located at 39 South Main St. in the same building as Bia Bistro. They are open every day but Sunday.

For updates on the latest products coming into the shop and active events going on around the area, "Like" Outside In on Facebook.

DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE

Financial concerns

Education Forum is May 31

The second in a series of education forums will be held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on May 31, at 7 p.m. in the Meeting Room. This forum will focus on the financial concerns that will impact Cohasset's Schools moving forward into the future.

The panel will discuss how the demands for educating students in the skills needed for success in the 21st Century will require a community commitment; particularly given Massachusetts' financial picture and the constraints on state funds available for towns and cities.

Four key aspects to be discussed will be:

- teacher training
- Massachusetts State Standards
- assessments
- accountability.

These areas will need to be continually improved in order for Cohasset students to meet the needs of a global economy. Participants in the panel will be Betsy Connolly, a Cohasset resident and an educator for 38 years. Betsy is a school administrator in Hingham Public Schools. Also on the panel will be Cohasset School Committee Member, Dr. Paul Schubert. Dr. Schubert is the liaison to the Cohasset Education Foundation and is on the legislative sub-committee of the School Committee. Please come for an interesting and informative evening.

This education forum, as well as the March forum on the Massachusetts Bullying/Cyberbullying Law, is sponsored by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee as a community service.

French students seek families

The Scituate-Sucy Sister City Committee, an outgrowth of the Scituate-Cohasset-Sucy (High Schools) French Exchange, is seeking host families in Cohasset and Scituate for a small group of French high school students who will be spending a few weeks in these towns this summer.

The main group of 12 will be here from July 10-24 and participate in English classes, cultural excursions, and recreational activities. An additional three students will come independently at a mutually agreed upon time over the summer. You do not need to speak French to host one of these students, nor do you need to have a high school student in your household. You will enjoy learning about life in Sucy, France and make connections there, which could lead to further exchanges in the future. To volunteer, contact Beth Marat at bmarat@cohassetk12.org as soon as possible.

POLICE K-9

call in a K-9 after police responded to a car accident scene where an SUV had rolled over and the driver of the car was not at the scene.

In some cases when Cohasset has called on other police department's K-9 officer it has taken more than hour for the K-9 to arrive on scene.

DeLuca said having a K-9 as part of the staff would work to de-escalate critical incidents in large part because of its ability to be on scene in minutes.

Police dogs are also trained in search and rescue and drug detection.

"A quicker response time makes success more prevalent," DeLuca said. The police dog and his handler will also make appearances at the schools and other community events.

"It's a great tool and allows the police department to get a little closer to the community," DeLuca said.

DeLuca advertised for the position within the department to see if there were any officers who were interested in taking on the role of K-9 handler. Officer Patrick Reardon, a three-year veteran of the force and a Cohasset resident, requested to be considered for the position, if the town accepted the program.

"Should one of our seniors or kids with a disability wander, a readily accessible K-9 would be invaluable."
Chief Mark DeLuca

Reardon was recently involved in the rescue of the 14-year-old Australian shepherd "Lucy" from a remote part of town off Atlantic Avenue after she had been missing for three weeks.

DeLuca said he does not intend on requesting additional monies in his budget for the K-9. The Cohasset Police Association has offered to donate the seed money, about $6,500, to get the program up and running. A resident has also come forward (anonymously) to contribute to the effort.

A non-profit organization will be established to support the K-9 unit on an ongoing basis. A similar program was started for Hingham's K-9 unit two years ago, DeLuca said.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr said he aims to have DeLuca and the police department present to the board in the next month.

GIMME SHELTER

Tuxie is playful and purrs readily to let you know how happy he is. COURTESY PHOTO

Tuxie is a terrific teenager

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue hopes to find shelter for a sweet teenage short hair black and white Tuxedo male feline, aptly named Tuxie. Tuxie came to the shelter via a rescue group. He must have once had a loving home, as he is extremely friendly and trusting. He gets along with the other felines in his room and welcomes any and all human interaction. He is playful and purrs readily to let you know how happy he is.

Tuxie will make a welcome addition to most any household that is looking for a feline companion to share their home with.

You can check him out on the website along with many of HSAR's other cats.at www.hsar.org. HSAR has open hours on Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m.. If these hours aren't convenient, please call the shelter at 781-925-3121 and leave a message for Judy, the Adoption Coordinator.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045, email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low cost spay neuter clinic on Thursday, May 26th. If interested, check out the HSAR web site or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

HSAR is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 782-925-3638. Thanks to the many people who generously donate to the HSAR cause. They couldn't do it without you.

CENTER

South Shore Community Center (where the senior center is currently based) through Memorial Day before they head off on months' long adventure around town.

"We want people to wonder what its all about," said Mary Sease, a member of the new senior center's capital campaign committee.

The signs will be seen around town right up until the next planned fundraising event: a "senior prom" dinner dance at the Cohasset Golf Club on Saturday, October 22.

The location of the new senior center is off Sohier Street, adjacent to the Cohasset Swim Center parking lot. A feasibility study, with both preliminary and engineering designs, has been completed. The town is currently in the process of hiring a project manager to oversee the project.

The estimated cost of the new building is more than $6 million. The Social Service League, as trustee of the Mary Hooper Trust, has pledged $1 million to the project. The rest of the money will come from a combination of town funds, grants, community preservation funding and donations.

In the fall, a feasibility study, which was paid for through private fundraising of the Friends of Elder Affairs, was completed. The study envisions a 16,000-square-foot building with room for four, one-bedroom senior affordable housing apartment units. The senior center portion of the building would include a computer lab, a clinic, a social day care center, small offices, a large meeting hall and a variety of activity rooms.

The need for a freestanding senior center building has been discussed over the last two and a half years. The town is currently negotiating a three-year extension on its lease with the Community Center, but after that Elder Affairs hopes to have their own building to call home.

A building committee has been named and met for the first time last week to get up to speed on the project.

A steering committee for the capital campaign is still looking for residents to get involved. Contact Director of Elder Affairs Coral Grande at 781-383-9112 for more information.

For more information on the "Raising Cane and Raising Cash" fundraising effort, call 781-383-0771.

Cohasset residents can expect to see a lot of Dear Crossing signs popping up all over town in the weeks ahead.

OUR VIEW

Regionalized dispatch

No one is going to argue with improving safety. If safety and efficiency can be improved – and those results in cost savings – then that can be a really good thing for everyone.

However, we believe the Selectmen promised Cohasset a public process in terms of how manning the Cohasset Police Station – particularly during the evening and overnight hours — would be handled once regionalized dispatch comes to fruition.

We understand that there have been dozens of meetings with the various entities involved over the regionalized dispatch service. Now, as that service comes closer to a reality – we think the public should be brought into the loop. We call on the Board of Selectmen, fire and police chiefs to make that happen.

Some key questions are:

- How much is Cohasset going to save with regionalized dispatch? Can the figures be spelled out for us?
- When dispatch is outsourced to Hingham, who will cover the window in Cohasset or answer non-emergency calls? Will an officer be pulled off the road to handle the situation?

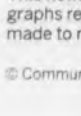
Is the station going to be closed during the evening hours and overnight?

If the police station is closed at night and a member of the public goes there for help – is the door locked? If there is an outdoor phone installed for that person to use – how does that work? Is the phone protected from vandalism?

- Will each of the four towns (Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Cohasset) have an equal number of dispatchers from their communities?

We have been around long enough and have seen enough to know that regionalization works really well in just about every other part of the country, except parts of Massachusetts. Some of you may recall when we tried to regionalize our fire service back in the early 90s to no avail.

However, there is no doubt that regionalized dispatch is on its way. We realize there is going to be a learning curve.



The learning curve for the public will be easier, though, if they are involved in determining if an unmanned overnight police station is worth the tradeoff of saving some money.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cleanup help appreciated

The Straits Pond Watershed Association would like to thank the many individuals of all ages from Hull, Cohasset and Hingham that joined us on Saturday May 7, for the Straits Pond Cleanup. Over 30 people pitched in and at least three Dumpsters were filled with debris from the shores of the pond. The ocean over wash during the winter storms really made a mess. Untreated wood was left behind for natural decay, but plastic, metal, painted and pressure treated wood was hauled away.

We would especially like to thank Nona's ice cream for donating their excellent ice cream. Also Ann LaRose who was our chef for the day and Nancy Kane our Dumpster diva. A barbeque of hamburgers, hot dogs, veggie burgers and homemade potato salad (thank you Merle Graham)was enjoyed by all and was a perfect ending to a great community experience. - Sue Lofchie, Corresponding Secretary, SPWA

To: Veterans and surviving spouses

Shortly before Memorial Day and Veterans Day, I make a mailing to all Cohasset veterans and surviving spouses (one mailing per household). The file that I use to make the mailing originates from census data that the Town Clerk's Office asks you to complete during January of each year. On the census form, it is important that veterans check the block that asks if they are a veteran. Unfortunately, no such block exists for surviving spouses; so, I have tried to accumulate that data manually.

You should have received the year 2011 Memorial Day letter the week of May 9-13. If you did not receive a letter and you are a veteran- you should advise the Town Clerk's Office so that the census can be corrected. If you are a surviving spouse and want to be copied on my letters, you will need to telephone, fax, email, or write me. This process is important, because there are entitlements for veterans and surviving spouses that you will probably be unaware of if you do not receive my mailings.- Joseph R. McElroy, Cohasset Director of Veterans Services

Unacceptable rancor in political arena

I'd like to take the occasion of Mary Snow's letter in last week's Mariner to add my own distancing from the unseemly actions stooped to by some candidates' supporters. I cannot speak to Mary's experience; I can say that I was the victim of smears and unsubstantiated accusations.

It is telling that neither of the candidates involved disavowed or otherwise attempted to rectify this activity of their supporters, and speaks volumes about the individuals involved.

This level of rancor in Cohasset's political arena is unacceptable. It is not the first time we've witnessed such techniques; I sincerely hope it is the last.

Like Mary, we conducted a clean campaign. I am exceeding grateful to those who supported and voted for me.

I enjoyed being a Selectman. I gave it my all. I would not change any decision. It was an honor to serve the people of Cohasset. Thank you. - Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road

Response to 'Government run amok'

Mr. Lanuto's letter regarding governance of Cat Dam should be amended to include representations by the Environmental 20 at last week's Conservation Committee meeting that if the Town wants control over Cat Dam it should pay for the ongoing studies necessary to combat environmental and regulatory opposition from which the E-20 is in full retreat under the guise of making this a property rights issue.

Mr. Lanuto's assertion that the Cat Dam operating schedule is an example of "government running amok" is quite accurate in its conclusion. The error is in describing the level of government being accused. This matter has yet to emerge from the process of our own local government's obligations regarding state and federal law.

Mr. Lanuto would apparently have our town officials challenge, or ignore, these obligations to protect the special interests of a small group of property owners at the expense of all property owners. To date the town has spent close to $20,000 for an O&M that was summarily rejected by the E-20: its conclusions did not conform to their desired outcome.

Further studies commissioned and presented by the E-20 have been paid for by the E-20, rubber stamped by a majority of the BoS who have allowed the E-20 to virtually dictate the town's position, and exposure, on the matter of Cat Dam.

The "government run amok" in this matter is our BoS who continue to shirk their responsibilities as elected officials kicking this ball up and down the road keeping it in play hoping that someone, anyone, will cause something, anything, to happen to allow the E-20 to get what it wants: nontidal waterfront property.

As we know from the Cook Estate and Treats Pond, it is usually later rather than sooner, if ever, that the taxpayers learn of the real cost of these follies. Now comes before the BOS and the taxpayers a small but vocal constituency looking for the impossible – success for their environmentally indefensible proposition.

Bad enough the BOS ceded all control and authority to this group, now they will probably vote to fund the ongoing, unwinable battle with the state and the feds with monies provided by taxpayers who, by a vast majority, approve of the very environmental regulations and regulators the E-20 is challenging. This is truly "government run amok" and we thank Mr. Lanuto for bringing this to our attention. - Tom Wolf, 27 Clay Spring Road

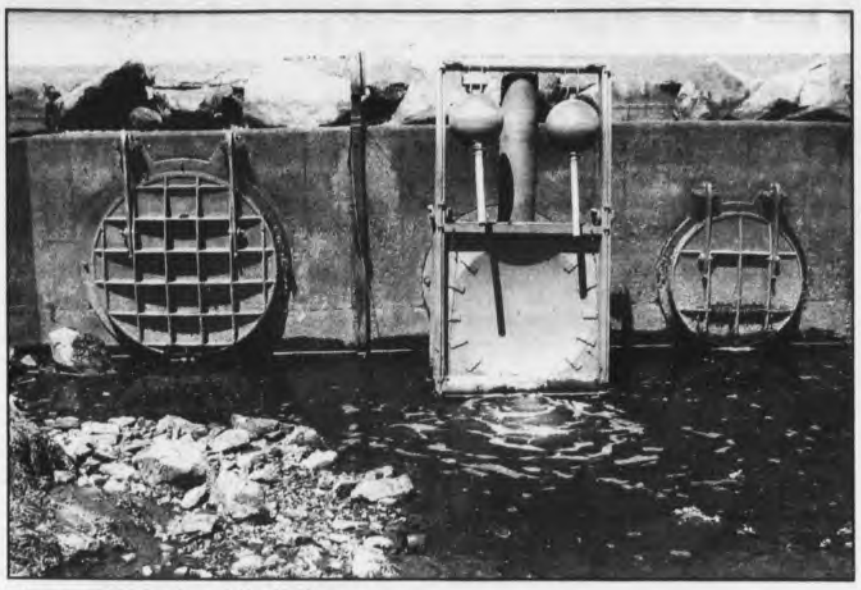
'Fair Game' docudrama tonight



The following was provided by the Democratic Town Committee:

The next "movie night" feature of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will be the docudrama, "Fair Game." Please join us for this intense and exciting film at the Paul Pratt Library on May 20 at 7 p.m. in the Meeting Room. All are welcome. Refreshments are served.

This spy story is based on the experiences of real-life CIA officer, Valerie Plame, played by Naomi Watts. In January of 2001 Plame was sent by the CIA, as the head of the Joint Task Force on Iraq, to investigate the possibility of nuclear build-up in Iraq. She turned up no evidence of any buildup finding that the capability for building nuclear weapons had been destroyed in the Desert Storm War.

Plane's Husband, American Diplomat, Joe Wilson, at the recommendation of Plame, was sent by the CIA to Niger in February of 2002 to investigate the Bush administration's finding that the government of Iraq had been seeking to buy uranium from that African country in order to re-start Iraq's nuclear capability. Wilson reported to the CIA that he had found no evidence of the Bush Administration's claim. Shortly after Wilson's trip to Africa, George Bush, in his Jan. '03 State of the Union speech, said that Saddam Hussein had recently sought significant quantities of uranium from Niger. Two weeks later Baghdad was bombed by the US beginning the Iraq War. In July of '03, as you may recall, Wilson, played by Sean Penn, wrote an editorial for the NY times entitled "What I Didn't Find in Africa," in which he challenged the basis of the US war on Iraq as he had found no evidence of the Bush Administration's claim regarding Iraq's uranium purchase.

MAKING TRACKS

Three previous gates at the harbor.

Intelligent control on harbor side

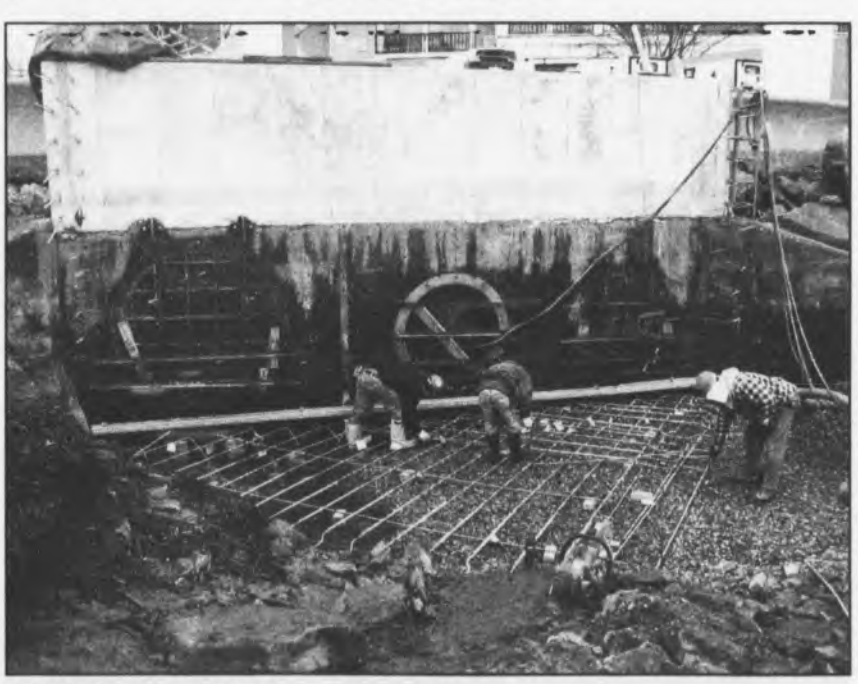
TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project —We are now going to shift our focus away from the Legion culvert to the work that has been underway at Cohasset Harbor. This is the part of the project that will ultimately control the flow of storm water into the harbor and the amount of saltwater that flows back into Jacobs Meadow. The harbor side of this project provides the intelligent control of this new system. So, let's see how it will function.

The channel adjacent to the Legion empties into a large underground pipe system that connects to the edge of the harbor. There are three pipes in this system: two of the pipes are 4 feet in diameter and one 5-1/2 feet in diameter. As you can guess, these can carry a lot of water. There was also a gate mechanism on the end of each pipe. These gates can be seen against the wall in the first photo. With these old gate structures, the flows could not be well controlled in either direction. This resulted in slow release of storm water and inadequate inflow of salt water into the meadow.

The objective of this project is to remove the three gate mechanisms and surround the three pipes with a three-sided concrete structure that will connect each of the pipes to a common chamber. That chamber will then have a mechanism for controlling the water flow in either direction, based on tide levels. The wall that faces the natural outflow channel in the harbor, to the northeast, will contain a very large, 6 by 10 foot vertical sluice gate. Think of a sluice gate as a guillotine type mechanism that can be raised or lowered. When it is lowered all the way, no water can pass in either direction. When it is fully open, it exposes a 6 by 10 foot opening, which will allow flow in either direction. In fact our engineers have estimated that the new gate and the rebuilt channel, depending on the tides, could get up to a 300 percent improvement in flow over the old conditions. Even though this was a very rough calculation, it will give you an idea of the significant flow improvement that we might achieve.

So how do we go about constructing the triangular chamber that will enclose the three pipes and direct the water into the harbor? The first step was to extend the harbor wall through which the three pipes exit upward to the total height required to stay above all but the highest flood tides. In the second photo, that extended wall can be seen at the rear of the picture. The wall extension was made by the use of a modular system of forms that defined the wall area. Reinforcing rebar was placed inside the forms to add strength to the new wall, prior to pouring the concrete. After the concrete was poured and had hardened, the forms were removed, leaving the new wall standing proudly above the three pipes, as shown in the photo.



The second photo also shows construction beginning on the base of the triangular-shaped gate chamber. The three pipes can also be seen in the background where they were now blocked off to keep the work area dry. The Jacobs Meadow water was pumped to the harbor by a set of large pumps on the other side of Elm Street. In addition, a huge sandbag dam was built in the harbor to keep the water out of the work area. Since the dam had a limited height it only extended the working time a bit around the times of low tides. When the tide rose too high, it overflowed the sand bag dam and the workers had to call a halt until the next day. Working in tidal areas is not the easiest place to do construction.

The harbor area where the slab base was to be constructed was leveled by removing peaks of ledge in the harbor floor. Then a level base of stone was spread, as can be seen in the photo. The concrete slab will be poured on top of the stone base. Rebar was formed into place to act as reinforcement for the concrete when it is poured over the rebar. The rebar configuration was spelled out by our engineers so that it will make the concrete significantly stronger. Finally, forms were laid to define the final shape of the base. We'll continue with the project overview next week. Stay tuned.

Little Harbor Paving —By the time you read this, the preparations for resuming the paving on Jerusalem Road should be underway. You will see the roads ground, or as it is sometimes called, "cold-planed." The grinding operation really has two functions in road reconstruction. First, it generally removes the amount of old paving that we expect to be replacing. Thus, the overall height of the road should stay approximately the same. But, grinding has a second function, which is often overlooked. It can provide a reshaping of the road so that when the new paving is laid, better drainage control can be achieved.

After grinding a leveling coat of asphalt will be laid to raise the low spots and further generate the proper contours for the road. Following that, the structures (manholes, water, sewer and gas shut-offs, etc.) will be raised to their final level. This is the point at which the road becomes an obstacle course with all of the structures abruptly sitting up about 2 inches above the road surface. Lastly, the topcoat of asphalt will be placed and a new road emerges. Please be careful driving while this work is underway. We should also mention that the road must be reasonably dry for the paving operations, so given the weather we have experienced this week, the paving may be extended until the weather improves. But, let's hope for the best.

HEALTH NOTES

Losing sleep over Melatonin

STEVE BOBO

Melatonin, the controversial ally. Recently, Health Notes casually mentioned the hormone Melatonin that has been featured in several recent publications because it is being combined with foodstuffs and offered as a diet supplement. Such a description is at best arguable and is not helpful. The January Health Notes mentioned Melatonin as a product of body chemistry released in the process of falling into a normal sleep.

The chemical name, N-acetyl-5-methoxytryptamine, is a naturally occurring hormone found in animals and humans, plants and microbes. In humans circulating levels of the chemical vary in a daily cycle, thereby allowing the body to develop circadian rhythms for biological natural sleep.

Many biological effects of melatonin are produced through activation of melatonin receptors, while others are due to its role as a pervasive and powerful antioxidant with a particular role in the production of some elements of DNA.

In mammals, Melatonin is secreted into the blood by the pineal gland in the brain. Known as the "hormone of darkness", it is secreted in darkness in both day-active (diurnal) and night-active (nocturnal) animals.

It may also be produced by a variety of peripheral cells such as bone marrow cells, lymphocytes and epithelial cells. Usually, the melatonin concentration in these cells is much higher than that found in the blood but it does not seem to be regulated by the photoperiod.

Melatonin-rich feed, such as rice, ingested by chicks has been shown to reach and bind to melatonin receptors in their brains. No food has been found to elevate plasma melatonin levels in humans.

It's tempting to reach for a sleeping pill, but sleep medications including those using melatonin vary in safety and effectiveness and are rarely meant for more than short-term use. If you are considering taking Melatonin or any drug-laced product, it's necessary to consider it's impact on any other drug you may be taking and your thoughts about ingesting anything but food and water.

Persistent insomnia may be symptom of an underlying medical or psychological problem that cannot be treated with sleep medications. In many cases, making simple changes to your lifestyle is far more effective at ending sleepless nights than popping a pill.

Products containing Melatonin have been available over-the-counter as a dietary supplement in the United States since the mid-1990s. In many other countries, the over-the-counter sale of this neurohormone is not permitted or requires a prescription, and the U.S. Postal Service lists unapproved Melatonin preparations among items prohibited by Germany.

Some medical authorities are variously strongly opposed to the use of artificial Melatonin in food. Among the recent comments about the chemical are: Charles Ceisler of Brigham and Womens Hospital "It's a colossally bad idea to put Melatonin in food. It should not be permitted by the FDA."

Just because Melatonin is found in the body and also can sometimes be a chemical found in food, an artificial expansion of it's introduction into food sold primarily to individuals as a food snack is inappropriate and dangerous.

The problem involving use of Melatonin, as a diet supplement is that food is needed by everyone and melatonin, when used as a diet supplement, diverts the intent of the hormone to some people for whom it may be unnecessary and possibly harmful. Such use could easily involve practices like driving after ingestion of Lazy Cakes, a confection sold to the young, a mistake which could leave you in a ditch.

Eating habits are easy to acquire and difficult to abandon when you want to. It's not necessary to add to the problem of overeating the additional problem of having to think about a food and whether it will put you to sleep.

FOR THE RECORD

No need to close shops on holiday

GREGORY MATHIS

Forcing malls and department stores to close is not going to increase participation in Memorial Day observances or send people into somber, reflective moods, unless the legislation includes punishment for this who don't observe the holiday properly as others see fit.

Back in March, a couple of state senators were touting proposed legislation that would have prohibited retail sales on Memorial Day.

Forcing malls and department stores to close is not going to increase participation in Memorial Day observances or send people into somber, reflective moods, unless the legislation includes punishment for this who don't observe the holiday properly as others see fit.

While I agree with Republican state Sen. Robert Hedlund of Weymouth that Memorial Day should be a day to stop and reflect on the ultimate sacrifice made by Americans to preserve our freedoms, we shouldn't be legislating the freedom of those who might want to spend their day off shopping or take away the freedoms of business owners.

Instead of legislating what people should or shouldn't do, the key to honoring the significance of this somber day is through education. We live in a time when our country has been at war with various enemies — Saddam Hussein, Osama bin Laden, to name two — and we've seen first-hand the ultimate sacrifice of the men and women who have lost their lives.

That fact has actually increased attendance at many Memorial Day and Veterans Day events, and some towns that discontinued observances have brought them back in recent years.

In a very unscientific poll on a couple of our websites back in March and April, 50 percent of those responding said they agreed the meaning of Memorial Day had been lost and supported a measure that would force retail stores to close. Twenty-six percent of the respondents believed this is not the type of thing that should be legislated, and 24 percent said retail stores should be allowed to open on the holiday.

Speaking of legislation and laws that are unnecessary...

Next week, beginning May 23 and running through June 5, local police departments will join forces with the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security's Highway Safety Division to enforce the Massachusetts Safety Belt Law.

Don't get me wrong, I firmly believe seatbelts should be worn at all times and I do so without fail whether I'm driving or a passenger in another vehicle. It just seems odd you need to come up with a law and rely on valuable police resources to enforce something that should be common sense.

If you don't wear a seatbelt, you must be living under a rock. Pretty much every motor vehicle fatality we report on involves a driver and/or passenger not wearing a seatbelt. No matter how you feel about safety belt, wearing them saves lives.

Click It or Ticket has been around since 2002, and there are signs the program is working in at least raising awareness and maybe saving some lives. Statistics show Click It or Ticket has helped increase seatbelt use from 51 percent in 2002 to 74 percent in 2009 in Massachusetts. During that time, fatalities from people not wearing seatbelts dropped from 57 percent to 23 percent.

Now if we could only get legislation passed requiring school buses and passenger coach buses to have safety belts. That would be a useful law.

COMMENTARY

Stop playing dumb when it comes to smartphones

DIANE K. DANIELSON

It seems every week now there are teens being suspended from school and even arrested for sending offensive texts and posting inappropriate items on Facebook (and Twitter). I expect this is just the beginning. Why? Because almost every child from age 10 through 18 is now going to school, attending parties, and literally sleeping with an Internet-connected mini-computer that is always on and has all the latest apps including a camera.

We might call it a phone, but when was the last time your kid actually used that smartphone you gave them to talk to someone? The main uses are texting, Facebooking, Tweeting, videotaping and sharing all sorts of things that a generation ago we wouldn't share with anyone other than our diary or our best friend – and most the time that didn't work out so well on the privacy end either.

More importantly, when I say "smartphone" I'm including iTouches. Why? Because all it takes is a texting or Skype app to turn an iTouch into an iPhone.

How do smartphones contribute to this recent increase in teenage stupidity?

1. Smartphones are mini-computers. They connect to the Internet. This means that your child can access everything you might normally block or supervise on your home computer.

2. Smartphones encourage impulsivity. We've all seen the ads on TV. Just snap a photo and upload it to Facebook, Twitter or YouTube within seconds. There's no heading home, booting up the computer, downloading pictures from a camera and having the time to sober up (literally, in some cases) so that one might consider the consequences.

3. Smartphones are easily accessed by others. Kids misplace things. Who knows what other kids might do with that smartphone if they found it? Even if they don't lose it, does your child have a friend who might think it's funny to post something inappropriate or offensive from your child's phone? Or, perhaps your child impulsively took a nude photo of him or herself to send to a boy or girlfriend? (Yes. They do this. Why? I'm not sure. You'd have to ask Brett Favre about that.) Yet, even if they didn't intend to share that photo, what might that questionable "friend" with access to the phone do in an impulsive moment?

4. Smartphones are with your kids in the car. Despite the focus on the dangers of texting while driving, we now have a smartphone that pings whenever someone posts an update. In November 2009, the Pew Research Center's Internet & American Life Project found that one in four (26 percent) of American teens of driving age say they have texted while driving, and half (48 percent) of all teens ages 12 through 17 say they've been a passenger while a driver has texted behind the wheel. That was in a survey from a world before smartphones ruled and Facebook and Twitter were constantly beckoning.

5. Smartphones are with your kids 24/7. This means less sleep as they text, Facebook and Tweet throughout the night. As a result, they are not only exhausted in school, they are likely sending sleep-deprived, impulsive communications. It also means no break from the daily stress of being a teenager.

Unfortunately, smartphones both encourage and exacerbate our children's' worst instincts when it comes to impulsive behavior. This is why it is up to parents to establish parameters and rules.

Parental tasks:

- As always, talking with your child about the consequences of inappropriate use of smartphones is the best way to prevent them from doing something stupid. Create ground rules like: No curse words or insults; no sending photos that would upset their grandmother; and no joining groups on Facebook that "hate" someone or something.
- Review your bills. Check what times your kids are sending texts. Also look for spikes in application usage.
- Enable restrictions on your child's iPhone or iTouch. Go to Settings>Restrictions. Unfortunately, these are all or nothing options like turning off the Internet or YouTube, so may not be feasible except for the youngest children. It's likely Droids have something similar.
- You can also install an app like Mobicip on your child's iTouch or iPhone, which replaces the Safari browser with a more child-friendly one and provides reports for monitoring your child's Internet-related activities.
- For monitoring texts there is My Mobile Watchdog, which you set up with your child (as opposed to Mobile Spy which you set up without your child's knowledge). Remember, you own that smartphone and your child's use of it should be a privilege that comes with restrictions, not a right.
- Take that phone, iPod, laptop, iPad, and/or xBox live away at night. We were teenagers once, so we all know that most really bad judgments are made after midnight. Enforce this nighttime technology blackout by doing the following:
- Take the xBox Live and all computers out of their rooms. Keep them in a public space.
- Set up a charging station in the kitchen or somewhere public and demand that everyone "check in" their mobile devices (smartphone, iTouch, iPad) each night or you stop paying for them. This also gives you a chance to access and do a spot-check.

The one thing that I hope you take away from this article is that you stop thinking of a smartphone, or an iTouch, as a "phone" or a "hand-held game." They are fully functional, Internet-connected computers that you are putting in your child's hands, often without any supervision and/or limitations.

Recently, we saw two 14-year-olds get together for a joyride in the middle of the night resulting in a horrific crash. While we might not know exactly how this all came about, I wouldn't be surprised to find that a few after-midnight text messages enabled such stupidly impulsive behavior.

We wouldn't give the car keys to our kids without a license, yet sometimes handing them a smartphone can be just as dangerous.

VETERANS

Veterans/spouses: do not procrastinate

JOE MCELROY

Veterans and surviving spouses who have issues (mental and physical health, financial, educational, housing, death and survivor assistance, etc) need to contact me promptly.

By procrastinating, the situations only worsen. It becomes more difficult to reconstruct facts and circumstances that will support your application for entitlements. Your physical and mental/physical health may deteriorate. It becomes more difficult to assemble a compelling application for benefits.

I may not be able to help, but all communications are handled with the strictest confidentiality.

If you do not step forward, your problems are not going to resolve themselves without intervention. You may choose not to proceed with submitting an application for assistance, but at least you are learning the facts and given a choice.

When, we succeed in getting you federal benefits (VA/DoD) they do not cost the Town of Cohasset anything. When we get you State benefits, Cohasset is reimbursed 75 percent.

During two years as your Veterans' Agent, there have been many successful applications for VA/DoD assistance to include Aid & Attendance (A/A). At the State level, we had never received MGL Ch115 financial assistance and now we have seven Cohasset citizens benefiting from that program with others that should come forth and possibly apply.

Skippers stay busy despite weather

Turf, indoor tennis help get games in

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Despite the weather, Cohasset teams have managed to stay busy over the week.

Thanks to the turf at Alumni Field, the lacrosse teams have been able to stay active, and the tennis teams have also been able to get some games in.

The girls lost 4-1 to a very good Notre Dame Academy squad on Wednesday, playing indoor at the Weymouth Club., while the boys lost to Xaverian 5-0.

Robbie Hill played well losing 7-6, 6-4 to Xaverian No. 1 Brandon Sepe. Travers Craven also played well against Nick Fendor at No. 2 singles.

Nick Brown and Andrew Barrett played solidly at second 2 doubles losing to Val Wildner and Doug Crawford 6-4, 6-4.

The Skippers also gave Hingham a pretty good battle before the rains came in a 4-0 loss.

The match was played in eight-game pro sets to try to get it in before rain hit.

Craven played a good match in that one, as did the doubles squad of Bill Curry and Matt McCormack.

On the lacrosse field, the boys have rebounded well from their 11-10 loss to Hingham last week, winning their last three games.

Cohasset beat Bishop Guertin 7-4 on the road on Saturday, then notched a 17-7 win over Hanover and a 17-6 win over Abington, who came into the game with a 13-3 record.

Hanover came into their game 7-5 and Bishop Guertin was 9-5 before they played Cohasset.

The Skippers improved to 13-4 after the three wins and are undefeated in the South Shore League.

The combined records of the teams that have beaten Cohasset is 55-7.

According to Laxpower.com, Cohasset is the No. 11 team in the MIAA East and No. 2 in Div. 3 behind potential playoff opponent Dover-Sherborn.

Cohasset played Norwell Thursday and are scheduled to close out the season today at Lincoln-Sudbury.

Girls win two after Norwell loss

By Susan N. Biddle
Special to the Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset girls lacrosse team bounced back from its biggest loss of the season to pick up two close wins and position itself for a run through the 2012 MIAA state tournament.

On May 12, the Skippers traveled to Norwell, which has won every South Shore League title since the league started play in 2007. Fresh off its first victory over Scituate in five years – and facing a Clippers team that has struggled at times this season – Cohasset felt good about its chances going in.

That feeling lasted for about 8 minutes. For about half that time, the teams were scoreless, but it was Norwell's response to Cohasset's first goal that set the tone for the day. When Kristen Alexander scored to make the score 2-1, Norwell responded with two goals in less than a minute, and its defense locked things down for the rest of the half as the Clippers ran their lead to 8-1 at the halftime break.

When Cohasset's Angela Cipolla scored early in the second half, Norwell again responded twice in Devastating trend

ACL injuries in female athletes on the rise

By Ryan Wood
rwood@wickedlocal.com

On a recent Saturday night, the U.S. Women's National Team debuted its 2011 World Cup team in a pre-World Cup friendly match against Japan. Less than 30 minutes after coming onto the field, one of the top players in U.S. history, midfielder Lindsay Tarpley, tore her ACL for the second time in the same knee. She will miss this summer's World Cup.

Across the globe, some of the fittest female soccer players continue to suffer ACL tears. Just last week, Norway lost one of its top players – Melissa Wiik. The Asian Football Confederation Women's Footballer of the Year, Australia's Kate Gill, tore her ACL in early May. Both players will miss the 2011 FIFA Women's World Cup. Chicago's Leah Fortune, 20, who plays for the Brazilian Women's National Team, tore her ACL just minutes into her first-ever match for the senior Brazilian team.

This year in Women's Professional Soccer, two players – Jordan Angeli, 24, of the Boston Breakers and Lindsey Johnson, 23, of Sky Blue FC – tore their ACLs and will miss the rest of the 2011 season.

"The level of competition is only one of many factors that can contribute to an ACL tear," said National Strength and Conditioning Association Certified Strength and Conditioning Specialist Dave Gleason, who runs Athletic Revolution with his wife, Andrea, in Pembroke, Mass. "Although their fitness level may be high, they may be performing with movement patterns that can be incorrect. When the body moves incorrectly, undue stress is placed on structures such as the ACL."

Cohasset U15 White gives Hingham Black a battle

The Cohasset U15 White team has taken on some formidable opponents in this tough, fast paced season, but the team has slowly but surely pulled together to compete.

Most recently, Cohasset U15 White played Hingham Black in a tough game, down by four, but pulled out a decent ending with a score of 9-7, with Hingham eking out a win at Alumni Field.

Cohasset started out slowly when Hingham scored several times right off the start, despite the excellent goaltending skills of Bri Condon.

Helping her in the defensive end were Karlee Koswick, Megan Fitzgerald, Caty Gilman, Maya Placek, and Colleen McGowan.

All showed strength in picking up ground balls, and getting the ball out of the defensive end.

The team then picked up momentum as several members of the midfield and attack demonstrated the speed for which we are known.

Madison Haegarty, Riley Mahoney, Elizabeth Baker, Dagmar Seppala, Olivia Arnold, and Callahan O'Neil moved the ball down the field.

Notable scores and/or assists were made to score by Jackie Driscoll, Callahan O'Neil, Bennett Tierney, and Madison Jones.

Excitement mounted with scores by Alexandra Leahy and Caelin MacDonald, as the short and frequent passing increased across the team. Midway through the second half, the score was a tough 9-4. However, Cohasset closed the gap when Caelin MacDonald and Madigan O'Neil scored 3 goals in the last two minutes of the game.

All in all, despite the loss, Cohasset showed strength in teamwork! Please make sure to come watch as the Cohaset U15 White team takes on Norwell Gold at Norwell Middle School at noon on Sunday.

Cohasset Girls U13 edged by Norwell Blue Squad

Cohasset and Norwell played a back and forth game of run and gun with lots of fast transitions and never more than a goal or two difference.

Although Cohasset came up short with a final score of 8-7, Cohasset was seconds away from scoring when the final whistle blew.

Kaitlin McGovern volunteered for goal duty in the first half and was amazing, then contributed 1 goal and 1assist in the second half. Kate McCarthy filled in her usual goalie spot in the second half with several awesome saves and nice accurate clearing passes. Libby Mullaney netted 2 goals, Ellie Jackisch had 1goal and 1assist, Abby Thomas netted one as did Olivia Gomez and Minnie Stavis. Lilly Astino assisted, along with Olivia Sanderson, Maggie O'Donnell, and Lauren Cunning.

It's tough to take a loss but it will only make us stronger.

If ACL tears can happen to the most fit athletes in the world, what about younger players, college and high school kids?

"I have seen ACL and other soft tissue injuries in young female athletes as young as 12 years old. Many of my colleagues around the country have reported ACL tears younger and younger," Gleason said. "Unfortunately, many of our new members come to us because of a pre-existing injury. I worked with a women's college soccer team in the summer of 2009, and I was shocked to see over half the team was either wearing a knee brace or had had an ACL surgery or two."

Gleason was a four-year starter and co-captain of the Division 1 Silver Lake Regional High School soccer team that brought the school its first-ever state championship. In January 2010, Dave was inducted into his high school's athletic Hall of Fame as an individual and as a member of the 1988 State championship team. As a Division 2 Second Team All-New England captain for Keene State College, Gleason capped his athletic career and began his professional career in Westchester County, N.Y.

Gleason, the 2010 IYCA Trainer of the Year, has coached young athletes for two decades, dating back to 1989 as a soccer coach to hundreds aspiring soccer players. In the mid to late 90s, he served as a strength coach for some of the most successful young tennis players in New England. He has served as a strength and conditioning coach for private swim club teams and has worked individually with hundreds of children 6-18 years old with a wide ranging ability level.

The youngest person Gleason has seen tear an ACL was a 16-year-old boys' lacrosse player. On the girls' side, the number of ACL tears in younger athletes has steadily increased.

"The rise in ACL injuries is due to a variety of reasons," Gleason said. "The hyper-competitive nature of youth sports does not discriminate against any gender. The rush for more practice, more speed and better conditioning in the absence of proper warm ups, skill development and training programs to prepare a young female athlete for athletics are all contributors to the increase in non-trauma ACL injuries.

Preventative measures

Gleason is running a high school girls' soccer strength and conditioning program this summer, specifically focusing on ACL prevention. The training program is designed exclusively for young female athletes and will focus on systemic strength training, muscle tissue quality, muscle activation, general preparation, strength technique/movement skill and proficiency, and power execution/systemic strength/movement execution.

"There are several ways to increase injury resistance," Gleason said. "While no program can guarantee complete prevention, there are three top factors that are a must in order to keep an athlete safe."

Gleason highlighted three areas – leg strength, warm-up, and jump technique.

"The hamstring (back of the thigh) and the glute muscles work together to help keep the knee joint in proper alignment during movement," Gleason said when talking about leg strength. "These muscles must be strong for an athlete to stay safe and well-guarded."

He pointed to an example called, "Lying Bridges."

"Hamstring and glute muscles can be strengthened in a variety of ways, but one of the best places to start is by having the athlete lie on their back with knees bent," Gleason said. "Lift their hips off the ground and 'squeeze' their butt muscles."

For the warm-up, Gleason said, "A proper, well planned warm-up is essential prior to every training session, practice or game. Much more than just taking a lap and stretching, a good warm-up serves to engage the control centers in every joint."

His example: Balance.

"Warming up should involve a lot of factors, including engaging the control centers of each joint," Gleason said. "Have the athletes perform one-leg balance exercises as part of the warm-up to ensure that the knee joint is 100 percent ready."

For jump technique, Gleason said: "Learning how to jump and land is an incredibly important part of keeping athletes safe. More than just doing 'plyos,' teaching the proper execution of jumping and landing in paramount. Although jumping is not seen as transferable to all sports, it actually is. Jump training done in the correct manner correlates to the acceleration and absorption forces the body has to deal with when sprinting, stopping and changing direction."

His example: Instruction.

"As part of the warm up, teach the athletes how to safely and effectively jump and land using toe-off and heel landing strike positions," he said.

First-hand experience

Manya Makoski, who currently plays soccer for Thor/KA in Iceland's top-flight league, previously played in Women's Professional Soccer for the Los Angeles Sol (2009) and was a member of the Atlanta Beat. But during the Beat's 2010 preseason, Makoski tore her ACL.

But unlike a broken bone, most athletes who tear their ACL are mobile and can put a slight amount of pressure on their knees.

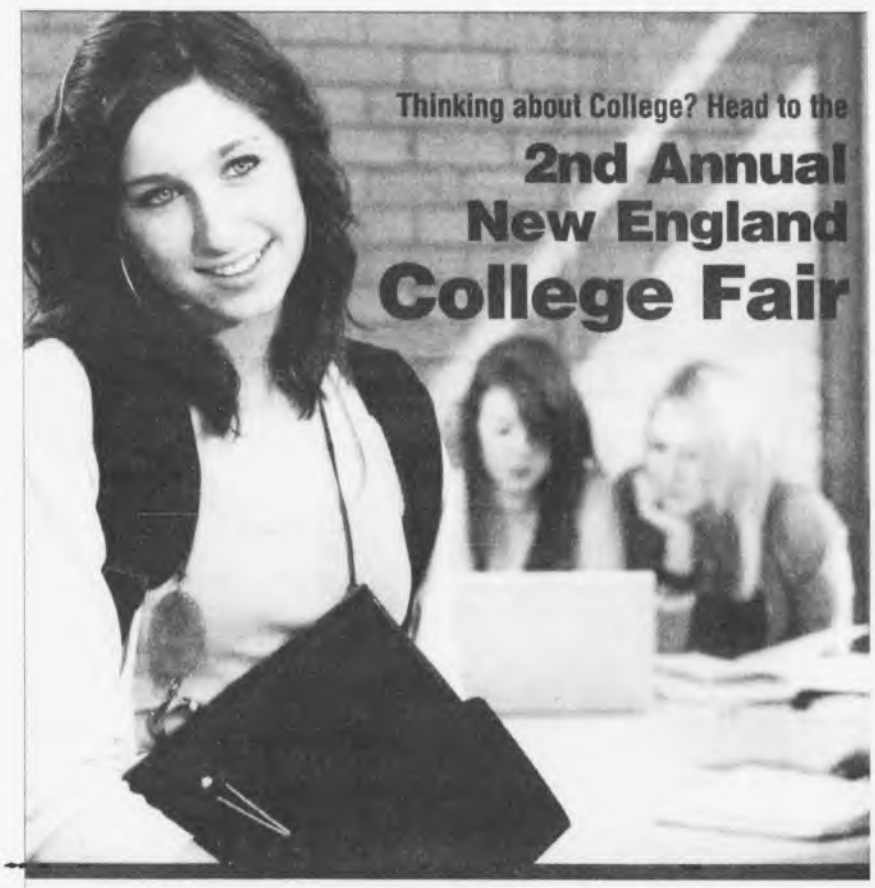
"I was able to walk off the field and walk around that day," said the 27-year-old from Bridgeport, Conn. "My knee didn't swell up or hurt until the next day."

Makoski said, however, she knew something was wrong the moment the tear happened. She recently authored an article for the global women's soccer publication, Our Game Magazine, called "Mental Tougness," where she talked about her injury, the mental tool it took on her, and the recovery timeline, which for most athletes can run anywhere from six to 10 months.

"When I tore my ACL it was really weird. I faked to go one way, to the left, planted with my left, to try to go to the right, (and) I just felt it tear, said the former Arizona State University star was on the 2002 U.S. Under-19 World Cup Team that won the FIFA World Championships in Canada. "I immediately went to the ground because I knew I did something bad to my knee. It didn't hurt at all, and I didn't hear a pop, but I just knew that it was bad. It was really sickening to feel your ACL tear."

Recovery

Makoski returned to action earlier this spring, playing soccer competitively on the professional level for the first time in more than a year. During her preseason with Thor/KA she began to feel more comfortable out on the field and started scoring goals left and right.



"I am over a year from my surgery," she said. "Since recovering 'fully' from my ACL tear, I have realized that you are never really fully recovered. Rehab was a very hard mental and physical test for me. It was one of the most grueling things I have had to do in my career. Every day is devoted to your rehab – how you can get stronger, get more range of motion, get more confidence. The more effort and work you put into your rehab, the better off you are going to be in the long run. Even today, I am still focusing on those aspects. But I definitely believe you come out fitter and stronger than you were before because of that rehab. Yes, I may still have to ice my knee after training or going for a run, but I am no less of an athlete because of that."

Gleason said that the best course of rehab depends on the severity of the injury and taking into account if surgery is needed to fix the tear.

"Often, rehab will include reducing swelling, reestablishing a full range of motion, strengthening the muscles of the front and back of the thigh, as well as muscle sequencing," he said. "As soon as possible, the athlete needs to engage in activities that are complex in nature, involving several muscle groups, to ensure proper overall function and movement quality," Gleason said. "An injury of this nature is many times an opportunity to assess other possible dysfunction or movement patterns that could cause issue in the future."

However, Gleason cautioned people about training programs, and urged that injury resistance is key.

"Beware," Gleason said. "Not all sports performance training programs are rooted in skill development and injury resistance. Most programs and facilities add to the pressure of performing at a high level for younger and younger athletes. In many ways, young athletes are more dependent on training programs that will deliver coaching, instruction, and a progressive system for making them better. Better performance does not need to be the goal because with the proper training it will be the outcome in addition to injury resistance."

On the baseball field, it has been tough.

Cohasset lost a tough non-league game against Scituate on Saturday in a home game played at Scituate because Cohasset's field was unavailable. The game had been scheduled as the first game of the season and had been postponed several times before it finally happened on Saturday.

The Skippers went ahead 5-2 early on, but gave up six unearned runs in a 10-7 loss.

Since then, the rain has been the winner.

Games against East Bridgewater and Mashpee have been postponed this week.

Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw wasn't thrilled with the Scituate game.

"It was a bad game," he said. "We gave up six unearned runs. It was just one of those days. The kids weren't making plays."

The loss dropped Cohasset to 10-5.

Still, Cohasset is in the chase for a South Shore League title with Abington, and had a solid win against Hull last Thursday.

"Connor Goetz pitched a one-hit shutout," Afanasiw said "He had 10 strikeouts and only one walk. That was huge. Today it was a matter of making plays. We didn't make them when we needed to. You can't give teams, especially teams like this (Scituate) four or five outs an inning."

The win against Hull gave Cohasset an MIAA Tournament invitation, giving them the chance to defend their 2010 Div. 4 State Title.

The League Title could come down to May 26 when Cohasset hosts Abington, but the Skippers also have league games against East Bridgewater, Mashpee (both postponed form this week) Rockland and Carver on the docket.

For Cohasset, Jeff Cavanaro has been a huge factor on a team full of outstanding performers.

Cavanaro is hitting .500 with 14 RBI through 15 games, while working to a 3-0 record with a 2.15 ERA on the mound. He's struck out 38 and walked 6.

Anders Goetz is hitting .421 with 13 RBI and Chris Murphy is at .420 with 14 RBI.

Jamie Faber is at .412 with 5 doubles and a team-leading 16 RBI.

Jamie Timothy is also hitting .400 with 12 RBI.

Connor Goetz is also a threat with a .298 average and 14 RBI to go with 5 doubles.

Drew Cobin, Mike Monaco and Shane Haggerty are also batting over .300.

Cobin has also excelled on the hill with a 4-1 record and a 2.19 ERA. He's fanned 45 while walking only 33.

under a minute, and the Clippers had an answer for everything the Skippers could muster. While Hope Kissick, Olivia Murphy and Kelsey Erler added goals for Cohasset, Norwell simply had more on this day. Despite 9 saves by junior goalie Stephanie Brierley, Norwell claimed another league title with an 18-5 win.

On Saturday, May 14, Cohasset had a chance to bounce back against Canton, a team the Skippers had not played in recent memory. Canton is a very fast, athletic team, while Cohasset had the superior stick skills, and it was that ability that showed first as the Skippers jumped out to a 6-1 lead in under six minutes. Senior attacker Kelsey Erler had half of that haul for Cohasset.

At that point, however, Canton's athleticism came to the fore, and the visitors tied the game at 7 with just over 10 minutes left in the half. Erler answered with two goals and sophomore midfielder Hope Kissick added one as the Skippers scrapped out a three-goal lead. After trading goals, however, Canton netted one with just one second on the clock for the first half, and went to the break trailing 12-10.

After swapping goals until the score was 15-13, Canton took an unusual strategy for a team that is trailing in a game, actually stalling for time while trailing, hoping to keep the game close so that it could make a run in the final minutes. About seven minutes passed before Cohasset netted four quick unanswered goals, and then added two of the next three to seemingly put the game away, leading 21-14 with roughly seven minutes remaining.

Canton, however, was not done.

Three goals in a minute made the lead 21-17, and just under the two-minute mark if was a two-goal game at 21-19.

With Canton trying furiously to run its offense, Cohasset's close defense of Eliza Kinnealey, Anna Seraikas, Molly Fitzgerald, Cally Altholtz and Sage Stebbins stepped up, backstopped by sophomore goaltender Kyle Coffman, who entered the game at the start of the second half. Coffman came up with two huge saves, and Cohasset broke the Canton press to score twice in the last 30 seconds to make the final 23-19 in a game that felt much tighter.

Erler finished with 10 goals, and Kissick had eight to lead the home team. Katherine Dunn scored twice and Whitney Jaffe, Olivia Murphy, and Kristen Alexander had single markers. Stephanie Brierley made six saves in the first half before giving way to Cofman who made 4 saves in the second stanza.

The Skippers road game at Hanover on May 17 was almost a carbon copy of the Canton game. The Indians play a very similar, athletic style to the Bulldogs and had, in fact, beaten Canton twice this season, including a blowout win the day before meeting Cohasset. Hanover came into the game confident.

Cohasset got off to a good start, with Hope Kissick scoring two of three opening goals en route to a 3-1 lead just three minutes into the game. But 16 minutes into the game, the lead was 7-6, and the pace of the game was favoring Hanover.

Kissick's fifth goal of the first half made the score Cohasset 11, Hanover 7 with under five minutes remaining in the half, but a 3-1 run by the Indians made this the second straight Cohasset game where the team had a 12-10 lead at the break.

Whitney Jaffe and Kissick made it a 14-10 lead just over a minute into the second half, but Hanover controlled much of the play and had answers for Cohasset from there, so that the game was 18-16 with 8:33 remaining. Kristen Alexander scored two of her four goals on the game down the stretch, and the defense of freshmen Molly Fitzgerald and Maddie Curley, along with senior co-captain Eliza Kinnealey, helped Cohasset put the game away.

Kissick finished with six scores and Alexander had her four. Kelsey Erler netted three, Jaffe and senior Olivia Murphey both finished with two goals and one assist, freshman Katherine Dunn had a goal and two assists and juniors Sage Stebbins and Angela Cipolla each had solo markers. Stephanie Brierley and Kylie Coffman again split the goaltending duties, with each posting four saves.

The Skippers were scheduled to play Abington on May 19, and then face a weekend road trip to Arlington before closing out the regular season at home against Pembroke on May 23. After that, the team will await the MIAA Division 2 South tournament.

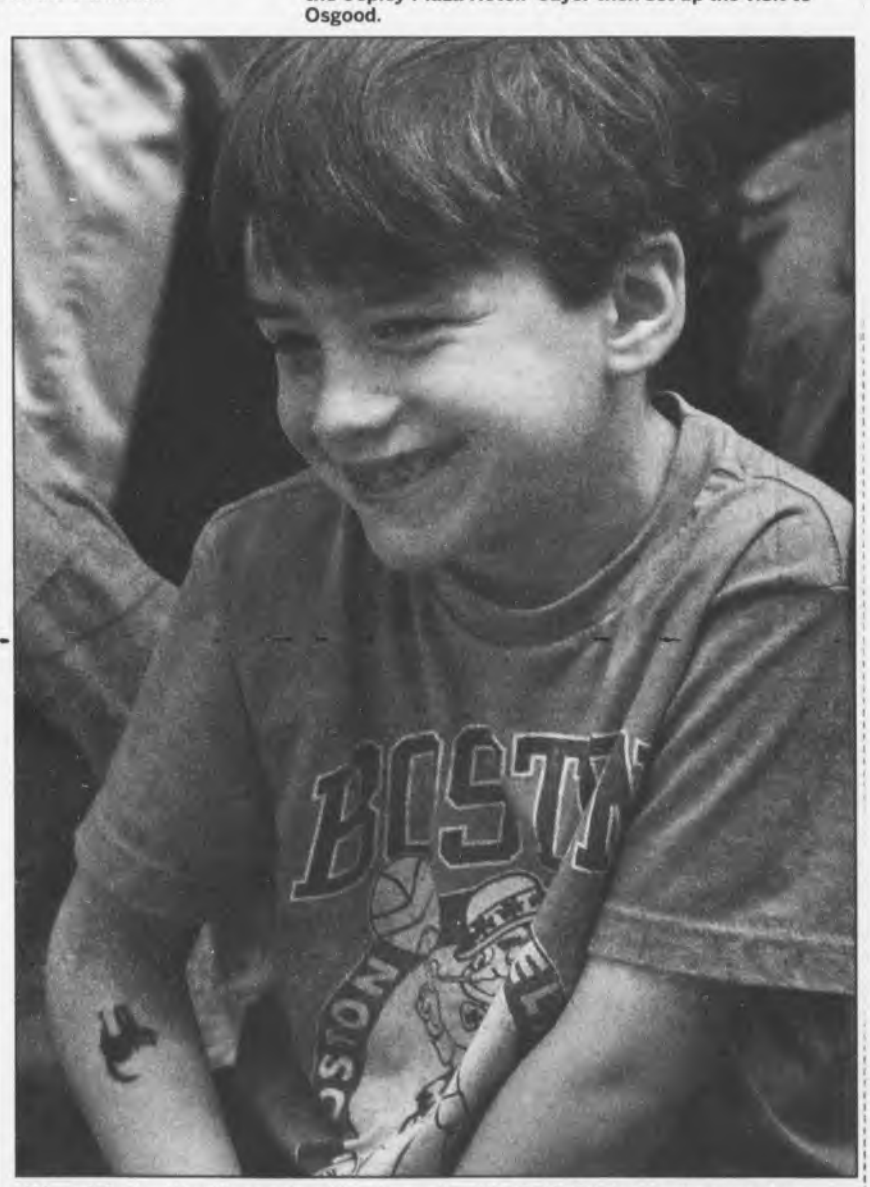
Catie Copley, the canine concierge at the Copley Plaza Hotel in Boston, paid a visit to the Osgood School with her handler, Joe Fallon. An audience of four kindergarten classes listened to reading specialist Mrs. Lynne Kenney read the children's book about Catie Copley before the black lab made a surprise entrance.

Lola Carter listens closely to the story of Catie Copley that was being read by Reading Specialist Mrs. Lynne Kenny.

Joe Fallon, a concierge at the Copley Plaza Hotel in Boston, waits with Catie Copley in the corridor of the Osgood School to be introduced to the students.



Casey Ognibene is the student who along with her mom, Jen Sayer, met the friendly black lab, Catie, while visiting the Copley Plaza Hotel. Sayer then set up the visit to Osgood.

Reading specialist Lynne Kenny reads the story of Catie Copley, a special dog that works at the Copley Plaza Hotel, to the Osgood Kindergarteners while they watch a television monitor displaying the story and pictures from the book.

LIFE AT CHS

Next columnist is still a secret

NATALIE DIGNAM

It's nearing the end! The last full week of school for the class of 2011, and my second to last column! I can't reveal the next columnist, but a junior lacrosse player will be taking over in June. When life hands her lemons, this girl knows how to make lemonade (or watermelon slushies!). But that's all I can say!

Anyway, a recap of last week: The band, jazz band, and chorus all scored superior in the competition, although a mysterious sign in the bus window and a stolen pack of gum put a damper on the trip. This week, all seniors must pay for prom and post prom (which still remains a mystery... to some...).

The Gay/Straight Alliance met in the Library at lunch on Thursday, and volunteers from Parents For Lesbians And Gays (PFLAG) visited Mr. Sweeney's health class on Wednesday to promote acceptance at CHS.

Also on Thursday (May 19th), was Arts Night. Students showed their appreciation to Mrs. Berkowitz for her hard work in coordinating arts night. Featured senior artists included Sam Richardson and Francesca Sadler. On Friday, the Big Blue went Green with the first ever bike to school day! Earth lovers; this is your time to shine at CHS, so wear your helmets! That's all for this week CHS!

Natalie Dignam is a senior at CHS; her column runs weekly during the school year.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 30, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you would prefer to move forward at a steady pace, it might be a good idea to stop and reassess your plans. You could find a good reason to make a change at this time.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Just when you thought you had everything planned to the smallest detail, you get some news that could unsettle things. But a timely explanation helps put it all back on track.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Home and work continue to compete for your attention. But you handle it well by giving each its proper due. Someone you trust offers valuable advice. Listen to it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Unsettling news creates a difficult but not impossible situation. Continue to follow your planned routine, but keep your mind open to a possible change down the line.

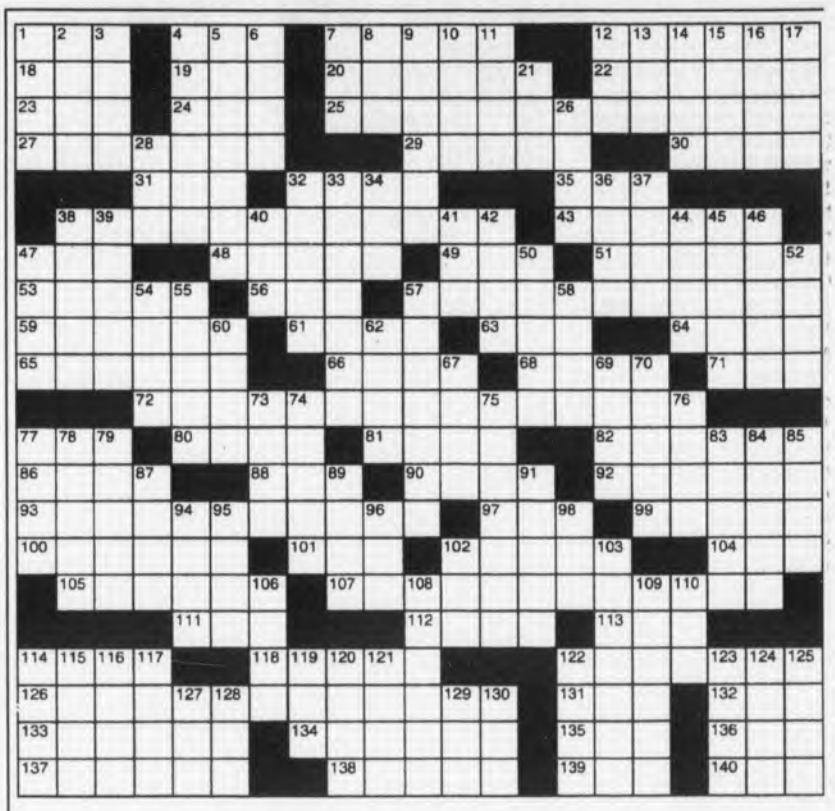
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Lick your wounded pride if you like, but it's a better idea to find out why your suggestions were rejected. What you learn could help you deal with an upcoming situation.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Feeling a bit listless? No wonder. You might be pushing too hard to finish everything on your to-do list. Cutting it down could help get your energy levels up.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Taking time out of your busy schedule might be the best way to handle that sensitive private matter. It will help reassure everyone involved about your priorities.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Insist on full disclosure by all parties before agreeing to be part of a "great deal." What you learn should help you decide whether to go with it or not.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your decision to protect the secret that was entrusted to you might irk some people. But it also wins you the admiration of those who value trust and loyalty.



CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Creative activities take on a practical approach as you realize you might be able to market your work. Ask for advice from someone experienced in this area.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) If you're suddenly a bit unsure about your decision, ask trusted colleagues and/or friends or family members for suggestions that could help resolve your doubts.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20). A workplace situation could get stormy. But stay on course until there's a solution that meets with everyone's approval, and BORN THIS WEEK: You keep an open mind on most matters, making you the confidante of choice for people who need your honest counsel.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

FROM CAMP TO COLLEGE:
FIVE TIPS TO EASE THE TRANSITION

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

The transition to college can mean big lifestyle changes for many people, but summer camp can help ease that transition to independence.

The American Camp Association, New England has compiled a list of some of the major advantages and skills children learn that help them make a smoother transition into college life after participating in overnight camp programs.

Five life skills overnight campers learn:

1) Separation: Knowing how to survive and thrive in a residential community away from home and away from parents and family is important. Resident camp experiences boost independence simply because children get to experience life away from their families.

2) Self-awareness/empowerment: Living away from home in the residential community of summer camp enables children to learn all kinds of key lessons about themselves and the unique role they are capable of playing in a group. Many individuals who display valuable group developement skills discovered them at camp.

3) Social skills: Camp experiences build social skills. Living closely with strangers in a small space (cabin, bunk, tent, or yurt) provides added incentive to learn the give and take necessary for successful community living. The ability to get along with others and the chance to develop tried and true methods of making friends, make the transition to college much easier for experienced campers.

4) Independence: Camp requires children to take care of themselves and their stuff. And, when problems arise, camp living enables children to rely on themselves for solutions or to reach out to others who can assist them. A rescue from a loving family member isn't an option. It's not an option at college either.

5) Community building skills: Experienced resident campers know first-hand how to be members of the community, a tremendously important skill in making a successful transition to a new college or university environment. Whether it's tapping the expertise of others who know the ropes, discovering the most important resources, or identifying the people with common interests, community building skills are essential survival skills.

K-9 proposal

Police Chief Mark DeLuca presented to the Board of Selectmen a proposal to bring a police canine unit to the department Tuesday night, but members of the board said they'd like to take a closer look at the potential long-term financial impacts of adding this type of special unit to town.

For that review, they referred the issue to the Capital Budget Committee.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Money in the bank

Over $700K to purchase supplies, pre-pay for fiscal 2012

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset School District will end the fiscal year in the black — and be able to get ahead in fiscal 2012, which starts July 1.

School Committee members knew previously that due to savings from some retirements and unfilled positions, they would be able to use monies from fiscal 2011 to support the fiscal 2012 budget, as allowed under Massachusetts law.

But the amount of positive balance in the school's budget in fiscal 2011 is estimated to be more than $700,000 — significantly more than what was discussed during the fiscal 2012 budget building process.

During the budget process, the School Committee initially proposed and voted on a budget that was roughly $330,000 more than the town said it could afford. In the week before Town Meeting, the School Committee voted to lower their budget to match the town manager's recommended budget of $15.4 million.

At the time, School Committee members said they would be able to still provide all the services

TOWN MANAGER FINALISTS

Selectmen will talk to five

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Since late October the town of Cohasset has been without a full-time Town Manager. During that time the search has been on for the next leader of the town. Roughly 80 applicants put their hat into the ring, but this week the field has been narrowed to five candidates.

On Monday night, the Town Manager screening committee announced a recommended list of five finalists for the position. The field includes three current town managers/administrators in other Massachusetts communities and two city administrators from out of state.

"We are very pleased with these five candidates who have gone through the process and we feel any of the five candidates could adequately fill the position," said Michael Milanoski, chairman of the town manager screening committee.

The committee held 10 meetings and more than 25 hours preparing, interviewing and deliberating the candidates. The committee interviewed ten of the applicants.

"We were pleased with the number of candidates who applied, in addition to the quality of the candidates," said screening committee member George McGoldrick.

The finalists include (in alpha-

WATER RATES

Aquarion proposes hike

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

Aquarion Water Company is proposing an 18.7 percent, or $2.8 million, rate increase through the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities.

This would be the second major increase in three years, following a 24.8 percent overall rate hike in 2009.

If approved, the new rates would go into effect in April 2012, costing the average Hingham, Cohasset, and Hull customers an additional 33 cents per day, or about $10 per month. The earlier increase cost ratepayers $10.80 more per month.

"It is a top priority to deliver quality water service that is cost-effective, particularly given the tough economy," said Aquarion Vice President of Operations Harry Hibbard in a press release issued by the water company. "While increased costs have contributed substantially to the need for a rate adjustment, we have worked hard to contain expenses and ensure that our operations are streamlined and efficient. We are also committed to maintaining the integrity of the water system and have made wide-ranging infrastructure investments throughout our service area."

Hibbard also said that Aquarion's "effective management of the system has allowed us to file a rate application that will meet the Company's obligations while remaining sensitive to the economic challenges facing our customers."

Hingham Town Administrator Ted Alexiades said a representative from Aquarion gave the town a "heads up" recently through his office about the proposed rate hike. "We haven't had an opportunity to evaluate the proposal yet, but we will thoroughly review it and make a determination as to what if any action the town needs to take," he said. "The town as a government itself is one of the largest water users in Hingham. In addition, we have an obligation to ensure that our residents are fairly represented in any rate case."

The review process for the 2009 increase began the year before and included a public hearing. At that time, some 100 Hingham, Cohasset, and Hull residents and town officials turned out for a 3-1/2-hour DPU-hosted meeting at Hull High School to vehemently oppose the proposed increase. Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, and Sen. Robert Hed-

POLICE BEAT

Rash of car accidents to report

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

• At 9:37 a.m. on Monday (May 16), police responded to a parking lot accident near Good Sport on King Street. Police said a 72-year-old Hull man in a 2003 Dodge Dakota pickup truck was attempting to pull out onto King Street but nudged out too far and then tried to back up hitting a town water department truck that was behind him in the parking lot. The man initially left but the operator of the town truck, a 69-year-old Cohasset man, honked and the motorist realized what had happened and came back. Police said it was a low speed accident and there was no damage. The operator of the Dakota was cited for failure to use caution, police said.

• At 4:29 p.m. on Friday (May 20), police responded to a two-car motor vehicle accident at Route 3A and lower King Street. A 2005 Hyundai Sonata, operated by a 77-year-old Scituate woman, attempted to pull out from lower King onto Route 3A and was hit by a 2006 Dodge Charger operated by a 22-year-old Brockton woman. The Hyundai was towed and the 77-year-old was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic.

• At 12:09 a.m. on Saturday (May 21), an off-duty Cohasset officer came upon an accident on Route 3A near the Golden Living Center driveway. The pickup truck, which was in two parts, was in the woods on the Hingham side of the town line and there was a man lying next to the wreckage with a head injury. He was taken to the hospital. Hingham police are summonsing the operator, a 33-year-old Scituate man, to court to face a drunken driving charge.

• At 2:04 p.m. on Wednesday (May 18), police responded to a two-car accident on Ripley Road. Police said a 2000 Mazda Protégé was heading south when it attempted to pass another vehicle on the right. The operator of a 2005 Ford Taurus, a 75-year-old Cohasset woman, pulled over a little to the left before attempting the right-hand turn into her driveway. Both cars were headed in the same direction; police said the operator of the Mazda, a 21-year-old Cohasset man, thought the Taurus was going to turn left and tried to pass on the right. The collision caused the Mazda to go up onto the sidewalk and through a fence. The operator of the Taurus was transported to the hospital with minor injuries, police said. The operator of the Mazda was initially charged with operating under the influence of alcohol but after taking a Breathalyzer at the station, he was under the legal limit. He was released from custody but is being summonsed for negligent operation, operating with an open container of alcohol on the car, and marked lanes violation. His car was towed and had front-end and undercarriage damage, police said.

Summonsed

A 20-year-old Cohasset man is being summoned to Quincy District Court for reckless operation, leaving the scene of an accident after property damage, failure to drive in marked lanes, speeding and failure to stop for a stop sign following the single-car accident last Thursday (May 19) at the ball fields off North Main Street. Pieces of the car and the license plate were left at the scene and led police to the suspect.

MV break-ins

Police are planning to summons three Cohasset boys (one 17 and two 16-year-olds) to court for a rash of motor vehicle break-ins last Thursday (May 19) during nighttime hours in the Reservoir Road area. An alarm went off in one of the cars and scared the teens off, but one of the teens left his cell phone behind on the seat of the car, police said.

Debit card

Police are investigating $297 in fraudulent charges on an 80-year-old Cohasset woman's debit/credit card. The woman noticed the charges after she lost her debit card. The card was cancelled and she was provided with an identity-theft packet.

No license

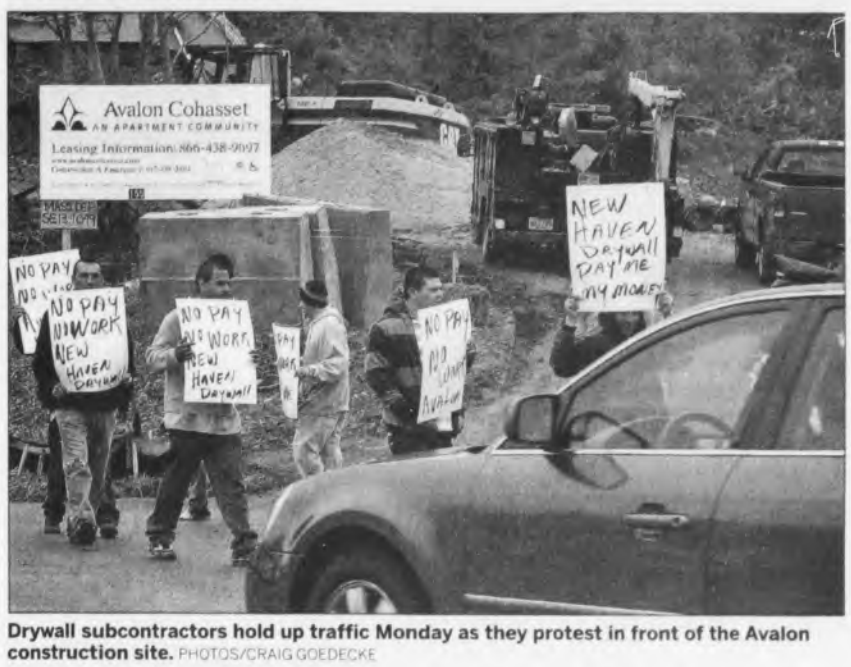
Police are summonsing a 21-year-old Scituate man to court for unlicensed operation following a traffic stop for speeding at 10:19 a.m. on Tuesday (May 17) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Police said the man who was driving a 1999 Dodge Dakota pickup truck was traveling too fast in the work zone by Avalon and they pulled him over. He presented police with a Brazilian passport and had no license even though he has been in the country for four years. His truck was towed.

Urinated

A caller complained after seeing a man urinate near the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue last Thursday (May 19) at about 11:22 a.m. Police found the man who explained that he had to relieve himself and thought he was far enough in the bushes not to be seen. Police spoke to the 55-year-old about his behavior and he was sent on his way.

Loose dog

The owner of a dog that was loose in the village last week (Thursday, May 19) is being issued a citation for violation of the town's leash law. A caller reported the dog was almost hit by a car, police said.



Kayak missing

A 55-year-old Cohasset woman reported last Saturday (May 21) that her blue plastic Sierra kayak valued at $350 was missing. The kayak was kept near the water's edge.

Car egged

A 38-year-old Cohasset woman reported at 10:50 p.m. on Friday (May 20) that her daughter's car had been egged within the last hour.

Workers protest at Avalon site

Route 3A traffic tied up for hours

By Nancy White

Cohasset Police officer Pat Reardon directs traffic during the protest Monday morning in front of the Avalon construction site.

On Monday morning, traffic on Route 3A was backed up in both directions when a group of construction workers picketed in front of the Avalon Bay apartment complex construction.

About a dozen workers had formed a picket line because, they alleged, they had not been paid for work performed at the Avalon apartments.

For about three hours the men stood outside the busy construction site drawing attention for nearly all passersby. Four detail officers, in addition to the two normally scheduled detail officers for the construction site, were called in around 10:30 a.m. Monday to help with traffic concerns.

"We had to ensure the picket was orderly; it's OK for (the workers) to exercise their rights, but safety concerns on a state highway were paramount," said Lieutenant William Quigley. Avalon is responsible for cost of all the detail officers.

John O'Connor, a representative with New England Regional Council of Carpenters, said the issue with the workers (who are non-union) was they had not been paid by a subcontractor working on the Avalon construction site.

O'Connor said this "embarrassing tactic" was done after efforts were made by the union to work with the superintendents at the job site. He said some of the workers had not been paid in weeks, and one had gone three months without a paycheck.

"My goal is to represent carpenters who are abused," O'Connor said. "We're just trying to be their voice."

Traffic issues were exacerbated when a union representative asked incoming trucks making various deliveries to the site to not cross the picket line, Quigley said. At least one cement truck turned around and did not cross the line.

Sometime in the early afternoon someone from the company the workers were employed by came with checks to pay the workers and the picket line broke up.

O'Connor said this might not be the end of the issue said some of the workers have also filed wage complaint forms with the Attorney General.

According to Scott Kinter, Avalon vice president of construction for New England, a subcontractor to Avalon's direct subcontractor hired the workers and therefore the workers were not being paid directly by Avalon.

"You know, it's unfortunate. The best thing to happen from it is how quickly we reacted to it. We very quickly responded and those men got paid," Kinter said. The company, JP Hefferdon Construction, is no longer working on the Avalon construction site, he said.

"We have a one strike you're out policy," Kinter said, adding Avalon representatives were meeting with companies involved to ensure a proper resolution. "We don't anticipate something like this happening again."

POLICE DOG PLAN

K-9 proposal to get more review

Selectmen want Capital Budget input

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset is not going to the dogs — police dog, that is — just yet.

Police Chief Mark DeLuca presented to the Board of Selectmen a proposal to bring a police canine unit to the department Tuesday night, but members of the board said they'd like to take a closer look at the potential long-term financial impacts of adding this type of special unit to town.

For that review, they referred the issue to the Capital Budget Committee.

DeLuca has been thinking about incorporating a police K-9 special unit almost since coming to Cohasset last year.

Over the 18 months the police department has had to call in other town's K-9 units when an incident called for the dog's special skills, DeLuca said, whether it is sniffing out drugs, finding a missing person, or tracking down a suspect on the run.

"(In all these cases) the lapse in time to call in another town's canine has really shown to be problematic," DeLuca said. "A police dog is an invaluable tool."

Officer Patrick Reardon, a three-year veteran of the force and Cohasset resident, has volunteered for the K-9 officer/handler position. If approved, Reardon and the dog spend 14-weeks in intense training before hitting the streets and together they take training courses throughout the working life of the dog.

"The cost to get this program up and running will be minimal, if anything. I'm confident I can operate (this unit) within the budget I currently have."
Police Chief Mark DeLuca

The majority of local towns have a K-9 officer, including Hull, Hingham, Scituate, Quincy, Rockland and Duxbury. In instances where a K-9 was needed Cohasset has relied on those towns mutual aid for assistance. The mutual aid service is provided at no cost to the town of Cohasset.

Among the side benefits of having a special unit, DeLuca said, is officer retention.

"In the last five years we have lost six police officers to bigger departments. In a smaller department like ours, there's nothing to strive for – a specialized unit helps with that," DeLuca said.

Several individuals, businesses and the Cohasset Police Association have come forward to help pay for the start-up costs for the K-9 unit. The union has offered $6,000 to fund the purchase and care of the dog and an anonymous donor has offered $5,000. A non-profit organization will be created to help pay for the care of the dog throughout his working life.

"The cost to get this program up and running will be minimal, if anything," DeLuca said. "I'm confident I can operate (this unit) within the budget I currently have."

A vehicle, which the department already owns, will be dedicated to the K-9 and specially outfitted for the dog.

"We're in the unique position to bring a service to Cohasset that we really need," DeLuca said.

After asking several questions about the K-9 unit, Selectman Leland Jenkins said the proposal should go before the Capital Budget Committee.

DeLuca said he was glad to discuss the proposal with the Capital Budget Committee, but said he was trying to use resources the department currently has to provide a service the town needs.

"Isn't is my job to figure out how to do more with less?" DeLuca asked.

Both Selectmen chair Ted Carr and Selectman Diane Kennedy said they were supportive of the police K-9, yet wanted more information on the long-term finances and impacts.

"If we had the money it's a great idea," Jenkins told the chief. He said he favored the regional approach and said the town could figure out a way to pay the other municipalities' overtime costs incurred when Cohasset calls on their police K-9.

The Capital Budget Committee is an appointed advisory committee to the Board of Selectmen, the Advisory Committee and Town Meeting. They review large capital projects and purchases to ensure they are necessary for the function of the town.

The discussion with the Capital Budget Committee on the Police K-9 proposal will be an open meeting. No date has been set as of press time.

What do you think?

Police Chief Mark DeLuca presented his proposal to create a police K-9 unit to the Board of Selectmen this week, but he also was presenting it to the community at large. Do you think Cohasset needs a police dog? Do you think Cohasset can afford it? Would you support the K-9 through donations? Are there questions you want answered about the proposal?

The Cohasset Mariner wants to know how the community feels. Take part in our poll found on the homepage of www.wickedlocalcohasset.com.

Planning Board needs associate member

The Planning Board needs an associate member. In the recent town election, William Hannon of Linden Drive, who had served in the position for one year, was elected to a full five-year Planning Board seat. As a result, Hannon resigned from his associate member position.

To fill the void a citizen will be appointed to the position in a joint vote of the Board of Selectmen and Planning Board.

The associate member was created in 2009 by Town Meeting. The associate only votes on applications if called upon by the Planning Board chairman.

Letters of interest should be sent to the Town Manager's office at 41 Highland Ave. On Tuesday, June 21 the Board of Selectmen and the Planning Board will have a joint meeting to interview the candidates and appoint the associate member. The associate member will serve until the next election.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY EXHIBIT

'More than a name on a wall'

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

There are 36 Cohasset men who have paid the ultimate sacrifice for this country. Since the Civil War scores of Cohasset's bravest have left the safe haven of this community and gone to fight for freedom — most have come back, but not all.

In conjunction with the town's observances of Memorial Day, the Cohasset Historical Society has put together an exhibit of photographs, artifacts, memorabilia and documents to honor the town's fallen.

Historical Society educator Becky Bates-McArthur said they have pulled out bits and pieces of the archives as well as received items on loan from some of Cohasset Gold Star families.

"When many people think about Memorial Day they think of flags and parades, but that's not the real meaning of the holiday. I realized that for a lot of people the only thing they know about these men is the fact their name is on a wall. We wanted to do something to connect those names with their stories. The stories that these men have are just incredible," Bates-McArthur said. "These men are more than a name on a wall."

Each of the heroes has a short biography of their life, a photograph, and any related materials.

The exhibit starts with the few men who were involved in the original American fight, the Revolutionary War. Three Cohasset residents took part in the Boston Tea Party and all are buried in town: Jared Joy is buried at Beechwood Cemetery and Abraham Tower and James Stoddard were laid to rest at Central Cemetery at Joy Place.

The exhibit continues through time: the Mexican War, the Civil War and the Spanish American War, where a handful of men served. A total of 14 men died during the Civil War, including Levi Gaylord, who was missing in action and is the town's only Congressional Medal of Honor recipient.

Between World War I and Vietnam, Cohasset lost 22 men. Each of the men has a square in town named after them.

It is during this period that the Historical Society has the most information. When the Cohasset men returned from World War I each soldier was awarded a medal from the town in honor of their service. The medal, one is on display in the exhibit, features Minot Light on one side.

Eight men did not return from World War II. Among them was Everett Studley, who was killed while leading his men in an attack across open ground in France. His family loaned the Historical Society his Purple Heart, his flag and personal effects for display.

"When families started bringing in the pieces of these men's lives that's when the stories started pouring in," Bates-McArthur said.

During the Vietnam War the town of Cohasset paid a heavy toll, as eight men were killed, including Peter J. Albiani, Jr., Peter Cogill, Allen F. Keating, William C. Laidlaw, John Paul Lyon, Edward R. Maree, Craig M. Simeone, and Dennis J. Reardon. Cohasset lost the same number of soldiers during World War II. The worst eight months of Vietnam were in 1969, when the town lost five men, four at six-week intervals.

The "Remembering Cohasset's Fallen" exhibit will have special hours this weekend. On Saturday, Sunday and Monday the Paul Pratt Building at 106 South Main St. will be open from 1 to 4p.m., in addition to its regular hours Monday through Friday, 10a.m. to 4p.m. The exhibit will stay up for the next couple of weeks.

Show your Cohasset spirit

In 2009, the Cohasset Historical Society resurrected the town flag designed and created as part of the town's bicentennial celebration in 1970.

The flag has a blue design on a white background. The central portion is a reproduction of the Cohasset town seal. Above the seal is a scroll with the word "Cohasset." Underneath is the year 1770, the year Cohasset broke from Hingham and became its own town, as well as two anchors. The two anchors at either side of the seal symbolize the hope of the future, according to published reports from late 1969.

"Every town should have a flag and every resident should fly one," said Jim Campbell, chairman of the flag committee. Over 200 flags have been sold over the past two years.

The flag is available at Goodwin Graphics, Eagle Flag and the Historical Society building for $42.50. The proceeds benefit the ongoing projects and preservation of Cohasset history by the Historical Society.

MEMORIAL DAY

Astronaut is keynote speaker

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

US Navy Captain Stephen Bowen has been to the depths of the sea and the orbit of outer space, but on Monday he will return to his home base — Cohasset.

Bowen, a member of the Cohasset High Class of 1982, is a veteran of three NASA spaceflights and a decorated member of the Navy. He will lead the Memorial Day parade and give the keynote speech at Veterans Memorial Park at the harbor.

Bowen journeyed into orbit aboard the final space shuttle Discovery flight on STS-133. The crew returned to earth on March 9, completing a 13-day mission to the International Space Station.

Bowen is the first Navy submarine officer selected as an astronaut by NASA. He is a veteran of three spaceflights and has logged more than 40 days in space including more than 47 hours during spacewalks.

He has returned to town several times over the past few years to speak to Cohasset students about his experiences in space and to inspire them to follow their dreams.

Bowen's keynote speech is part of the town's greater observance of Memorial Day. (For complete schedule, see page 1). Throughout the morning veterans and their families will pay their respects to Cohasset veterans who have passed on by visiting each of the town's cemeteries and veteran squares. The morning will culminate with the parade, which assembles at the Music Circus parking lot and concludes at Veterans Memorial Park across from the Field of Honor and American Legion Post in the harbor.

Several speakers, including Bowen, will say a few words at the ceremony shortly after noon. Hundreds are expected to come out from Cohasset and region to honor those who have lost their lives fighting for the country.

Meet and greet with Bowen

From 1:30 to 3:30p.m., following the Memorial Day ceremony at the Veterans Memorial at the harbor, will be a "meet and greet" with Captain Steve Bowen, a NASA astronaut, Naval officer and Cohasset native, at the Lightkeepers' Residence. Bowen is the keynote speaker at this year's Memorial Day observances. All are invited and cameras are welcome.

AROUND TOWN

Have a happy, safe holiday weekend

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Special time

Hello Cohasset and Happy Memorial Day weekend! Yes, this is the "unofficial" start of summer and the sun and warmth finally cooperated in a wonderful way. This weekend though, is really a way for all of us to honor, remember and show our thanks to the many men, women and families who have fought so hard for our country. So many of the brave men and women have laid down their lives for the USA, have been hurt while fighting and for so many of them now, who are still defending, protecting and fighting for us and our country. The families of those who have done or continue to protect us, also need our prayers and thanks as they live day-to-day hoping and praying that all will be ok. On Monday, May 30th, the Memorial Day Parade here in town will take place and is such a wonderful way to show our support and thanks. Gather your family and friends, show your colors of red, white and blue and enjoy.

Another special time in so many families lives right now are the many graduations that are taking place from Preschool through colleges all over. With that happening, the love and pride that families have is huge as it should be. Make sure to enjoy all that this time of the year brings from ceremonies to parties, Proms and celebrations galore. I have to be the "Mother" for a moment though and remind each and every one of us to always remember to be safe while the celebrations are happening. We all need to work together and make the smart choices to keep the celebrations happy and safe. No more preaching, I promise so on with this weeks news!

Among the many proud families around town, I received this note from one of them to share with you all.

Catholic Woman's Club Scholarship winners from left: Brian Sullivan, Hingham, graduating from BC High, to attend Georgetown University; Jennie Curley, graduating from Cohasset High, to attend Saint Joseph's College of Maine; and Aiden Hogan, Hingham, graduating from St Paul School, to attend BC High School in the fall. Also students simulated an International Olympic Committee site selection that resulted in the awarding of Nairobi, Kenya, as the site of the 2020 Summer Olympic Games.

The keynote speaker was U.S. Rep. Michael Capuano, D-Massachusetts, who talked about his Congressional resolution that urges more monetary participation by the United States government in south Sudan, in the Darfur region, as well as the recent controversy in Wisconsin concerning collective bargaining rights of state workers.

Get hazards out of the house

South Shore Recycling Cooperative member towns will host five more household hazardous waste collections this spring. Residents may attend their own town's event at no charge. Materials will be accepted from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. as follows:

June 4: Plymouth Department of Public Works, 169 Camelot Drive.

June 18: Scituate highway garage, 68 Captain Peirce Road, with Cohasset.

Residents of those and the member towns of Abington, Middleboro, Norwell, Rockland, Weymouth and Whitman may attend other member towns' collections at their own town's expense. To do so, request and bring a signed authorization form from the department in charge of the town's household hazardous waste events to the collection, usually the DPW or board of health. Some towns may limit subsidized quantities to 15 gallons or 30 pounds.

Visitors from any town without permission may attend for a fee of $43 per 15 gallons or 30 pounds of waste. Commercial generators may call ahead to 781-879-4435 to arrange disposal and payment.

People can bring oil-based paint and stains, solvents, gasoline, automotive fluids, pesticides, photography and pool chemicals, acids, bases, and poisons in secure, labeled containers.

People cannot bring industrial, pathological and medical waste, radioactive materials, pressurized gas cylinders or explosives.

Propane tanks, motor oil, antifreeze, auto and rechargeable batteries and fluorescent lamps are collected regularly by many towns. Residents should use those services if available. Go to ssrcoop.info.

Good, usable leftover latex paint will be collected for recycling into new paint products at the Weymouth and Hanover events by Paint Exchange LLC of North Scituate. Other latex paint collections will be announced in mid-to-late April. This collection is made possible by a grant provided by MassDEP. To see if paint qualifies for recycling, go to recyclereuserepaint.com or call 781-545-1272.

Latex paint and driveway sealer are messy, but not hazardous. If not recyclable as described above, dry with absorbent material and dispose with trash; keep lid off.

Residents who turn in a toxic mercury thermometer, thermostat or other mercury item may swap it for a digital thermometer. Sponsored by Covanta at SEMASS.

PSC Environmental will conduct the collections. For information and directions, call South Shore Recycling Cooperative at 781-329-8318 or go to ssrcoop.info.

Police departments host child seat inspection

Certified child passenger safety technicians from the Scituate and Cohasset police departments will conduct a free child car seat inspection at Scituate Police Station, 604 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Sunday, May 29.

No appointment is necessary for this free event, and seats will be inspected on a first-come, first-served basis. The child should be present for the proper installation or fitting of the seat. Participants should bring the owner's manual for both the vehicle and car seat and allow at least 30 minutes for the inspection and installation.

Register of Deeds to host Cohasset office hours

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will host scheduled office hours in Room 2B at Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., from 10 a.m. to noon, on Wednesday, June 15.

The Register and his staff will be on hand to answer questions or concerns about any Registry of Deeds matter. The Register will have information about the Massachusetts Homestead Act as well as computers and printers that can be used to confirm the status of a mortgage discharge, print out a deed or demonstrate how the Registry's website works. No appointment is necessary.

Making music at parish

Allegra Martin brings knowledge, experience

By Sara Hollingshead

First Parish's Music Director Allegra Martin has brought her love of music to the people of Cohasset since joining the Parish in February 2008. Bringing her own knowledge and experience to Cohasset — in addition to first-class musicians through a concert series she established — Martin is using what she knows and loves to create a community through music.

Growing up in Lexington, surrounded by a father who plays numerous brass instruments and a mother who plays percussion, Martin's love for music started at a young age.

"I don't really remember a time when I was not interested in and playing music," Martin said.

Piano lesson for Martin began at the age of 3, and in third grade, Martin joined the children's choir at her church, Follen Church in Lexington. Throughout her childhood, Martin continued with piano lessons, in addition to voice lessons in high school.

While attending Williams College, Martin said she was able to experiment with many things including composing, singing, conducting, and accompanying. After graduating, she kept experimenting; "I worked in computer support, I biked across the country with a group called Bike-Aid, and I earned a black belt in taekwondo."

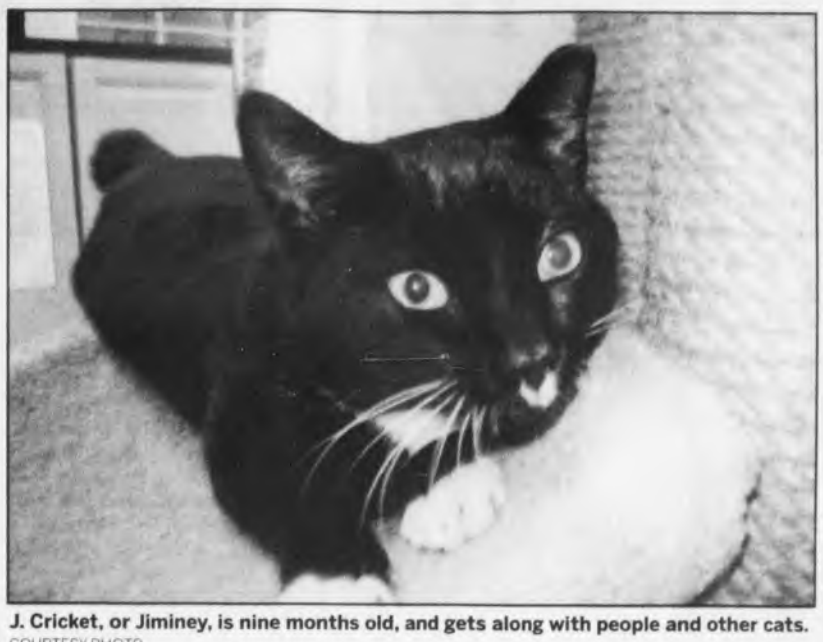
It wasn't until Martin realized the importance of music in her life that she turned to conducting as a career. Martin remembers, "I wanted to be involved in choral music, and I have always been able to see what ought to be done in a rehearsal to make the music better, and since it's almost impossible to make a living just as a choral singer, being involved in choral music meant becoming a conductor!"

Martin went on to earn her Masters in Choral Conducting at Westminster Choir College, in New Jersey. While at Westminster, Martin sang with Kantorei, a chamber ensemble.

Since returning to Boston after graduating from Westminster, Martin and her friend, Anney Gillotte, established Anthology, a professional women's quartet, with Michelle Vachon, and Vicky Reichert. Singing together for just over three years, Anthology, performs all types of music, ranging from new classical music to folk, jazz, and pop.

Currently, Martin also sings with Schola Cantorum, a professional Renaissance choir that sings in Boston and Providence with 3-4 concert series a year.

The Commuter Rail originally led Martin to First Parish Cohasset. At the time, Martin was looking for a job with a Unitarian Universalist church, and without a car, her options were limited, but the Commuter Rail opened the door, as Martin would be able to get to Cohasset without a hassle. Martin recalls, "Ironically, because the station is not in the middle of town, I am rarely actually able to use the train; I just borrowed my family's car until I got my own."



As the Music Director, Martin plays a huge role in the church; "I conduct the choir and the bell choir, hired our organist, collaborate with the minister and various committees to organize special music for services or special events, participate in several committees myself, and organize our concert series."

Since joining the staff of First Parish, Martin's love for music has greatly impacted the community. Initiating the concert series upon her arrival, Martin brings in different musicians once a month from October through May; "I wanted to create a space where musicians could perform and get paid, and people could come to hear music they might not have access to otherwise."

In addition, Martin is planning to further develop the music program at First Parish; "I would say that starting to sing with my church choir was a very important step in my love of singing; and I'm happy to say we are planning to start a children's choir at First Parish Cohasset so that I can share that experience with the kids here."

As the Music Director, Martin has many goals for First Parish and its music; one of those is to create a community. "I hope that through music I can provide community; allow people to access and express emotions that we have no other vent for; and bring even more joy to our worship together. I think music can provide a very strong community bond, and I hope I am doing that at First Parish. I hope that after people hear me sing, or hear the choir sing, that they feel satisfied and deeply joyful and a little more alive."

GIMME SHELTER

J. Cricket, or Jiminey, is nine months old, and gets along with people and other cats. COURTESY PHOTO

J. Cricket is a cute cat

Jiminey is one of the special cats with virtually no issues.

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is looking for shelter for another friendly black and white Tuxedo cat/kitten: J. Cricket, or Jiminey, who is nine months old.

He looks full-grown but is still extremely kittenish. He's a contended cat and gets along with virtually everyone, human or feline. He was rescued as a stray, but it's obvious that he once had a loving home, as he is as domesticated as they come. Jiminey is one of the special cats with virtually no issues.

You can check him out on the website along with many of HSAR's other cats.at www.hsar.org. HSAR has open hours on Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m.. If these hours aren't convenient, please call the shelter at 781-925-3121 and leave a message for Judy, the Adoption Coordinator.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045, email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low cost spay neuter clinic on Thursday, May 26th. If interested, check out the HSAR web site or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

HSAR is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 782-925-3638. You'll be glad you did.

Thanks to the many people who generously donate to the HSAR cause. They couldn't do it without you.

Our World re-vamps toddler room

Mural artists and high school art students Whitney Malone, Caitlin Mavillia and Meghann Salerno with Our World visitors Emma Whoriskey and Ryan Dowden in the transportation station.

The Mothers' Volunteer Council of Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum proudly unveiled the new Toddler Room on Wednesday, May 11, thanks to help from many local businesses and Cohasset High School art students, Whitney Malone, Caitlin Mavilia, and Meghann Salerno.

The volunteer Mothers' Council has been busy for the last few months cleaning up the museum and renovating the room to incorporate more age appropriate toys and focused thematic play areas.

Several local companies answered the call to get the toddler room up and running. ServiceMaster, cleaned the floors and carpets. Aubuchon Hardware painted the room and donated all the paint for the walls and murals. Magner Construction donated the materials and time in creating the partitioned stations. Toy shops in the area, Buttonwood Books & Toys of Cohasset, Harbor Light Toy Company of Scituate, and Magic Beans of Hingham, donated play kitchens, houses, dolls and instruments, as well as offering generous discounts for other needed items.

Complementing the new equipment and cleanliness are the colorful murals and new chalk paint walls for children to enjoy.

Three high school girls, Whitney Malone, Caitlin Mavilia, and Meghann Salerno painted a several murals, one featuring the world with children of different cultures holding hands, another one of a colorful train filled with animals, and yet another with a rainbow with musical notes. Director of the Mothers' Council, Megan Whoriskey, painted a mural with rocket ships voyaging into space with the words "imagine, dream, explore, create" floating in the clouds.

Museum Director Julie Laugelle attests, "Everyone loves it! Moms, dads and babysitters love the new area. The children are enjoying the new costumes, play house, baby dolls, and music area."

The museum has been filled with new and old visitors every day since the reopening, and people are thrilled with the new energy and renovation.

The volunteer group encourages others to help in their mission, and would like to make more families aware that the non-profit Our World playground and museum is "Ours to protect and keep," so generations of children can enjoy. Without the volunteers or financial support from the surrounding communities, the playground and museum is difficult to maintain and update. They hope to continue renovating more areas in the museum and would like to focus on creating an area for children ages five to eight that encourages them to explore different cultures in the areas of music, science, math, and art.

The volunteer group will be hosting a fundraiser at The Cohasset Harbor Inn on Saturday, June 11, and a book fair at Barnes & Noble in the Hingham Derby Shoppes on Wednesday, June 22. Proceeds from these events will help the group in their mission.

Please contact the museum for more information on the events or volunteering at 383-3198 or at www.ourworld-cgdm.org.

Notre Dame Academy's Class of 2011 Graduates

By Amanda Salvucci
asalvucci@wickedlocal.com

A sea of 138 yellow roses, one for each student, flew into the air of the auditorium with the announcement that the Notre Dame Academy class of 2011 graduated. The graduates, their family and their friends celebrated the graduation of Notre Dame's 158th class last Friday evening in Hingham.

The graduation, which normally takes place outside on the school's field hockey field, was moved inside because of predicted cold and rainy weather, but the graduates made the best of it. The sun managed to come out before the ceremony, and the students gathered outside in their identical white dresses to take pictures, be congratulated by proud parents and share memories with their friends. Their gold medallions, given to them the night before at the school's Baccalaureate, glistened in the sunlight.

During the ceremony, the graduates were given advice by a fellow classmate and additional advice from an alumna.

"We are ingrained with the desire to do more, experience more, see more, and become more," Notre Dame Academy graduate Christine Higgins of Weymouth told her classmates. She urged them to "always strive for extraordinary" as they move onto college and throughout the rest of their lives.

Throughout her speech, Higgins — who was chosen via an anonymous essay contest to be the student graduation speaker this year — compared life to her love of acting. She asked her classmates to "explore your stage, change your costumes, and find your light. Find something that will energize you, something that you will love to do for the rest of your life." Continuing with this theatre theme, she told the graduates that they would need to improvise and build their own characters.

The graduates received more advice in the commencement address given by Mk Haley, a Notre Dame Academy graduate from the class of 1986. Haley, now the Associate Executive Producer of the Entertainment Technology Center at Carnegie Mellon, talked about her experiences and encouraged the students to pursue their passions.

"Your passion supports your career, your career allows you to live your passion, and your flexibility allows you to bend and grow," Haley said. She also told the graduates about the importance of being happy with their future careers, citing studies that show that people perform better when they are happier.

The graduates were accepted to 172 different colleges. Katherine French from Cohasset was the class valedictorian while Kerry McCabe, also from Cohasset, was the class salutatorian.

Elizabeth Hennessey of Hingham was awarded the St. Julie Award for best epitomizing the selflessness and other fine qualities of St. Julie Billiart, who established the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur.

The graduation also included a class gift presented by the class treasurer. The Class of 2011 gift will go toward repairing the front sign of the school that was damaged this winter.

About the NDA graduates

Family and friends of the 138 members of the Notre Dame Academy Class of 2011 gathered at the school's Hingham campus on Friday, May 20 to celebrate the graduation of the Academy's 158th class.

The graduates – hailing from 27 communities – have been accepted at 172 different colleges around the nation and abroad.

Graduation celebrations officially began on Thursday evening, May 19, with Baccalaureate. At the conclusion of the liturgy, the Class of 2011 participated in one of Notre Dame Academy's most treasured traditions, when each soon-to-be-graduate was presented her Notre Dame Academy medallion by her alumnae sponsor – sisters, mothers, family members, friends or beloved faculty members who have already graduated from the Academy.

Cohasset NDA graduates include:

Olivia Adkins, Dylanne Axelson, Alexandra Butler, Bridget Cahill, Katherine French, Kathleen Kelly, Kerry McCabe, Molly McElgunn, Claire Pozniak, Katharine Sease, Caitlin Tulio and Victoria Wade.

Notre Dame Academy is a Catholic, college preparatory high school for young women founded by the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur in 1853. The Academy enrolls nearly 600 students in grades nine through 12 from more than 40 communities.

JAPAN RELIEF EFFORT

Derby conducts crane-folding project

When disaster struck Japan in March, people around the world came to the aid of those affected by the earthquakes and tsunami. While many provided monetary support, Derby students opted for another method of showing support: Folding paper cranes. According to Japanese folklore, folding 1,000 paper cranes will make a wish come true. If the saying is right, students at Derby helped do just that.

The crane-folding project was part of an effort by Students Rebuild and DoSomething.org to help students worldwide support the people of Japan. A challenge was issued to schools to make and mail paper cranes for Japan. Each crane made would be matched by a $2 donation from the Bezos Family Foundation, with a goal of receiving 100,000 cranes, resulting in a $200,000 donation for Japan.

Derby students of all ages participated in the folding festivities, using study halls, recesses and other time throughout the day to fold cranes. Some students would even come to school with boxes of cranes that they made at home. The crane activity's success far surpassed expectations, and by the close of the effort, more than one million cranes have been collected from schools around the world, including all 50 states and more than 30 countries.

The Bezos Family Foundation was inspired to double its initial gift, resulting in $400,000 to benefit Architecture for Humanity's reconstruction efforts in Japan. An anonymous donor added $100,000 to the pot, totaling $500,000 raised through this student project.

While the majority of Derby students were involved in making paper cranes, the youngest members of the community came up with their own activity. "Folding paper cranes is an activity that is beyond the motor skills of many kindergarteners," said kindergarten teacher Polly Rizzotto. But, the students still wanted to participate in the outreach efforts of the school, so the kindergarten teachers came up with another activity. "We wanted to give the children an outlet for any concern and a vehicle to help," said Rizzotto. The result was a simple Japanese flag-making project, inspired by Tibetan prayer flags. Each child traced and cut a red circle and glued it onto white construction paper. Then, they dictated a wish or hopeful message for Japan such as, "we hope you are safe" or "we hope you get help fixing your houses." The flags were then hung in the Lower School foyer with the thought that the good wishes would drift through the air to the people of Japan.

Missing them still

In our sophomore year, I recall our teacher asking our English class if anyone knew anyone or had a relative serving in Vietnam. No one raised his or her hand. Soon, that all changed.

The paragraph about the Vietnam War in our story on the Cohasset Historical Society exhibit honoring those from Cohasset lost in wartime has me thinking about two young men — John Lazarovich and Joe Hunt. They were classmates of mine at Scituate High School and members of the SHS Class of 1966.

In our sophomore year, I recall our teacher asking our English class if anyone knew anyone or had a relative serving in Vietnam. No one raised his or her hand.

Soon, that all changed.

John (known as "Laz") was killed on Dec. 4, 1967. He was a lance corporal with the US Marines. He was just 19 years old. His name is on wall panel 31E, wall line 036 on the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C.

A little more than a month later, on Jan. 27, 1968, Joe was killed. He was a corporal with the Marines. He was just 20 years old. His name is on wall panel 35E, line 047 on the Vietnam Memorial.

Laz and Joe still live within the hearts and minds of the SHS Class of 1966. They had ready smiles and were full of fun. In our class yearbook and in our memories, they are still young. We miss them still.

During the Vietnam War, the Town of Cohasset lost eight men: including Peter J. Albiani Jr., Peter Cogill, Allen F. Keating, William C. Laidlaw, John Paul Lyon, Edward R. Maree, Craig M. Simeone and Dennis J. Reardon. The worst eight months of Vietnam for Cohasset were in 1969, when the town lost five men, four at six-week intervals.

All wars carry a heavy toll. Many of the members of the Class of 1966 had fathers that served in World War II and/or Korea. We knew about war, but we had not experienced it ourselves until Vietnam.

The nightly news brought the Vietnam War into our homes, but the loss of our classmates made it all too real.

As a mother, I had the experience of many sleepless nights while both my sons served in Iraq, one in 2003 just after the invasion and the other during the surge in 2007. My nephew served in the years in between. I will be eternally grateful that they all came home safely.

I know this Memorial Day, I will be thinking about Joe and Laz.

Their families — and many, many other Vietnam veterans' families — have had an empty chair on holidays and at family gatherings for more than 40 years.

On Monday, many will be thinking about their classmates, friends or relatives who were killed in wartime.

We need to remember those we have lost; we need to honor them; and we need to miss them still.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Let's ration destructiveness

The essence of Tom Wolf's letter of May 20 about Cat Dam is that we should subjugate Cohasset's own interests to the unrealistic agenda of state agencies (do away with human intervention, and put up with whatever a capricious Mother Nature provides). This abdication of common sense is no substitute for responsible and considered address to the issue at hand, including recognition of the history before and after the gates were installed and an effective operating schedule developed.

Cat Dam would not have become an issue with potential for a long and costly legal quagmire, save for the ill-considered, determined, and locally initiated attempt to eliminate our existing and demonstrably effective solution to Inner Little Harbor's natural defects.

The problems with Inner Little Harbor (ILH) are somewhat unique, primarily because of the high elevation of the bottom relative to sea level, which resulted (before Cat Dam) in stinking mud flats without water cover for many hours spanning each low tide. Since the Cat Dam was installed and its operating sequence developed to slow the outgoing tide so as to retain water cover to absorb much of the odorous hydrogen sulphide gas, Cohasset has benefited from the conversion of ILH from stinking eyesore to an eminently tolerable body of water. It is not a perfect solution, but it is the least imperfect of any practicable alternative and certainly a great improvement over unimpeded outflow.

It is not in the best interest of Cohasset to abandon Cat Dam, although its effect may be improved by the proposed minor adjustments to timing.

It is sophomoric nonsense to accuse the E20 people of being only self-serving. Of course they are, and so should we all be in protecting our local environment from the influence of idealistic, impractical and ill-informed state agencies (and from domestic willfulness). The idiocies will be costly and time-consuming to reverse, and better avoided by sticking to the intelligent program that has served us well. Over the years, Cohasset has benefited immensely from ad hoc citizens' groups, such as E20, that have stepped up to the plate to address some problem of the town, and we are fortunate that we always seem to have a stable of able individuals willing to do so.

Fortunately, the E20 group has engaged a qualified consultant whose report clearly identifies the issues to be resolved, and provides rational and well-reasoned advice on resolution. And fortunately our own Conservation Commission is well informed on the history and beneficial effect of Cat Dam, can assess the applicability of input from the state agencies, and will not be inclined to action that would degrade our environment.

R. Murray Campbell, 217 Jerusalem Road

Thanks for helping ASP

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project would like to thank several local businesses for their kind donations, helping us to raise over $2,500 at our recent "A Taste of Appalachia" festival: All for the Best, Atlantica, Buttonwood, Cohasset Cycle Sports, Flemings, Feng Shui, French Memories, Kinnealey Meats, Paperscapes, Red Mango, Scarlet Oak, and various other private donors. Special thanks to The Cohasset Mariner for its continued support and to everybody who helped set-up, prepare, donate, dance and just generally have a great time!

Also, just as a footnote, there has been some recent confusion as to which "Appalachia Mission Project" these various fundraisers support. There are now two organizations in town taking teenagers and adults to Appalachia to help the less fortunate. Ours is the townwide, "Cohasset Appalachia Service Project Group," AKA "CASP" with offices at 2nd Congregational Church, Judy and Gary Ritts as coordinators. The other group, sponsored by St. Anthony's Catholic Church, is called "Youth Ministry Mission" and is headed up by Bill Mezzetti. Several folks have given to one, thinking they were supporting the other. If it's important to you, make sure you ask the name of the group. There are also other separate Appalachia Mission trips from Hingham and Scituate.

Davis family says thanks

I am writing on behalf of the Davis family to thank a number of people in this town who recently helped our family bury our brother, Paul Joseph Davis, US Air Force Sergeant (1963-1968), Vietnam War, with military honors. We would like to express our heartfelt thanks to Jane Hamilton, Bob Jackson and, particularly, Joseph McElroy, Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services, for their assistance in providing not only emotional support for the loss of our brother but also arranging for an Air Force Honor Guard and Cohasset Veteran, Bob Jackson, at our brother Paul's gravesite at Central Cemetery in Cohasset. They were all so gracious and accommodating and we truly thank you all for your support.

We would also like to thank the US Air Force Honor Guard who traveled from Hanscom Air Force Base and presented the United States flag to our brother, Tom Davis, also a US Navy Vietnam Veteran (1965-1969) and played "Taps." This was such an honor to have them there and meant a great deal to all of Paul's family and friends in attendance.

This Memorial Day, please remember the Veterans who died for our country, for those who served and those who continue to serve our country to keep us the, "Land of the Free and the Home of the Brave." Join the Memorial Day Parade but remember to take you children to the Veteran's Memorial Park and tell them what it means, to all of us. Donate to our local VFW and American Legion. They always need our town support. This is what makes this town such a remarkable place to live. Thank you.

Catherine E. Davis, 100 Pond St.

Stay open on Memorial Day

I agree with the recent editorial by Gate House Media Editor-in-Chief Greg Mathis, opposing the attempt to reintroduce the Commonwealth's antiquated Blue Laws to selectively apply to retail stores on Memorial Day. Honoring those who have served is important, but however well intended this bill is a bad idea for many reasons.

State Senator Bob Hedlund has now joined in support of his two fellow Republican bill sponsors. In a recent letter to the Mariner, Mr. Hedlund claims it's meaning has been "corrupted" by "barbeques and sales promotions"... not a proper expression of true patriotism.

The bill is also opposed by the Retailers Association of Massachusetts, (RAM) citing lost revenue to out of state businesses, and on line shopping, among many other reasons, including an unfair burden on small retail businesses (theaters, restaurants and others would still be open). RAM Director Jon Hurst whose son is a Navy Lieutenant, rhetorically queries what's next: asking the Red Sox to cancel ball games on that day, maybe close beaches and parks?

And what about other solemn holidays equally deserving of respect?

And this is not just about business and sales. It's also about important principals of freedom, choice, and the specter of allowing government officials to define patriotism.

My dad served in the army in WW2, he's buried in a Veteran's cemetery... my Uncle Phil received a Purple Heart, wounded in battle protecting his buddies. And we all know too many that never returned from various conflicts. No one, certainly not government officials, needs to tell any family how to honor those who served.

Just think about places in the world where the government does "assist" citizens to better manage their free time, or "help" people become more patriotic, etc.

My family has attended plenty of parades and various Memorial day events - on our own - without government "encouragement."

Coming out of one of the worst recessions in American history is not the time to lay burdens on small businesses, struggling mom & pop stores. Yet even in the best of times, it's still a bad idea to have government deciding whether we are being patriotic enough.

And by the way, whatever happened to the will of the people of Massachusetts, who voted overwhelmingly in 1994 to allow stores to be open on Memorial Day, Labor Day and the Fourth of July?

Now that local hero Steve Bowen will come to Cohasset to speak this Memorial day, let's embrace his participation, and anyone else that wants to join in voluntarily... without government guidelines. The true meaning of Memorial Day, like other solemn occasions, lies in the hearts and minds, and choices people make, on that day and beyond.

If we want to honor the memory of those who have served... observe how you choose, but let's keep in mind the principals for which they fought.

Howie Altholtz, 5 Woodland Drive

FOR THE RECORD

Surveying the situation

GREGORY MATHIS

It seems you can't do anything these days without being asked to fill out a questionnaire or take a survey.

How would you rate your experience?
How was the service?
Would you recommend us to a friend?
What can we do to improve?
Will you return?
Would you buy online with us in the future?

Those are the easy questions that usually require filling in an oval on a form.

But some questionnaires are a little more involved. I took a survey a few weeks back for a popular sandwich shop, mostly because there was something in it for me with regards to a few extra points being added to my rewards card. The survey was being used to decide an upcoming line of sandwiches and there were many layers of options and questions. By the third page of the online survey I was regretting the decision to participate and getting hungry, but continued plugging away to make sure I received my bonus points.

Most online purchases are followed up with a questionnaire, many visits to restaurants have surveys tucked away next to the check, and just about every type of business has some type of form seeking feedback.

While I have been known to randomly offer my opinion on just about any topic without being asked for it, I'm not the most forthcoming with my feedback on these forms unless I have a terrible experience. It kind of goes against the saying, "If you don't have anything nice to say, don't say anything at all."

We actually see a lot of that in our business. While we do occasionally get unsolicited positive feedback, a lot of the response we get from readers is critical of something printed in the newspaper or posted online.

Usually, if I just have nice things to say, I don't provide any feedback on those surveys and questionnaires. I think that holds true for a lot of people, but maybe I'm wrong. We could put that to a vote in one of our online polls.

Online polls are our contribution to the feedback frenzy. While we generally don't use online polls to rate your level of satisfaction with the newspaper or website, we do seek your opinion on a number of important or not-so-important issues affecting your community.

Our success with online poll participation varies greatly from town to town and depends on the issues we can tap for discussion. The polls are very unscientific, but when we strike the right chord they do provide some insight on how people feel about particular issues.

In one particular town where online polls haven't really caught on, the editor said she wanted to have a poll asking what it would take to get people to vote. Not a bad idea, and one we might be able to use elsewhere.

Instead of asking you to take another survey, fill out a questionnaire or even vote in one of our online polls to find out how readers feel about polls, how about if you send in poll question suggestions? Don't forget to provide some possible answers/responses to go along with the poll question, and if we like it, we'll include it on the Wicked Local website. Send your poll questions/responses to gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

CALLING ALL VETERANS

Walking in 'sacred dust'

RONALD WHEATLEY

"It was between 9:30 and 10:00 a.m. when I called Hayden because I had to go up to my town manager, Rocco Longo, to get permission from him to take volunteers from my department. I put out a call that anyone who wanted to come up on a voluntary basis; we are leaving this afternoon," said Cohasset Chief of Police Mark DeLuca, who at the time was serving as police chief Duxbury. (Longo is now town administrator in Marshfield.)

When MBTA Assistant General Manager for Safety Robert Hayden's phone rang, he had just arrived at the MBTA headquarters at Park Plaza in Boston to huddle with others watching the Twin Towers being hit by an aircraft. It was about 9:15 a.m. on Sept. 11, 2001. Hayden and DeLuca are lifelong friends who had served together on the Boston Police Department.

"Chief DeLuca said that he was organizing a group of responders — first responders — to go to New York City and he was asking for volunteers," said Hayden, who lives in Hingham. "He said he needed 10 to 12 officers to go and he asked me if I would like to join them. He said, 'We will be doing first aid, looking for bodies, doing anything to help the New York City Police Department and fire departments.' So I drove home, put on a pair of dungarees and sweatshirt, brought a toothbrush. I told my wife I was going, I did not know for how long, and drove to Duxbury in time to join the group that Mark had assembled."

"Bob was the first guy I called, and all he asked was, 'When are you leaving?'" said DeLuca.

Insuring that Duxbury had adequate coverage, DeLuca found three police cruisers that were not going to be used.

Both men vividly recall as they were approaching New York seeing a portable lighted sign with the chilling notice "NYC closed." They were directed by emergency personnel to a holding area in New Jersey.

"We went in there and joined about 500 people — mostly fire and policemen. We learned that this was a holding pool of volunteers to be used as they were needed. After about 20 minutes, Chief DeLuca said, 'This isn't what we came to New York City for — let's go,'" said Hayden. "Chief DeLuca was the hero to me. When we were at that holding area in New Jersey, it takes a special person to say I'm not sitting here any longer, I am not going back to Boston and just get up and say, 'Let's go men.'"

But obstacles remained. As they drove deeper into the city, they began to encounter manned wooden barricades.

"We were not supposed to drive into New York City, but our cars were marked Duxbury Police and they had blue lights on them. So the chief told everyone to turn on their blue lights and we drove straight by everyone who said stop, and in a very short time we came to Ground Zero. As we got closer, I could see that there was a horrible pall of white dust that covered everything. This was around midnight. You breathed it, and it was on your hands," Hayden said.

The team could go no farther in the cars when they neared the actual site.

"The first thing I noticed was the New York City police cars just totally flattened. You could see abandoned vehicles. It was like a horror movie, like a Mad Max movie when there is nothing alive. You could not see more than 100 feet — shadowy figures moved in the distance. Fire engines were flattened," said Hayden.

From the police cars, the team trudged through the six-inch-deep, powdery dust toward the shadowy figures.

"We got right up to the edge of this huge mound of destruction and there were probably 1,000 people there who had already started working. There was no one in charge, but there really did not have to be. There were lines about an eighth of a mile long where the workers were passing debris, pieces of steel, heavy concrete, from right to left," said Hayden.

The volunteers had assembled on top of the mound of destruction, and DeLuca's team joined the line.

"You'd stand in the line, and something would come to you and you would pass it to the next guy. But what I noticed was — and it was awesome, horrible — the buildings had collapsed and there was no sign of furniture, desks, people, it was all emulsified. Just white dust and white paper. Nothing that you could recognize as part of the building." Hayden said.

Working on the mound under generator-powered artificial lights was a hazardous business.

"You had to be very careful where you stood, because you did not know how stable the debris pile you were standing on was, and you did not want to fall into the three-story-deep hole, to the rubble below. Mainly we were looking for bodies, listening to hear if someone was screaming, looking to see if there was movement," Hayden said.

They would eventually be rewarded.

"There were three times when everything stopped — without any signal to stop — and that was when they found either a body or a part of a body. Everyone who was there — there was no conversation — I didn't know who the person to my right was or to my left. It was grim, stone-faced work, and somehow, without knowing how, electricity would go through that crowd and everyone would stand up straight and watch and four or five members of the FDNY would pass by us carrying a flag draped stretcher with full honors. And everyone there would stand at attention and put their hand over their heart or salute," Hayden said. "Once that treasured item moved out of sight, then all work started again."

They learned later that one of those stretchers carried a survivor.

Around 5 a.m. the team heard that a restaurant stayed open and they drove up to the upscale Tavern on the Green, in Central Park.

"The place was occupied by hundreds of young people, college people, and when we walked in everyone in the place stood up and cheered. They gave up their tables. They came over and hugged us and kissed us. And the management came over and made sandwiches, which we took with us. I was really proud to see our people who sometimes seem not all that patriotic just behave so magnificently," Hayden said.

On the morning of the third day, more volunteers started to come in. The city started to go back to work and so it was time to leave.

The team got turned around on the way home and ended up at Orient Point at the eastern end of Long Island, where they had to take a ferry over to New London.

"We pulled in a line of eight or 10 cars, and we went to buy the tickets. They looked at us. We were all nasty looking, and they asked us if we had just come from Ground Zero and we said yes. They said, 'Your money's no good here.' And everyone clapped and they stopped all the traffic and they pulled us in front of everybody. No one was upset. They were so grateful that we were there," DeLuca said.

When the team returned home they quietly went back to work.

"You know the idea that we went up there and made a big difference. Did we? No. But we did what we were supposed to do. We went up there to help and we got involved. I talked to my brothers and sisters about this and we — the whole country was frustrated, the helplessness was crazy — and we felt that we did something. In some way shape or form it was some kind of an event that helped us to deal with it because we got to go and do it. We didn't do a heck of a lot," said DeLuca.

"The boots that I wore have never been washed because they are still covered with what I call 'sacred dust,'" said Hayden.

MAKING TRACKS

Construction includes steel, concrete

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project — Last week we ended this article describing the rebar, or reinforcing steel, that was placed into the base of the new triangular shaped gate chamber. Let's now continue from that point to describe the construction process. Forms were placed around the base to define its shape and concrete was poured into the forms to the proper level. This created the base of the gate chamber. After the concrete had cured sufficiently, the forms were removed, leaving the base in place.

It is interesting to note that concrete is a material that does not develop its maximum strength initially. It must cure over time to develop its inherent strength. One of the keys to proper curing is to keep the concrete moist. If the surface of the concrete is permitted to dry out the curing process will be hindered and the ultimate strength of the concrete will be lower than it should be and the surface will not be durable. However, this was not a big problem for this project since the tides would come in and wet the newly cast wall each day. Our project required five days of curing before the forms could be removed. After five days, the concrete will reach about 80 percent of its final strength and is suitable for use, so the construction could continue.

The next portions of the gate chamber to be constructed were the two outside walls facing the harbor. Remember, of the three new walls of the gate chamber, the wall facing the Cohasset Harbor Resort parking lot had been completed earlier. The engineering specifications required extensive steel reinforcing to make sure that the walls, which will be exposed to the full force and fury of the harbor water, will withstand the forces of the wave action. The first photo shows the amount of reinforcing steel that was placed inside of the new gate chamber walls. The walls almost look like they would have more steel than concrete, but that was really not the case. This amount of steel is essential and was required by our engineers. You can probably guess that arranging and positioning this much steel was not an easy task. Each rebar piece had to be fit into place and fastened to the adjacent rebar pieces to form a three-dimensional grid work. The fastening was done using plastic or zinc coated wire ties, so that the rebar could not move around as the concrete was being poured.

You may also note in the first photo that there is a large opening at the bottom-right where there is no rebar. And, there is a lighter colored band at the top and right hand edge of that opening. These are wood strips that are a custom portion of the forming, designed to keep the concrete out of the opening when the wall is poured. Other strips will be added to the left hand vertical wall of the opening, as well. This opening will become a six foot high by ten foot wide opening at the bottom of the wall. The new tide gate will be mounted behind the opening. When the gate is opened, water will be able to pass in each direction at its maximum capacity.

Workers prepare gate chamber rebar.

When the gate is closed, no water can pass in either direction. By adjusting the gate the flow can be controlled in either direction.

Forms were necessary to shape the inside surface and outside surface of the walls on either side of the rebar. The forms used on this project were of a modular design. They were steel panels, heavily reinforced so they could withstand the weight of the concrete. The forms were clamped together to achieve the final wall configuration, like an erector set.

The second photo shows the exterior forms after they were put into place and fastened together to form a smooth wall surface. Note the height of the newly formed wall when compared to the size of the worker standing on top of the forms. In fact, the walls extend 15-1/2 feet above the harbor floor. Other forms, identical to these were placed on the inside of the wall to form the inside surface of the gate chamber walls. The distance between the outside forms and the inside forms was 18 inches, the thickness of the new gate chamber walls. Fasteners were placed between the inside and outside forms so that the spacing between the forms would not change under the weight if the concrete that was to be poured between them. The rebar was thus sandwiched between the two sets of forms and ready for the concrete to be poured between the forms. New walls were about ready to be poured.

Little Harbor Project —As you know, Jerusalem Road from Atlantic Avenue to North Main Street has been cold planed. Structure crews will have raised various water, gas, sewer and drainage structures in the road in preparation for paving during this past week. If the weather cooperates, a leveling or shim coat will could have been placed to correct the road contours for proper drainage by the time you read this. Final paving should occur within the next two weeks.

Greenbush —Reminder to all from the MBTA - There will be no Greenbush service on Monday, May 30th, Memorial Day. It will be treated as a no-service weekend day as a result of the tie replacement construction project underway on the shared tracks between Braintree and Boston.

ROWING PROGRAMS

Get out on the water

CMI to offer more learn to row opportunities

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Though this week's rainy days have not inspired much confidence that summer is around the corner, indeed, it is.

For many in Cohasset, summer means the opportunity to get out on the water and take in the advantages of living in a coastal community.

Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) is among several local organizations designed to get residents out on the water in an affordable way. The rowing organization has unveiled a new schedule of programs, several of them aimed to teach beginners the sport.

"Rowing is a sport you can learn and it's a sport where you can get outdoors in this gorgeous setting – and it's a full body workout," said Betts Howes Murray, CMI's new program director.

There has been activity at the boathouse for the past few weeks with high school rowers heading out into the harbor on weekday afternoon. Adult programs start in earnest in the next couple of weeks.

CMI has introduced a two-week, four-session Learn to Row program for $60 to get novice rowers out on the water and learning a new sport.

"The Learn to Row program is for people afraid to commit to a whole summer before they know if they like it or can do it physically," Murray said. "It's a low risk kind of program."

The hope is the people who try it will then sign up for the remainder of the summer. Complementing this program is an eight-week program geared toward college students and beginner rowers. The classes will be in the morning, so students can come before their summer jobs.

"We're calling it the 'lose the Freshman 15 and learn a new sport' program," Murray said, laughing. Beginner and experienced programs are available for kids entering grade eight through 12, as well as for adults.

CMI has three four-seater boats, all of which are very stable and suitable for ocean rowing. The four rowers must work in unison to get the boat moving across the water. A fifth person, a coxswain, steers the boat and coaches the rowers along the way.

"It's the ultimate team sport. The boat goes faster when everyone works together," Murray said.

The CMI boathouse is located at the end of Parker Avenue, tucked in between the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) and the Cohasset Sailing Club. Limited parking is available on Parker Ave., so participants are encouraged to park on Government Island/Lightkeepers' Residence and walk over.

The boathouse itself dates back to 1855 and its first use was a maritime life saving outpost. The Selectmen designated the Cohasset Maritime Institute as custodian of the boathouse that sits on the former Hagerty property back in 1994; a year after the town purchased the building. With help from Community Preservation funding the boathouse was refurbished in 2010.

Murray, who rowed in college, said rowing has broad appeal.

"Any age can learn to row. Any fitness level can participate," Murray said. CMI members row for different reasons as well. "There are those who do it for fitness and there are those who do it to get out on the ocean."

Although rowing uses the entire body, it is considered a low impact activity.

Most of CMI's members are from Cohasset, but some do come from neighboring towns.

CMI is hosting an open house on Sunday, June 5 from 10 a.m. to noon in particular for the Learn to Row programs (adult and college).

provided in the current year and use a combination of pre-payments from fiscal 2011 and savings through retirements as an offset to close the $330,000 gap.

School Committee members voted Wednesday night to do more than that. Before June 30, the schools will purchase about $350,000 in improvements to facilities, technology and learning materials. That amount of money will pay for nearly every item on the school's additional requests that were not initially included in the fiscal 2012.

The list includes new reading textbooks for both Osgood and Deer Hill ($129,442), three snowblowers ($7,197), security cameras for Middle High School ($48,572), 22 computers ($17,903) and digital projectors and document cameras for middle and high school classrooms ($21,850).

"It's something good to do, if we can do it...(with the purchase of these items) there's nothing else we're looking to purchase," interim Superintendent Dave DeGennaro said.

School Committee members also voted to pre-pay special education out-of-district tuition by more than $200,000. Under state finance law, up to three months of estimated special education expense can be pre-paid from the prior year's budget, DeGennaro said. School Committee members said they wanted to pre-pay as much as possible to this account.

Further, an estimated positive balance of $175,000 is expected in the supplies and materials line item. All that money will go toward the supplies and materials line item in next year's budget.

Asked if at any point this year a freeze was put on the purchase of supplies. DeGennaro said that at some point the superintendent did put a freeze on purchasing, but if the teachers needed something it was purchased.

Both the special education out-of-district tuition expense and supplies and material line items were reduced in the fiscal 2012 budget due to the acceptance of the lower budget number at Town Meeting.

How did this happen?

The past year for the School Committee and its budget has included several unusual happenings and one-time circumstances.

The schools received a stimulus grant, which was able to pay for two students' out-of-district special education tuitions in the amount of $77,000. Part of the contracted service for the curriculum coordinator was paid from this roughly $170,000 grant, as well.

Several positions, including director of curriculum and science and math program supervisor, went unfilled. Superintendent Denise Walsh left the district in April, saving the town three months of salary for that position. Five teachers took maternity leave and several opted for early retirement.

"I really want to stress the unusualness of this year. We were understaffed administratively and we already had to reduce next year's (budget)," said School Committee Chairwoman Helene Lieb.

Savings were found in several line items, include special education transportation ($80,000) due to a collaborative approach with other districts in the region.

In addition, over the past several years the School Committee has been able to pre-pay both special education out of district tuition and supplies and materials.

At the close of fiscal 2010, the school department was able to pre-pay special education tuition toward fiscal 2011 costs in the amount of $204,172. Essentially, because there was little change in the demand for special education services, DeGennaro said, this amount has been carried over into the next fiscal year, and $216,000 is going toward pre-payment of special education tuition.

DeGennaro said the state allows this type of pre-payment because of the uncertainty inherent in special education.

"In special education, you really don't know what's going to happen. A child could move into the district and the schools have to by law provide the services (he/she) needs," DeGennaro said.

In the fiscal 2012 budget, $1.3 million, including several offsets such as state funding (circuit breaker reimbursement) and pre-payment from fiscal 2011, is dedicated to out-of district special education tuition.

AQUARION

lund, R-Weymouth, also strongly opposed the proposed rate hike.

Hedlund isn't any more pleased with this proposed increase than he was the last time around. "I'm obviously not happy about it. I think the whole regulatory process needs to be examined. I question whether the DPU is doing its job," he said in a telephone interview. "At this point I am so frustrated that I think the whole arrangement of being served by a private for-profit water company should be looked at."

Hedlund had plans to meet with the president of Aquarion Wednesday as the Hingham Journal went to press. "I hope to have them explain the necessity for this kind of increase," he said. "I feel like Yogi Berra. It's déjà vu all over again!"

Bradley's initial response was that he believes "it's going to be very tough to get this kind of rate increase, as most folks' cost of living is going up and some people's salaries are going down," he said in a telephone interview.

That said, Bradley plans to meet with Aquarion representatives in order to understand their rationale. "I will weigh in with the DPU after I talk with the towns that are involved," he said.

Rates cannot be increased or decreased without the agency's approval. Despite stiff opposition, the DPU ultimately approved the rate hike.

Most of the 2009 increase was attributed to investments totaling $21.4 million that Aquarion had made for water utility infrastructure improvements since 2001 in such areas as increased water supply and replacement of aging and undersized pipes as well as other needed water system enhancements, which amounted to the overall rate hike. The last prior increase was in 2001. Aquarion acquired the utility from Massachusetts-American Water Company in 2002.

The typical family of four uses about 175 gallons of water a day for cooking, washing, and laundry (or about seven full bath tubs'-worth of water), according to Aquarion officials. "If the proposed rates are approved by the DPU, the average total cost to our customers would still be about a penny per gallon, comparing very favorably to other typical household utility expenses," Hibbard stated.

Aquarion has implemented a number of cost-control measures, he said. (These are outlined in the press release.)

"Our commitment to efficiency and controlling costs has resulted in this rate request being $487,000, or 15 percent lower, than it would have been otherwise," Hibbard stated.

Since its last rate adjustment, Aquarion has instituted a Customer Assistance Program, which annually provides eligible Massachusetts customers facing financial hardship with up to $20,000 in assistance in the form of $50 credits per qualifying ratepayer

Public hearings will be held to receive input from town officials, residents, and other interested parties. There will also be an opportunity to submit written comments. More detailed information will be available at a later date. Hibbard anticipates that the hearing process could begin in the late summer or early fall of this year.

"Nobody likes a rate hike, but unlike municipal water companies, we have to ask permission to raise our rates," Hibbard said in a telephone interview. "We are required to open our books and we essentially have to proved to DPU that we need to increase the rates.

"As difficult as it is to have something else go up [during these economic times], the interests of ratepayers are protected during the course of the process," he said.

betical order):

• Richard Brown most recently served as the City Manager in East Providence, Rhode Island from 2006 to 2011. He was the City Manager for New London, Conn. for 14 years. He has other local government experience in Virginia and Alabama. He holds a Masters in Public Administration and is member of the International City/Country Management Association (ICMA).

• Michael Coughlin Jr. is the current Town Administrator in Westport, Mass. and has been there since 2007. He previously held the position of Town Manager in both Northbridge and Southbridge, Mass. Before moving into municipal management he was a private practice attorney and assistant district attorney in Worcester.

• John McAuliffe has been the Town Administrator in Webster, Mass. since 2009. He served as Town Administrator in Wareham for a year and Somerset for 10 years. He has been a member of the Finance Committees in two towns (Holden and West Boylston) and holds a Masters in Public Administration.

• Jeffrey Repp served as the City Administrator in Cumberland, Md. from 1993 to 2011. Before that he was Town Manager in Indian Head, Maryland for five years and other municipal management positions in Ohio and South Dakota. He holds a Masters in Public Administration and is a member of the ICMA.

• Julian Suso is the current Town Manager in Framingham and has been in that community since 2006. Previous to that he held several town management positions in Ohio. He has a Masters in City Planning and is a member of the ICMA.

Two of Cohasset's finalists — Suso and Brown — were also named finalists for the Town Manager position in Chatham on Tuesday night.

The town's search consultant Thomas Groux of Groux and Associates cautioned the Selectmen about the process they are able to enter.

"You will received information, phone calls and anonymous information on these candidates," Groux said. "I just caution you that Google can be a dangerous tool."

Groux said he and the committee have thoroughly vetted the finalists, falling short of a complete background check.

Milanoski added, "These men are movers and shakers. They were willing to make the tough decisions. We looked at what's out there and found that the right decision was made."

Groux said one of the candidates was recently fired and three did not have their contracts renewed.

The Board of Selectmen will conduct the interviews of the five candidates over two nights next week. Three of the candidates will interview on Wednesday, June 1 (Repp at 7p.m., Suso at 8p.m. and McAuliffe at 9p.m.) and two will interview on Thursday, June 2 (Brown at 7p.m. and Coughlin at 8p.m.)

If second interviews are needed or wanted for any of the candidates, the Selectmen have blocked off time on Wednesday, June 8 and Thursday, June 9. They expect to make a decision shortly thereafter.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr thanked the screening committee for its diligent and thorough effort in narrowing the candidate field.

Board of Selectmen chair Ted Carr invited town employees and residents to submit ideas for questions for the five finalists to the Town Manager's office. Questions can be sent to Town Manager administrative secretary Jennifer Oram at jenno@townofcohasset.org, or by mail or in person at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave.

TECHNOLOGY AT SUMMER CAMP

It's no longer about whether technology is in use at summer camps—it's about how. All camps depend on technology to some extent—it's often in the background of the camp experience.

The American Camp Association, New England has compiled a list of technology that is readily used at many summer camps:

• Email: Some camps encourage families to send camper email and many camps have put into place intricate systems to receive and deliver email messages.

• Photos and Streamed Video: Creative use of technology to minimize interruption of the child's experience has increased in recent years. Some camps post photos or streaming video content on their websites. This gives parents the information they want while it allows campers to experience safe independence.

• Fax Machines: Most camps deliver fax messages from parents. Sometimes it's possible to send messages from campers back to their families.

• Phones: A caution to parents and kids, though: cell phones in general are not encouraged for camper use; but some full and half season camps (4-8 weeks) offer organized use of land lines for camper communication.

Having the opportunity to experience, unplugged, a summer community of children can be tremendously beneficial for children.

GIRLS TENNIS

Great season for young squad

Girls head into tournament with lots of confidence

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Just looking at their record might not tell a lot about this year's Cohasset girls tennis team.

Yes, an 11-6 mark with just two matches left before tournament time is good, but just how good is that?

Of Cohaasset's six losses, three were against Scituate, Hingham and Notre Dame Academy, all upper division powers.

Scituate is currently undefeated and Hingham is also a top-tier team in Division 2.

Two of the other losses were to Norwell. Those were Cohasset's only losses in South Shore League play, and both were 3-2.

"Don't be deceived by the overall record," Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan said. "It's not an indictment of how we're playing. We started the season playing big games. We had Scituate and Hingham (twice) and Notre Dame. After our first eight matches we were 4-4. Then we won a few."

Meehan said the idea with the tough early schedule was to get prepared for postseason.

"We could have played an easier schedule and gone 18-2 easily," she said. "But we're playing to get ready for the tournament. We want to be primed and ready to compete. We have a super, young team. Early on we had to get them some match experience."

Leading the way for Cohasset have been their four captains, seniors Colby Smalzel and Charlotte O'Callaghan along with juniors Caitlin DeAngelis and Erika Botts.

Cohasset has an impressive roster with more than 30 players, including 15 varsity.

All of the varsity players have found some playing time during the season, and many were on the JV last season.

Meehan has a no-cut policy for the tennis team. That

Skippers win South Shore League title

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team struck fast and never let up, and that was the difference on Friday night as the Skippers beat Norwell 12-4 to claim the South Shore League title at home.

The Skippers did everything they had to in this one, getting goals from six different players, good defense and a quick start on the way to the win.

Jack Carrier and Thomas Flibotte notched goals in a one-minute span early in the first quarter as Cohasset raced to a 4-0 lead before Norwell scored.

Carrier and Flibotte both finished with three goals, joining Kyle Livingstone in the hat trick club on the night.

Alex Kinnealey, Jake Kissick and Drew Nahill all scored as well.

Cohasset led 7-2 at the half and was never in trouble, dominating play from start to finish.

"We're playing good team offense," Cohasset coach Tom Flanagan said. "We're getting great shots, making the extra pass and playing well defensively. This was a great win, a great team win."

Matt Dromeshauser scored twice for Norwell and Shawn Tierney and Riley Sheehan added goals for the Clippers.

Flanagan said getting the

The end is near

Tournaments starting soon

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The regular season is just about done, as this story is written, two Cohasset teams, baseball and boys tennis still had big games left.

Thursday, the baseball team and tennis teams hosted Abington with South Shore League titles on the line.

Earlier this season, Cohasset beat Abington at Abington in both sports on the same afternoon.

The baseball team slipped a bit on Wednesday with a 6-5 loss against East Bridgewater in extra innings, dropping the Skippers to 13-2 in the SSL.

Heading into Abington, Cohasset was focused.

"Clearly the boys were a disappointed with the loss," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said about the East Bridgewater loss. "But they always rebound and I am expecting no less. They are a determined bunch that really have good heads on their shoulders. The keys to today's game will be the same formula as in the past. Good pitching, solid defense and timely hitting. Abington is clearly going to want to extract a little revenge for the earlier loss, so we really need to be ready to squelch any and all momentum they may try to establish."

Afanasiw said his team wasn't looking ahead yet.

"As for the playoffs, the kids really haven't talked about them yet," he said. "They really want to take care of business in the league first."

The baseball team fared well in the League's All-Star voting.

helped team depth over the years and will do the same in the future.

On the courts, Meehan has made changes in then lineup to get players rest or some action, but the basics have been in place.

"We have been spreading the wealth across the board," Meehan said on the ride home from a 4-1 win at Harwich.

At Harwich, freshman phenom Gabrielle Lemoine played first singles and picked up a 6-1, 6-1 win.

"She's having a huge year, Meehan said. "Against Carver yesterday she went three sets. She's very strong and getting even stronger. It's amazing the way she can dictate play as a freshman. It will be a delight to watch her the next few years."

Also in the Harwich win, Meredith Spoffors won 6-3, 6-3 and in doubles Caitlin DeAngelis and Kate Sookiasian won 6-0, 6-2. Emma Smith and Sara Corry also won.

In third singles, Jen Mullin lost in three sets, but impressed Meehan.

"Jen played a beautiful game," she said. "She did a great job. I think for match point, the ball was hit about 45 times."

Most of the time, junior Hannah Rawson has played in the No. 1 singles slot.

"Hannah played first doubles last year," Meehan said. "She's had a great season. Her only league losses were to Norwell. She's improved and improved as the season has gone on.

"Against Martha's Vineyard she came back and won for the whole team. She was the last one still playing and it was 2-2. Hannah buckled down and got it done."

Lemoine has had most of the action at No. 2 doubles, and Emma Smith has played No. 3 singles regularly.

Smith has had a few big games.

"In our win over Ursuline she was out long after everyone was done," Meehan said. "She won 6-1 in the third. She has a big, booming serve and can play singles and doubles. It's nice to have such depth on the team."

On the doubles front, Meredith Spofford and Kate Sookiasian have clicked as a team, as have DeAngelis and Botts.

In the MIAA Individual Tournament, DeAngelis and Botts beat the Murphy twins who were in the South Sectional Finals."

Smalzel and Botts have also played some doubles.

Other members of the varsity are junior Colleen Ryan, sophomores Sara Curry, Giselle Hart, Annie Robinson and freshmen Brianne Crough and Caroline Evans.

"We've had really solid play from all these girls," Meehan said. "We're close."

Meehan feels that Lemoine could be a difference in playoffs, especially if they face Norwell.

"In league play we almost got them," Meehan said. "Gabrielle almost won against Norwell, and since then she's had a few big matches. Against Carver she went three sets and pulled it out. That felt like a turning point."

Cohasset played at Abington on Thursday and finish the season with a 2:30 p.m. home match against Mashpee on Friday.

After that, playoffs are next.

"We're hoping to go in as a 13-6 team," Meehan said Wednesday. "We'd like a good seed. We're peaking at the right time. We're excited to go to into the tournament."

If you get to a match, keep an eye out for any of the players, who are selling raffle tickets for a fundraiser for the team. The raffle prize are two front row seats to a Red Sox game at Fenway Park.

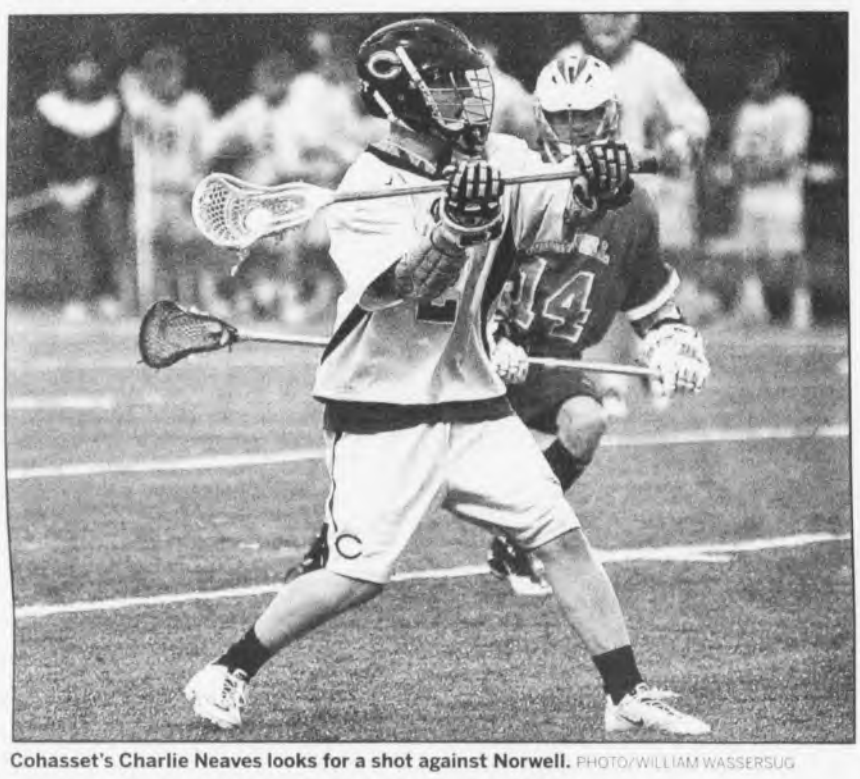
Timothy and Shane Haggerty were all named League All-Stars.

The tennis team headed into Thursday's slate with a 10-1 record in the SSL and were battling for a third straight league crown.



The boys lacrosse team won the title and the girls were close and are playing very well as they head into the tournament.

In their last few games, the girls beat Pembroke 22-6 on Monday and beat Arlington 18-11 on Saturday.

Monday was also Senior Day and Cally Althotz, Kelsey Earler, Eliza Kinnealey and Olivia Murphy were honored before the game.

lead quickly was the plan.

"We're playing hard and fast," he said. "At the beginning of the game we scored before their defense could blink. After the Marshfield loss we've been playing uptempo. We're fast and running."

With the faster style, the scoring has been spread out.

"We have six guys that can shoot the lights out," Flanagan said. "Let teams try and stop us. We're playing hard and fast. We play at a high pace and take no breaks. This team is hungry."

For Flanagan, who is in his first season as head coach at Cohasset, winning the title was important.

"The league title was one of our goals," he said. "We knew it was something we could do."

The game was Senior Night for the Skippers, and the seniors did their share.

"Andrew Whitney is one of our seniors," he said. "He played really well tonight. He's a kid who always works hard. He had a good game."

Flanagan had praise for a number of players.

"John McGoldrick is playing well on the attack," he said. "Jack Carrier has been outstanding. Jack is a special player. It's an honor to coach him. It's an honor to coach all these guys."

A big help for Cohasset has been Livingstone, who missed several games with an injury.

While he was gone, Cohasset had to make some changes and began to lean on Flibotte a little more than they wanted to.

That, along with the loss to Marshfield, prompted the change to the uptempo game.

With Livingstone back, and Alex Kinnealey winning draws, the offense is more deadly and unpredictable.

Cohasset closed the regular season with a tough one, losing 14-8 at Lincoln-Sudbury.

The Skippers enter the postseason with a 15-5 record.

Last season, the Skippers finished the regular season 16-2 before winning the Div. 3 State Championship.

The Skippers should be a threat for another serious run.

Cohasset's losses have been to 18-0 Div. 1 Marshfield, 15-3 Hingham, 14-3 Duxbury, 15-2 Dover-Sherborn and 9-8 Lincoln-Sudbury, a team who also played a vicious schedule.

Seedings are expected to be announced today.

Jack Murphy PHOTO/MASS MARITIME ACADEMY

Cohasset's Murphy honored by Pilgrim League

Murphy earns spot on 2011 Pilgrim Lacrosse League All-Conference Squad

Massachusetts Maritime freshman goalie Jack Murphy, who helped lead Cohasset to a State Title last year, was named to the 2011 Pilgrim Lacrosse League all-conference squad in a vote by the league's six coaches, while seven of his Buccaneer teammates were recognized for their work in the classroom with selection to the league's 2011 All-Academic team.

A native of Cohasset, Mass. and a graduate of Cohasset High School, Murphy started 15 of 16 matches in net for Head Coach Rory Deegan's crew, as he posted an 11.09 goals against average to go with 195 saves for a .575 saves percentage while collecting 50 ground balls and causing 10 turnovers. Murphy, who played 779 of a possible 1,020 minutes in the Buccaneer cage, also registered a goal and an assist on offensive for Massachusetts Maritime during his rookie campaign.

Murphy was one of seven Buccaneers honored with selection to the Pilgrim Lacrosse League All-Academic team, as student-athletes who have achieved a minimum 3.25 grade point average and are significant contributors are eligible for selection. The Buccaneers posted four overall victories in Deegan's first season at the helm, including a shutout triumph over Wheelock to go with wins over Emerson, Becker and Regis.

FESTIVAL OF THE ARTS

Like mother, like daughter

By Jennifer H. McInerney
Special to the Mariner

Jody Regan poses with her daughter Katie Aucella, 15, next to her painting, which was chosen to be this year's poster for the upcoming Festival of the Arts. In the background is a painting by Jody's mother Joanne, which was chosen to be the poster for the festival 20 years ago. STAFF PHOTO/MARK GARDNER

Fifteen-year-old Katie Aucella shows off a photograph of her mother Jody with Jody's mother Joanne.

According to the familiar proverb, "Every picture tells a story."

This Memorial Day weekend, as the North River Arts Society celebrates its 35th annual Festival of the Arts, a daughter's painting continues the story that started on her mother's canvas 20 years ago.

Each year, the arts organization selects one of its member artist's paintings to represent the festival and reproduces it in poster form as an enduring souvenir. This year, the NRAS bestowed that honor on Jody Regan, a longtime member of the Marshfield Hills-based arts organization, for her festival-themed oil painting, "That's Entertainment."

"I am especially moved because this year also marks the 20th anniversary of my mother's pastel painting, 'The Spring Art Festival,' being chosen as the festival poster," she said.

Jody's mother, Joanne F. Regan, also an accomplished artist and longtime NRAS volunteer, died five years ago at the age of 77. In addition to being her mother and a prolific painter, Joanne was Jody's first and most influential teacher.

"My mother was always painting," she said. "She raised five children and we were very well taken care of. I honestly don't know how she did it."

Though she grew up in the embrace of her mother's artwork, Jody did not consciously set out to follow in her mother's footsteps as an artist and teacher. In high school and college, she took art courses but earned her degree in mathematics from Boston College. She wrote software programs in Washington, D.C., for a decade before ultimately pursuing her artistic instincts. At age 30, Jody returned to Massachusetts and shortly after asked if she could join her mother's four-person studio class as a "regular" student.

"I wanted her to treat me just like the other students," she says. "The only difference was I had to take her trash out. Plus, she made me dinner — the others didn't get to stay for dinner."

In 1991, the year reproductions of her mother's swift-selling festival poster sold out, Jody moved to Marshfield with her husband and almost immediately joined her mother as an active NRAS volunteer.

When her mother retired from teaching in 2000, Jody sought guidance from the instructors at the North River Arts Society. She studied first with Diane Scott and then John Kilroy. Then, about seven years ago, Kilroy asked her to consider applying for an opening as a beginning oil-painting teacher for NRAS.

"It hadn't crossed my mind to teach painting, but I trusted him," Jody said. "At the beginning, I was a little clunky, but I worked really hard at teaching painting and getting the information into my students' heads to help them succeed. It's very rewarding to me."

At about the same time, she began teaching math at South Shore Charter Public School in Norwell. She now teaches there four days a week and one day at NRAS.

With her busy teaching schedule, Jody's not able to paint full-time like her mother did, but she makes a point of designating time specifically for painting. She creates most of her paintings on location and enjoys working outside year-round. On the most bitterly cold days, she has been known to paint in her car with a canvas clamped to her steering wheel.

She currently teaches a weekly intermediate-level plein air class called "Oil Painting Beyond the Classroom." On a recent Friday afternoon, Jody and her students set up their easels along Pier 44 in Scituate, focusing their artistic attention on a different aspect of the scene in front of them — an expanse of empty piers ready for boats to moor for the season.

As an artist, Jody approaches her paintings somewhat strategically, identifying a focus, or central idea, that she will support through her design.

"My idea for today's painting was to take the viewer out to the distance for a look at the quiet in the foreground of the empty harbor and then the hubbub in the distance, and the promise of summer ahead," she says, pointing toward the water. "My painting today is about waiting, anticipation."

With summer just around the corner, Jody is preparing to teach once again at the NRAS Summer Art Studio for children. Her daughter Katie Aucella, 15, will join her and serve as an assistant. This will be Katie's 10th summer in the art studio; she started at age 5 as a student. Katie, who enjoys guitar, singing and theater, has also volunteered at the annual Festival of the Arts since she was a child.

"I'm really proud to be a part of the legacy of my grandmother and mother," Katie says. "They're both well known within the North River Arts community, and so there's great respect for them."

Katie is also thrilled her mother's painting has been selected for this year's festival poster and it will hold a special place in the NRAS annals, alongside her grandmother's poster painting.

The original tableaus of "The Spring Art Festival" and "That's Entertainment" hang in her home, so Katie has had ample opportunity to study the similarities and differences between them. The subject of both paintings is the NRAS Festival of the Arts in full swing, but they are painted from different vantage points, in different mediums and in each artist's signature style.

"In my mom's painting, I love the shadow play on the people and the tent," Katie said. "My grandma's painting is much calmer, and I love her use of pastels."

Every year, Jody can be found behind her easel on Old Main Street, capturing on canvas the energy and excitement of the annual Festival of the Arts.

"My idea for this painting was to bring the viewer into the pageantry of the festival," she said. "As a viewer, what you find is that there's a clown under the tent, but he's not dominant; it takes a minute to find him. That's what I was going for: that moment of discovery."

For Jody, discovering the joys of painting and teaching later in life has given her a new appreciation for her mother's dedication and tireless work ethic.

"The more I learn about painting, the more I admire her," she said.

And, while she's honored to share the festival poster distinction with her mother, Jody said, "It's bittersweet. I miss my mother and I feel like she went away too young. She never got to see where my art has taken me and where it's going to continue to take me. Sometimes I still want to ask her questions."

Joanne Regan's memory lives on, not only through her paintings, but also through her family's continued involvement in the arts organization that meant so much to her. Jody sponsors the Joanne F. Regan Memorial Award for Composition, awarded each year at the festival.

"My daughter and I are continuing my mother's legacy with the North River Arts Society," Jody concludes. "I honor my mother through my association with NRAS, and feel great joy that her granddaughter is discovering herself as an artist here."

The North River Arts Society's 35th annual Festival of the Arts opens Friday night, May 27, with a gala preview party, and continues on Saturday and Sunday, May 28 and 29, with juried art, photography, and sculpture exhibits, live entertainment, children's arts and crafts, artisan booths and more. The event, which takes place in Marshfield Hills Village on Old Main Street, is free and open to the public. For information, visit northriverarts.org.

LIFE AT CHS

Final column, lots of news

NATALIE DIGNAM

This is my last Life at CHS! First off, I had a lot of fun writing this article! I learned a lot about CHS and also the things that are important our school and community. Thanks to all those people who helped me along the way (you know who you are, you got a lot of late night phone calls about band).

Anyway, the new Life atCHS reporter will be... (drum roll please).. Olivia Franklin!

But before I get ahead of myself, Arts Night last Thursday was a huge success. Congratulations to Ashley Howard for receiving the John Phillip Sousa Award, a national award given to promising musicians each year. Also congratulations to Logan Pratt for receiving the fine arts teacher award for band, Tara Goodwin for receiving the drama award, Emily Toomey for receiving the fine visual arts award, Alex Kinnealey for receiving the Jazz Band award, Eliza Kinnealey, Imani White, and Carly Martin for receiving the chorus awards, and finally all senior band and chorus members for receiving recognition.

Also, thank you to Mrs. Moriarty, Mr. Marks, and Ms. Berkowitz for putting together Arts Night. This is the last week for seniors, so good luck underclassmen with those five snow days! The Senior Salute edition of the Spinnaker came Thursday! A senior BBQ was on Thursday in the courtyard, but that was only the beginning night of the festivities. Prom will be this Friday and will begin on the common at 6 p.m. Graduation will be held on June 4th at 1:30. to 3:30 p.m. at the Music Circus. This year, Mr. De Gennaro, the Cohasset school district business manager, will be giving a speech in place of the superintendent (formerly, Denise Walsh). Emily Toomey will be giving a speech as Valedictorian and Mike Monaco and Sam Green will be giving a speech together as our class' two tied Salutatorians, along with our class president Chris Quebec. Congratulations Class of 2011 and thank you to all the readers of Life @ CHS, enjoy your summer!

BRIEFLY

Forum on 21st Century Education in Cohasset Schools

The second in a series of education forums will be held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on May 31, at 7p.m. in the Meeting Room. This forum will focus on the financial concerns that will impact Cohasset's Schools moving forward into the future. The panel will discuss how the demands for educating students in the skills needed for success in the 21st Century will require a community commitment.

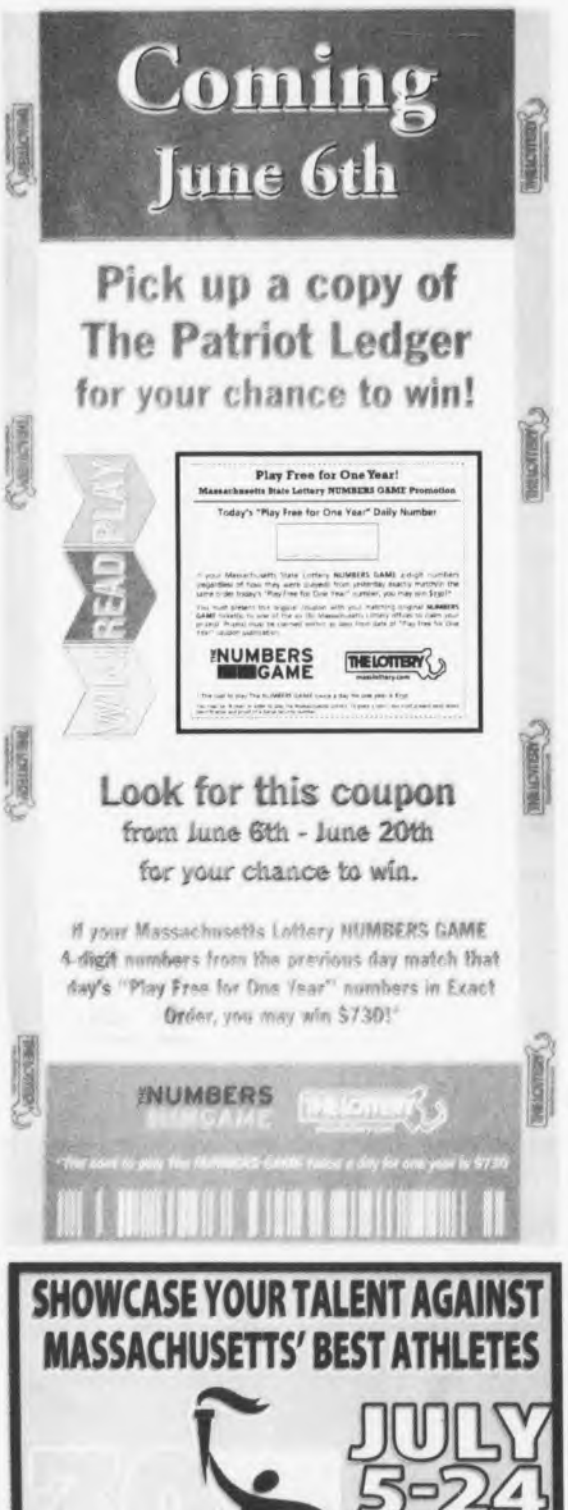
Four key aspects to be discussed will be: teacher training, Massachusetts State Standards, assessments and accountability. These areas will need to be continually improved in order for Cohasset's students to meet the needs of a global economy. Panel participants include Betsy Connolly, a Cohasset resident, an educator for 38 years, and a current school administrator in Hingham Public Schools. Also on the panel will be Cohasset School Committee Member, Dr. Paul Schubert. Dr. Schubert is the liaison to the Cohasset Education Foundation and is on the legislative sub-committee of the School Committee.

Please join us for an interesting and informative evening.

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee as a community service is sponsoring this forum. They sponsored a forum in March as well on Massachusetts Bullying/Cyberbullying Law.

French exchange students seek Cohasset families

The Scituate-Sucy Sister City Committee, an outgrowth of the Scituate-Cohasset-Sucy (High Schools) French Exchange, is seeking host families in Cohasset and Scituate for a small group of French high school students who will be spending a few weeks in these towns this summer.



The main group of 12 will be here from July 10-24 and participate in English classes, cultural excursions, and recreational activities. An additional three students will come independently at a mutually agreed upon time over the summer. You do not need to speak French to host one of these students, nor do you need to have a high school student in your household. You will enjoy learning about life in Sucy, France and make connections there, which could lead to further exchanges in the future. To volunteer, contact Beth Marat at bmarat@cohassetk12.org as soon as possible.

Cohasset SEPAC June wrap up meeting

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 6, 2011

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Lots of possibilities begin to open up by midweek. Some seem more appealing than others. But wait for more facts to emerge later on before you consider which to choose.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Bravo to the determined Bovine. While others might give up, you continue to search for answers. Expect your Taurean tenacity to begin paying off by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might want to consider stepping back from the task at hand for a while. This could help you get a better perspective on what you've done and what still needs to be done.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your keen Cancerian insight should help you determine whether a new offer is solid or just more fluff 'n' stuff. The clues are all there, waiting for you to find them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Being ignored is difficult for any proud Leo or Leona. But pushing yourself back into the spotlight might be unwise. Instead, let things work themselves out at their own pace.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Trying to uncover a colleague's secret under the pretext of showing concern is ill-advised. Control your curiosity in order to avoid raising resentment in the workplace.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to hear good news about a loved one. Also, be prepared for some changes in several family relationships that could develop from this lucky turn of events.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some surprises are expected to accompany a number of changes that will continue through part of next week. At least one could involve a romantic situation.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be upset by some of your critics. But most of your associates continue to have faith in your ability to get the job done, and done well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace goal that suddenly seems out of reach is no problem for the sure-footed Goat, who moves steadily forward despite any obstacles placed in his or her way.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Uncertainty about who is right and who isn't might keep you from making a clear-cut decision. Wait until you know more about what you're being asked to decide.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Be careful to keep your emotions in check when dealing with a demanding personal situation. You need to set an example of strength for others to follow.

(c) 2011 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have an extraordinary ability to rally people to do their best. You would be a treasure as a teacher.

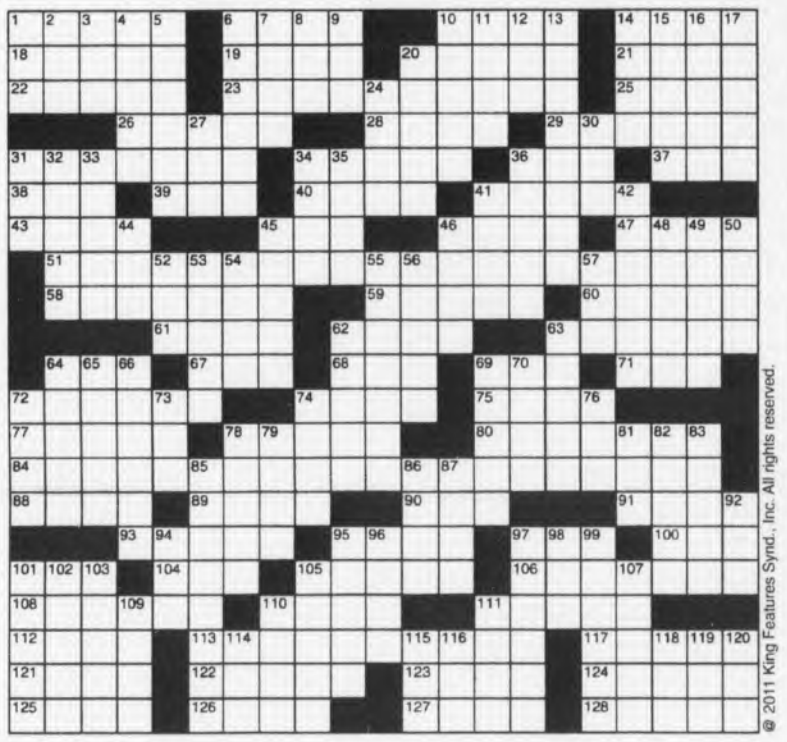
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:



Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Health insurance

Health insurance for town employees comprises almost 10 percent of the budget — and those costs rise substantially every year.

With changes to the way health insurance is negotiated within municipalities and unions likely coming down the pike from the state legislature, the town and unions have taken steps to seek an alternative health-care plan.

A committee made up of union representatives have recommended a new plan that could save the town roughly $300,000 in next year's health insurance costs.

Class of 2011 gets diplomas Saturday

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Together is better.

For the Cohasset High Class of 2011 this is an apt motto.

Together the 89 graduates who will receive their diplomas this Saturday have been able to accomplish much. Together they have been part of state championships, honors on the stage and other creative endeavors, worked to help others, and got the job done, whatever that job may

Parade, flags, speeches honor fallen veterans

By Nancy White
Nwhite@wickedlocal.com

NASA astronaut and US Navy Captain Stephen Bowen returned to be part of Cohasset's Memorial Day observance for the first time in 29 years.

But, most strikingly, he noted that not much has changed.

Dozens of veterans still come out in uniform to march in the parade.

Cohasset High students still march and play patriotic tunes.

Young children still try to grab the brass from the gun salutes along the parade route.

Families still came out in the hundreds to honor those who have fought for this country and those who have made the ultimate sacrifice.

At one point during his keynote speech, Bowen asked those veterans present to raise their hand if they volunteered to serve their country. Attendees looked toward the veterans and saw a sea of hands.

"For 40 years this country has had an all volunteer force...because these men and women recognize how

WHAT'S THE PROBLEM?

Measles scare prompts health advisory

By Steve Bobo | Special to the Mariner

What's the problem? This week, the Board of Health received information that a suspected measles case has been reported for a child in Cohasset. The child attends South Shore Community Center Nursery School. On Thursday morning, Public Health nurse Mary Goodwin said the testing results for measles came back negative. It wasn't measles after all. Yet, statewide there has been a significant rise in measles over the past year.

Advisory for residents: The Department of Public Health (DPH) has announced a measles advisory following three confirmed cases of measles in Massachusetts since the start of 2011.

What is measles? Measles is a virus that spreads when a person sneezes, coughs or talks. Initially, this virus looks like a cold with a runny nose, cough, high fever and red, watery eyes. A few days later, a red, blotchy rash will start on the face and then spread to the rest of the body.

Prevention: To help protect you against this virus, make sure you have been immunized with two doses of measles vaccine. Also, remember to practice good handwashing techniques and respiratory etiquette. This includes:

EXTRA IN YOUR MARINER

- Cough or sneeze into sleeve or tissue
- Wash hands with soap and water
- Use hand gel sanitizer
- Distance yourself from others if sick
- Use mask if necessary
- Wipe down work space surfaces with disinfectant
- Stay home if you are ill for your protection and others

For more information: Go to the DPH website to find a measles fact sheet. Fact sheets are also available at the Board of Health or at the office of the Town Nurse at 41 Highland Ave.

Osgood principal search re-launched

The search for an Osgood School Principal is still on.

After receiving 13 applications, the search committee chose four applicants to interview. One of the candidates bowed out before the interview, so the committee interviewed the remaining three. The committee's top candidate following the interviews ended up taking another position.

The search committee decided to advertise again to see if there were more potential candidates out there. The deadline for applications is Friday, June 10. The search committee will then re-convene to review the candidate pool.

Interim superintendent Dave DeGennaro said the district has received five new applicants so far.

The School Committee did not oppose advertising for the position again.

"It's important not to rush into anything. It's a very important role," said School Committee chair Helene Lieb.

Welcome reception for superintendent

The Cohasset School Committee is holding a welcome reception for new superintendent Barbara Cataldo on Wednesday, June 15 from 6 to 7p.m. The reception will be held in the Community Room located at the Cohasset Middle High School where School Committee meetings are conducted.

All are welcome to meet and greet with the new superintendent before her official start date on July 1.

The School Committee meeting will follow at 7p.m.

No to Cohasset school choice

The School Committee opted not to allow school choice in Cohasset.

Under school choice, the district can allow a designated number of kids to enroll in the district. The school receives about $5,000 from the state to educate the child.

Interim superintendent and business manager Dave DeGennaro said the average cost per student per year in Cohasset is $13,520.

"We're a pretty small district and (I don't think we should) open us up to school choice when we know the per-pupil cost is not funded by $5,000," said Paul Schubert, school committee member. Schubert also expressed concern about an unknown factor: how the Avalon apartment complex will affect student enrollment numbers.

Paul Ognibene pointed out there is no other school district in the area or benchmark communities involved in school choice.

The School Committee voted unanimously against school choice for the 2011-2012 school year.

Veterans' agent visiting hours

The Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services will be at the Paul Pratt Library, Room 2B, from 6 to 7:45 p.m. Monday, June 6.

Do drop in, or call ahead of time if you prefer. Visiting hours are not only for veterans, but also for spouses/surviving spouses and those concerned with aging parents (veterans/spouses) as well as for general advice. If the aforementioned schedule does not meet your needs, your veterans' agent will welcome you to meet at a convenient location and time, for example, the Library, his home, your home.

Your veterans' agent is Joe McElroy and he may be contacted at 781- 383-0505 or by email at cohjoe@aol.com.

Blood drive

The American Red Cross hopes the residents of Cohasset will take some time out of their busy lives to give the Gift of Life.

A Red Cross Blood Drive will be held on Friday, June 3, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 10 Summer St., from 1:30 to 6:30 p.m. Childcare is available while you donate between 3 to 5 p.m. At this time, donations of all blood types are needed to meet the needs of patients in local hospitals as well as those throughout New England.

In order to give blood, potential donors must be at least 16 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health. Most medications and medical conditions do not prohibit a person from being a blood donor. Donors can give blood safely every eight weeks. To make an appointment to donate at this Blood Drive or if you have questions, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290, the Red Cross Blood Services at 1-800-RED-CROSS or visit www.redcrossblood.org.

Hazardous materials

South Shore Recycling Cooperative is hosting a shared household hazardous waste collection this spring with Scituate and Cohasset at no charge to residents. Materials will be accepted from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on June 18 at the Scituate Highway Garage, 68 Captain Peirce Road.

Bring: Oil based paint and stains, solvents, gasoline, automotive fluids, pesticides, photography and pool chemicals, acids, bases, and poisons in secure, labeled containers.

Residents who turn in a toxic mercury thermometer, thermostat or other mercury item may swap it for a digital thermometer. Sponsored by Covanta at SEMASS.

For more information and directions, call South Shore Recycling Cooperative at 781-329-8318 or go to ssrcoop.info.

POLICE BEAT

Car crashes, jumpers and underage party

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

• Police responded to a three-car, chain-reaction crash on Route 3A near Ridgetop Road between Pond Street and Stop & Shop at 11:06 a.m. on Monday (May 23). The accident occurred during heavy, bumper-to-bumper traffic due to the protest at the Avalon construction site, police said.

A 1997 Chevrolet Malibu that was operated by a 21-year-old Marshfield woman, who admitted to not paying attention, rear-ended a 2000 Toyota RAV4, operated by a 24-year-old Hull woman, police said. The impact pushed the RAV4 into a 1998 Ford Taurus, operated by an 88-year-old Hingham woman.

The Malibu was towed and the 21-year-old Marshfield woman was cited for following too closely on a state highway. The passenger in the Malibu was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries, police said.

• Police responded to a single-car crash at 7:11 p.m. on Friday (May 27) on Cedar Street. A 19-year-old Holbrook man, who said he was unfamiliar with the area, was traveling too fast in his 2000 Chrysler Concord and lost control. He struck a rock, damaging a tire that caused him to cross over the road and damage a fence post and rail and some grass at the Cohasset Golf Club. He was cited for speeding and failure to drive in marked lanes, police said.

• At 7:40 a.m. on Tuesday (May 24), a caller reported running over construction debris in the roadway near Avalon. The caller said a dump truck coming out of the construction site spilled the debris, which he ran over resulting in a flat tire. He was advised to have his insurance company contact Avalon, police said.

• On Thursday (May 19) at about 8:31am, a 41 year-old Scituate woman, who was operating a 2009 Toyota Highlander North Bound on Route 3A near Stop & Shop, rear-ended a 2010 Mercedes Benz ML350 that had stopped for the traffic light in front of Stop & Shop. The driver of the Mercedes, who is 46 years of age and from Scituate was uninjured in the crash however, her 5-year-old son who was a passenger in the Mercedes, sustained minor bumps and bruises — the mother said she would follow-up with her son's pediatrician. There were no transports to the hospital and no vehicles towed. The operator of the Highlander was issued a citation for following too closely on a state highway.

Underage

Five people under 21 are facing liquor possession charges following a party that a young woman threw at her home while her parents were away, police said.

Cohasset police went to 8 Elm Court shortly after 12:30 a.m. Thursday (May 26) after a caller reported hearing yelling and screaming coming from the house for more than an hour, police said.

Lauren E. Joseph, 19, who lives in the house, and who police said threw the party, was arrested on charges of furnishing liquor to minors (under the Social Host Law) and being under 21 in possession of liquor. At her arraignment Thursday morning in Quincy District Court, a judge put her in a youth diversion program. The charges could be dismissed if she completes the program and stays out of trouble.

Three 19-year-old women and a 20-year-old man, who were at the party, will be summonsed to Quincy District Court for arraignment on charges of being under 21 in possession of liquor. Police said they all live out of state.

Card used

A 42-year-old Cohasset woman went to police at 10:38 a.m. on Tuesday (May 24) to report that her credit card company had called to ask if two recent $500 transactions in California were hers. She had her credit card with her; so someone had obtained her credit card number and pin number, police said. She was given an identity theft packet and is following up with her bank.

Jumpers

There is no surer sign that summer has arrived than bridge jumpers on Border Street. This past week's police log is again peppered with reports of bridge jumpers and police dispersing them from the bridge.

While the activity has been going on "forever" and is almost a rite of passage for many teens, the police don't like it because of the potential that someone might get hurt.

Safety concerns are the major reason police discourage bridge jumping. Because kids congregate at the bridge, it often disrupts traffic flow and causes a littering problem. The act of jumping off the bridge is also illegal, according to town bylaws. Willful violation of a town bylaw is an "arrestable" offense.

Grandchildren

Police spoke to a 63-year-old Weymouth grandfather who parked at Tedeschi Plaza and ran into a shop to run an errand, leaving three small, sleeping children inside his vehicle. A concerned caller notified police at 2:27 p.m. on Wednesday (May 18).

Golf balls

At 1:32 p.m. on Thursday (May 26), Cohasset police responded to a complaint from the MBTA about a man wearing a yellow shirt and tan pants walking near the tracks. Police said the 77-year-old Hull man was not in the right away but was near the right of way. He was looking for golf balls and was sent on his way.

Breakwater

Three officers and the harbormaster went in a boat to the breakwater area in the harbor on a report of a large group of kids drinking at 3:41 p.m. on Thursday (May 26). The group scattered when police approached. Beer cans were strewn about.

Summonsed

• A 44-year-old Scituate man's 2007 Toyota Prius was towed following a traffic stop at 6:57 p.m. on Thursday (May 26). The car's registration had expired, police said.

• A 42-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation following a traffic stop at 11:24 p.m. on Friday (May 27). Police said he was stopped after running through a red light at Forest Avenue and N. Main Street. His license had expired. He was cited for unlicensed operation and failure to stop for a red light, police said.

• A 46-year-old Cohasset woman in a 1994 Toyota pickup truck is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation following a traffic stop on Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Police said her license had expired. Her passenger, who had a valid license, was able to drive the pickup so it was not towed, police said.

Geese

The 19-year-old Kingston man operating a 1995 Jeep Cherokee denied swerving to hit a flock of geese at Ripley Road and Sohier Street last Thursday (May 26) at 7:17 p.m., police said. A caller reported seeing the red Jeep intentionally drive off the road to hit the geese. Police gave the man a warning.

Turkey goes wild inside home

Jennifer Joyce was in a bedroom folding laundry as her newborn and 2-year-old sons napped in the sunroom of their Cohasset home Wednesday (May 25) when she heard a tremendous racket.

"There was a boom, then a smashing glass sound. It sounded like GI Joe was flying through one of my windows or like half my house was falling down," Joyce said.

She ran into the living room to find a wild turkey. "I never saw a turkey so big in my life. It was probably 3-feet tall, standing in the room with its wings fanned out hissing at me," she said. She gathered up her children and a phone, went outside and called the police.

Meanwhile, the turkey panicked inside the home, smashing two more picture windows, cutting itself and splashing blood on the floor, walls and furniture. A large glass lamp was destroyed.

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy said he has seen plenty of instances of wildlife getting into homes, but that this was his first wild turkey, and he has never seen any animal cause as much damage. He said this bird, a female, "probably saw its reflection in the window and flew at it."

Murphy used an open umbrella and a blanket to protect himself from the raging bird's claws and beak and eventually herded it out of the house through the same window it had entered. It flew into nearby woods and disappeared.

Joyce saw it leave along with her husband who had returned home with their 5-year-old son and 7-year-old daughter.

Murphy said the outlook for the turkey is not good. "Judging from the amount of blood it lost, it will probably succumb to its injuries," he said.

Insurance to change

Union reps recommend new plan

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

"We understand we need to pay more co-pay, we expect that, we know that and we understand that. We know health insurance is very expensive for the town."
Paul Bilodeau, Insurance Advisory Committee

Health insurance for town employees comprises almost 10 percent of the budget — and those costs rise substantially every year.

With changes to the way health insurance is negotiated within municipalities and unions likely coming down the pike from the state legislature, the town and unions have taken steps to seek an alternative health-care plan.

A committee made up of union representatives have recommended a new plan that could save the town roughly $300,000 in next year's health insurance costs.

In January, the Board of Selectmen voted to form an insurance advisory committee, as outlined in the state's general laws. The committee's charge was to review and make a recommendation for changes in health insurance.

The committee included seven members from different unions within the town and one retiree. The establishment of the committee is the first step the town must take in order to make any changes to town employees' health insurance plans.

At the May 24 meeting of the Board of Selectmen, Paul Bilodeau, chair of the Insurance Advisory Committee, presented the committee's recommendation. Jill Gallant-Shaw, a representative from MIIA (Massachusetts Interlocal Insurance Agency), also presented as she helped to create the recommended plan with the committee.

The recommended plan includes increases in co-pays and could yield about 8 percent, or roughly $300,000 savings over the course of 12 months. The town has set aside $3,135,360 in fiscal 2012 for health insurance line item.

"We understand we need to pay more co-pay, we expect that, we know that and we understand that. We know health insurance is very expensive for the town," Bilodeau said. Other members of the committee were in the audience as well.

Currently, town employees have a $5 co-pay for specialty visits and $25 for emergency room visits. Under the new MIIA plan, specialty co-pays would be $20 for a doctor's appointment and for ER visits, $150 co-pay.

"This plan offers far richer benefits than the (state's) GIC plan and actually brings more savings," Gallant-Shaw said. Other co-pays that are currently provided with no co-pay required, such as inpatient hospital services, MRIs, day surgery, would increase substantially.

"This is a plan that has a significant amount of savings and is a level of co-pay comfortable with the committee," Gallant-Shaw said.

Bilodeau said they talked to several towns and unions who had moved over the state's GIC plan.

"What we found were the people in the GIC were trying to get out of the GIC and others towns were finding ways to avoid going in," Bilodeau said. There are about 20 towns in the entire state in the GIC.

"(The GIC) locks in for three years and they are able to change the co-pays whenever they want...that's a problem (for the unions) and for the town," Bilodeau said.

Other health insurance options beyond the GIC and MIIA plan were explored as well.

"Everyone on committee is very receptive in moving forward with these changes," Bilodeau said.

Selectman Leland Jenkins pointed out the town currently has a $27 million unfunded health insurance liability and wanted to look at a plan that affects both retirees and town employees.

He asked Gallant-Shaw to create a three-tier plan for comparison. A three-tier plan is typically more expensive for families. There are roughly 145 town employees with family plans.

There is a key timing piece to the switch to a new health insurance plan because legislation is being discussed that could mandate municipalities to move into the GIC plan. The town would need to put its own switch to the MIIA plan, or another plan, in motion within the next few weeks.

The Board of Selectmen took the Insurance Advisory Committee's recommendation under advisement and plan to discuss the issue at their meeting on Tuesday, June 7.

If the Selectmen accept the Insurance Advisory Committee's recommendation, the town manager would begin negotiation with each of the town's unions almost immediately.

The members of the Insurance Advisory Committee include Detective Garrett Hunt (of police officers union), Lieutenant William Quigley (of police lieutenant's union), Patricia Lowery (of dispatchers union), Captain Paul Bilodeau (of fire department union), Dr. Ann Thomae and as an alternate, Karen McInnis (of Cohasset Teachers Association), Kristin Norton (library union), Jane Henderson (clerical association) and Steve Wigmore (retiree representative).

WHAT'S THE PROBLEM? By Nancy White | nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Parking issues at Milliken Field

Bancroft Way, a side street off Bancroft Road and near Milliken Field, has routinely been congested during the height of spring sports. As a result, the Selectmen voted to install "No Parking" signs on both sides of the street. COURTESY PHOTO

The problem

Residents of Bancroft Way and Briarwood Lane notified Cohasset Police about ongoing parking issues on their street connected to the many youth sports teams that play in the area. The amount of cars and the way they were parking on the small side street was creating safety issues and could potentially block emergency access to both streets.

Henry Rattenbury, a resident of Briarwood Lane, said the parking situation in the area has grown increasingly worse in recently years. "We're not anti-sports at all, this is just a case of a small area getting more and more congested and we'd like some relief," Rattenbury told Selectmen. In some cases, he has been unable to get out of his driveway. "There's plenty of parking available (a short distance away) at the high school...people just don't use it.

The discussion

Lt. William Quigley, who is the town's traffic safety officer, met with DPW superintendent Carl Sestito, Cohasset High athletic director Ron Ford, and Recreation Director Ted Carroll at Milliken Field to review the issue.

The recommendation

Quigley recommended that Bancroft Way (a small side street off Briarwood, which is located off Bancroft Way) be posted "No Parking" on both sides of the street. "This will allow for unobstructed access for police and fire vehicles attempting to enter Bancroft Way, Briarwood Lane, or the rear entrance to Alumni Field," Quigley wrote in a memo. A replacement to a faded No Parking sign on the gate to Milliken Field was also recommended.

The result

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously in favor of putting up the signs. Temporary signs have already been put up and four to five permanent signs are forthcoming.

Signs at Bates Lane

In a similar situation to the Milliken Field area, traffic from games being played at Beechwood Ballpark is spilling over to nearby Bates Lane. Bates Lane is located off of Doane Street. In some cases, the cars could have severely restricted emergency access to the road and homes. The Board of Selectmen approved the installation of two "No Parking This Side" signs for the road.

Solar power in the spotlight

AEC, schools team up to explore initiative

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

A partnership between the School Committee and the Alternative Energy Committee has been started. The two groups will work together to explore alternative energy options for the benefit of the school and the town.

The first initiative is to look at installing solar arrays on school building roofs, as well as the town's capped landfill off Cedar Street. Both the school department and the AEC are researching the feasibility of solar power in an effort to save the town money on electricity costs.

The schools alone spend about $300,000 in electricity costs for all three buildings each year.

Interim superintendent and business manager Dave DeGennaro has been looking into other school districts that have done similar solar panel installations. In early May he brought forward a consultant's contract to discern if the solar array was feasible. But, the School Committee decided to talk with the AEC before moving ahead with the contract.

DeGennaro and School Committee vice chair Jeanne Astino recently sat in on a presentation at an AEC meeting by another solar company where they found out a feasibility study could likely be done at no cost to the schools.

During the course of the discussion that night several locations were targeted as potential sites for solar power: Cohasset Middle-High School, Deer Hill School and the capped landfill.

The first initiative is to look at installing solar arrays on school building roofs, as well as the town's capped landfill off Cedar Street.

If the solar array is feasible on either or both school roofs the School Committee could rent the roof space to a vendor who would install the solar arrays. They could negotiate to purchase the energy produced at a lower rate than they are currently paying. A similar circumstance could happen at the capped landfill.

Astino said they also found out they have to move quickly to optimize cost savings. There are government incentives available through the end of 2011 for solar installations

"We really have to start immediately," Astino said.

AEC member Rod Hobson said the only way solar power is financially viable is by taking advantage of these grants.

"There are so many different supplements. Payback for solar power is on par with wind, but only for a little while," Hobson said at last week's School Committee meeting.

If feasibility of the solar arrays is found, both the School Committee and the AEC will need to go before the Capital Budget Committee and possibly Town Meeting. The aim though is to install the photovoltaic cells at little or no cost to the town.

Helene Lieb is SC chairman again

The School Committee voted unanimously to have Helene Lieb serve as chairman once again in the coming year.

It was the first order of business at the regular school committee meeting on Wednesday, May 22. Member Linda Snowdale nominated Lieb; it was the only nomination for the position. This is Lieb's third year on the committee and second as chairman.

Snowdale nominated member Jeanne Astino as vice chairman. There were no other nominations and Astino received a unanimous vote for the position.

Member Paul Schubert will serve as secretary on the School Committee.

GRADUATION

have been.

Together they will meet again — perhaps for the final time all in one place — and reminisce over the past 13 years and celebrate the possibilities of the future.

Commencement exercises for the Class of 2011 begin at 1:30p.m., Saturday under the green and yellow tent of the South Shore Music Circus.

The ceremony will include words from Cohasset Middle High School principal Joel Antolini, interim superintendent Dave DeGennaro, valedictorian Emily Toomey, co-salutatorians Sam Green and Mike Monaco and class president Christian Quebec.

Antolini describes the Class of 2011 as "highly motivated, collaborative and driven to succeed."

Salutatorian Sam Green agrees, "we're a very hard-working class that has accomplished unbelievable things over the years, but what really differentiates us is the supportive, collaborative spirit that unites us."

Class president Christian Quebec said his class is one full of "achievers."

"Some of us are headed off to Ivy League schools, we're Eagle Scouts and athletes. We do things outside of the school and have done well inside the classroom as well," Quebec said.

Much of the class, which at 89 students is small even by Cohasset standards, has been together since kindergarten.

"We're very close-knit," said valedictorian Emily Toomey. "Ours is a very much together class. We can talk to anyone in our class without any qualms about it. We definitely have class unity."

The Class of 2011 is the first class to attend Cohasset Middle High School from sixth grade all the way through grade 12.

"We were really lucky; we got to try out all the new buildings," Quebec said.

The class has called upon its diverse interests and talents to succeed in its endeavors. Stereotypes were nearly non-existent, Toomey said, as students were athletes and artists, clarinet players and writers, debaters and leaders at various points during their high school careers.

"We're a really well-rounded class...we're diverse in a bunch of different ways, but we work together well," said co-salutatorian Mike Monaco. For the first time in recent memory there are two salutatorians and they will give a speech together.

Although the Class of 2011 will leave behind the safe haven of Cohasset in August and head off to colleges and opportunities throughout the country, the great beyond is exciting.

"It will be nice to be a part of a new student body...and open our eyes to new perspectives and great exciting opportunities," Toomey said. "The next step will be about specializing in our interests and about what each of us wants to do."

To be sure, the Class of 2011 will always have each other and their years together.

"I'll remember all of the individuals that make the Class of 2011 great — their character, their talents, and the conversations and experiences we've shared over the years...I can't wait to see what everyone does with their lives and what I do with my own," Green said.

Soldiers stand at attention with their weapons during Cohasset's Memorial Day Observances held at Veterans Memorial Park Monday.

Bowen delivers the main address at Veterans Memorial Park.

MEMORIAL DAY

important it is to defend this incredible country," Bowen said.

Bowen said as a Cohasset High student he carried the sousaphone in the marching band — and through that experience began to understand the true reason for Memorial Day — to remember the fallen.

"I may have seen the entire earth all in one big blue ball, (yet) standing here in this small town of Cohasset is where I learned what was important, where I learned the individual sacrifices of these families are really what makes us a strong, proud and great nation," Bowen said.

Bowen's return to Cohasset was one of the many highlights of the well-attended weeklong Memorial Day observances. Across the street from the Veterans' Memorial Park was the fifth annual Field of Honor where hundreds of flags stood, each in honor of a veteran. A Cohasset fire engine flew a large American flag to top off the breathtaking display. A brisk breeze made the sea of flags even more impressive.

Steve Wigmore, Commander of the American Legion, welcomed everyone to the ceremony on Monday, shortly before noontime. He said the Memorial Day observances and the town's support for them gets "better and better each year."

He thanked the many veterans who donned their uniforms and marched proudly down Elm Street despite the humidity.

"They are the greatest bunch of guys in the world. They come out each and every year," Wigmore said.

Deirdre Wigmore, president of the American Legion Auxiliary, asked everyone to thank a veteran for their service.

"Memorial Day is about these veterans than hot dogs and hamburgers," she said.

Frank MacDonald, Commander of the Massachusetts American Legion, noted that in the past 10 years the sanctity and true reason for Memorial Day has returned.

"Something changed the way America feels about its heroes. Our greatness lies in our ability to honor, cherish and appreciate those who have died in the service of our country," MacDonald said.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr asked those in attendance to think of those from our country and town who find themselves in harm's way and pray for the safe return home.

The Rusty Skippers, Cohasset High band and singer Lilly Sestito provided music throughout the ceremony.

Reach the Beach

Cohasset moms run 200 miles in relay race

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

In 29 hours and 30 minutes a group of 12 Cohasset moms ran across the state from Wachusett Mountain to Horseneck Beach in Westport — a total of 201.4 miles.

They traveled in two minivans, each stuffed to the brim with seven women and all their stuff.

They ran in the middle of the night and in some of the most rural areas of Massachusetts. They got little sleep and some struggled through injuries.

But, the group says, they wouldn't trade the experience for anything.

"The whole thing was amazing; it was more than I ever expected," said Katie Lord Naples, one of the team members.

The group took part in the Reach the Beach Relay Challenge as a 12-man team calling themselves "Where's Mom?" The group put aside their motherly duties overnight to be a part of this endurance challenge.

The way the race works is each team member runs three legs of varying lengths and difficulty in total covering about an average total distance of 15 miles. The members of the team had coordinating outfits: silver sequin skirts worn over running shorts, flower head pieces and t-shirts by Goodwin Graphics.

When the team converged near Wachusett Mountain on Friday morning (May 20) some of the women didn't know each other. The group formed through a variety of connections in an attempt to put together a team of 12 for an event not many people are ambling up to compete in.

But, once they found that group and the race began, a little magic happened. The group says they shared an experience and now a bond that no one can take away.

"As someone who is not a runner, this group totally inspired me. It was very emotional at times," said Jenna McCarthy, one of the van drivers and the town's recreation assistant.

The Where's Mom? Reach the Beach team was comprised of all Cohasset moms. From left, Barbara Stefan, Sarah Charron, Linda Fechter, Michelle Cayer, Kelly Grech, Beth Corry, Susan Franklin, Sue McHugh, Jenna McCarthy, Laura Kennedy, Anna Smith, Katie Lord Naples, Laurie Wimberly and Jen Gallagher. The group laughed together, tried to sleep on parking lot pavement together, and accomplished 200 miles together.

"We had awesome camaraderie," said Barbara Stefan, one of the moms participating. "It was like a slumber party for moms."

Anna Smith, one of the moms participating, said the Relay added a team dynamic to running, which is typically an individual sport.

"This was a team event where you had support – and to do it with a bunch of moms we were so taken care of," said Kelly Grech, another one of the participants. If one of them ended their run with a pain or a blister, the group was quick to converge and help. Similarly, if you had any misgivings about your ability to complete your upcoming leg, it was your teammates that gave you the inspiration and a Red Bull to run all the way.

While the running portion of the race experience was done on your lonesome there was always another team member to greet you at the end with a smiling face.

"The van was your life support," said Linda Fechter. "We decided early one that whatever happens in the van stays in the van."

All the women interviewed post-race break out in laughter at this comment.

"The best part of the this was the dynamics of the girls together," said Michelle Cayer of Cohasset.

"Mentally and physically this was one of the most challenging experiences and doing it with a group of women made it fun," Stefan said.

To top it off, the Where's Mom team placed first in the Women's Masters division.

Coming off the high of completing their first Reach the Beach, the women are already talking about doing it next year. In the meantime, they are planning a post-race get-together to celebrate their accomplishment and new friends.

The members of the Reach the Beach Where's Mom? Team were Beth Corry, Kelly Grech, Linda Fechter, Anna Smith, Sue McHugh, Barbara Stefan, Jen Gallagher, Katie Lord Naples, Laura Kennedy, Laurie Wimberly, Sarah Charron and Michelle Cayer. The drivers of the two vans were Jenna McCarthy and Susan Franklin.

SHERIFF ANNOUNCES

Summer Youth Leadership Academy

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti announces the return this summer of the Youth Leadership Academy in Braintree.

The academy, which is operated by the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, features an aerial ropes course and program that teaches kids the importance of working together and building trust between one another. The academy emphasizes the concept of mutual respect and the idea that people of different backgrounds can reach great heights by working together toward a common goal.

"We get such great feedback from parents about the program," Bellotti said. "Kids have fun and get plenty of good healthy exercise, but more importantly, they learn to make smart decisions and work together as a team."

The Youth Leadership Academy is run by a professional staff and includes talks on bullying prevention and demonstrations on emergency fire safety as well as a demonstration by a Norfolk County Sheriff's Office K-9 team. The issue of bullying is especially important to Bellotti, who serves on a special statewide commission reviewing implementation of Massachusetts' anti-bullying law.

The Youth Leadership Academy is open to children ages 10 through 14 who live in Norfolk County. It will take place in seven separate sessions, each running Monday through Friday, except the first session, that will take place Tuesday through Friday due to the Fourth of July holiday. The first session will begin on July 5, and the final session ends on Aug. 19. It takes place at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Braintree Public Safety Complex at 2015 Washington St., Braintree.

The academy is free, and prospective enrollees will be accepted on a first-come, first-serve basis.

This summer marks the return of the Youth Leadership Academy after a two-year hiatus due to budget constraints.

For more information about the Youth Leadership Academy or to receive an enrollment application, send an email to youth@norfolksheriffma.org or call the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office at 781-751-3501.

OUR VIEW

Serious about solar

Capturing the sun for energy is nothing new.

If you drive around – you might spot the occasional home or structure that has an array of solar panels on the roof that date back to the 1970s.

With that said, it is also clear that the energy crisis is also nothing new.

There were long lines at the gas pumps back in the 1970s and plenty of federal tax breaks for insulating your home or adding other energy-saving measures.

President Jimmy Carter, wearing a sweater, spoke to us from the White House while encouraging us to turn down our thermostats.

We also clearly remember being warned by knowledgeable federal officials at the time that the world had about 30 years of oil left, at the max.

So we find it a little frustrating now these many years later that we still have not solved our energy problems and perhaps are no closer to doing so.

The answer, we can hope, could lie with our youth.

We hope that the partnership being developed between the School Committee and Alternative Energy Committee can blossom into something really good and beneficial.

There is the possibility going forward of installing an array of solar panels on the roofs of school buildings. The result could be savings in electricity costs. The schools alone spend about $300,000 a year on electricity.

If these efforts are successful we could envision a lot of student involvement. Maybe that involvement could be coupled with increased conservation efforts both at the schools and in student homes.

The School Committee and AEC are set to act quickly as government incentives for solar installations are available through 2011.

We are not sure — when or if ever — our dependence on foreign oil sources and our consumption patterns are going to really "do us in" as a nation as we were warned nearly 40 years ago.

But we can hope that it is never too late to start getting serious about alternative energy and better conservation. Getting that going in our own backyard — right here in Cohasset — is as good a place as any to get serious.

Clarification of Raising Cane Campaign

The Social Service League of Cohasset would like to comment on initial feedback about the "Dear Crossing" sign campaign for Willcutt Commons. This campaign is intended to be fun; a first attempt at raising awareness and visibility for this important community effort.

The Dear Crossing signs that many of you have seen at the current Senior Center and the proposed site are meant to engage the community in conversation about the project. Participation in this campaign, as in any fundraising campaign is, of course, voluntary and only one of the many ways of showing support for the future of Willcutt Commons.

We are hoping that Cohasset residents will support the growing needs of our senior citizens in our community and join the fun! We encourage anyone who would be willing to host our signs, raise visibility and start a conversation to call The Social Service League at 781 383 0771. Let's "Raise Cane"! Marita Carpenter, President, The Social Service League of Cohasset, Inc., Supporter of Willcutt Commons

Never support a school override

Do you remember when the School District submitted three override articles because of "critical funding needs?" All three articles were resoundingly defeated thanks to a last minute effort by an ad hoc committee that campaigned against the overrides with the theme "ENUF." Subsequent to the override defeat, the School District "found" huge pockets of undisclosed funds that "averted disaster." Prior to that, the schools insisted that they needed two schools co-located (the Osgood and Deer Hill) to have "a campus" for K-5. Give me a break.

Here we go again, each year, the District asks for more than it needs while other municipal departments "squeak" through the fiscal year. About February of this year, the Town Manager put a "spending freeze (all but absolute essentials)" on the municipal side that I do not believe has ever been lifted. The School District's Business Manager, Dave DeGennaro, is quoted as saying: "...at some point the superintendent did put a freeze on purchasing, but if the teachers needed something it was purchased." The School District budget is the easiest to manage in the town because 80-plus percent of its budget is salaries. The School budget has the same "trick" in it every year; that is, it assumes that there are no savings due to vacancies and hiring lags. When I was on the School Committee, I advocated for a business manager so that the budget process would be more credible. Currently, I volunteer as the Veterans' Agent, "pro-bono," because the town has never funded the position sufficient to attract a candidate for the approximately 800-1000 hours it takes to do the job (without great volunteer help, it would take many more hours). Maddening.

—Joseph R. McElroy, Windy Hill Road

Idealism at Cat Dam

In the welter of words about Inner Little Harbor, let us not lose sight of the basic issue: whether to let ILH regress to its former odiferous state, or to retain the Cat Dam Gates which have transformed it into one of Cohasset's assets. Sure, Cohasset already has many assets, but why should we sacrifice even one on the altar of "naturalism?"

Idealism takes many forms, from assisting nature to make the world a better place, to denying assistance in order to preserve "naturalism." Which makes more sense? Which better serves the residents of Cohasset?

Should we let state agencies, who have no real stake in the outcome, influence which form of idealism we choose?

R. Murray Campbell, 217 Jerusalem Road

Finds 'Dear Crossing' campaign appalling

In response to the article in the May 20-26 Mariner regarding the fundraising campaign for a new senior center, it would be excessively melodramatic to say I was shocked and appalled, but not by much. I've seen signs like this near senior centers in the past, and every time I see one, I find myself thinking Hendrix got off easy, and hope to never grow so old that the youthful next generation can demean and dehumanize me in a deplorable display of disgusting cutesy irony. I suppose if you never give it any actual thought, "dear crossing" could really seem like a cute way of showing affection for our beloved elders, but to actually take any time to think about the construction of the irony present would cause a person endowed with the requisite intelligence to gag. The obvious equivocation on "deer crossing" does nothing less than reduce elderly people to nonhuman animals; it is condescending, and it is unacceptable. But don't take my word for it; from the overwhelmingly apparent omnipresence of Christian Steeplage punctuating the Cohasset skyline, I don't believe it would be far out of line to assume that the majority of mariner readers hold the Ten Commandments to be of some form of moral authority. I ask you: is this really the best way to honor your mother and father?

To anyone who may feel that this response is an overreaction, as I don't wish to risk causing more offense than is necessitated by the issue at hand, I'll allow you to imagine the results of posting signs that cutely deanthropomorphize other minority groups to raise funds for, say, special needs programs, or facilities for inner city teens. How do you think that would work out, really?

This is not to say that I don't think raising money for a new senior center is a worthwhile cause; I'd be happy to give a few bucks, but I can guarantee whoever may be concerned, if one of these signs shows up on my front lawn, you won't get a penny from me. I hope the rest of this town possesses the same respect for human dignity.—Chris O'Grady, 67 Ripley Road

COMMENTARY

Support for current Cat Cam NOI

E20 GROUP

We are some of the group of Citizens know as the Environmental 20 Group or E20, and we are the majority of the 27 families who live on Inner Little Harbor. Over several years there has been much discussion about Cat Dam, which controls the water level in ILH, and we want to tell you why we have come together and what we are hoping to accomplish through the NOI now before the Conservation Commission.

We have been brought together by our shared interest in Inner Little Harbor. Our properties not only abut ILH, they also extend into it. Most of ILH is actually our property with most of us owning a slice of this private tideland.

Cat Dam was originally constructed over a century ago in order to improve the environment and habitability of the area by reducing odor pollution and improving air quality. Over the past 30 years we have proactively worked with government agencies and the Town to care for ILH, which has resulted in improved water quality and reduced algae blooms. ILH is a beautiful body of water that now supports many species of birds, fish and shellfish in large part due to our effective management of Cat Dam.

Obviously this year the seasonal algae blooms came earlier and in more abundance than we have seen recently. Most likely this is caused by the weather abnormalities of the past

Immense effort to keep work area dry

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

What can't be seen in the first photo is the immense amount of effort that it took to keep the work area dry.

Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project —Today, we are going to focus on a few of the construction details that may not be obvious as we review the construction that has taken place. When we left off last week, the forms were placed and everything was ready for the concrete to be poured into the forms. The first photo shows the concrete being pumped through a hose into the space between the forms surrounding the rebar. As the concrete was being pumped into the forms, mechanical vibrators were lowered into the wet concrete. The vibrators serve two purposes, they allow the concrete to fill any of the voids that naturally occur and the vibration also lets any trapped air bubbles from those voids rise up to the surface.

What can't be seen in the first photo is the immense amount of effort that it took to keep the work area dry. Remember, in this project the water can come from two independent sources, one from storm water in the meadow, the other from the tides in the harbor. The contractor had to deal with both of these sources, at the same time. In the Cohasset Harbor Resort parking lot near Elm Street there were two very large trailer-mounted diesel powered high-capacity pumps. The underground pipes carrying the flow from Jacobs Meadow to the harbor were completely blocked off under the ground and the entire storm water flow was intercepted by these pumps. These pumps transferred all of the water from the meadow directly to the harbor through two high-pressure hoses, by-passing the construction area. That kept the work area dry from the Jacobs Meadow side.

But, what to do about water coming in from the harbor at each tide cycle? How can the contractor keep that water out of the work area? A temporary dam was constructed with large sandbags that completely blocked the harbor channel that would ordinarily drain the flow to the harbor. This dam was used to extend the low-tide working time by holding the tide back until it would rise to the point where it would overtop the sand bags. Other pumps were used to empty any water that would leak behind the dam while the contractor was working in the area.

After the concrete walls had been poured and construction workers no longer needed a perfectly dry area, the sandbags were removed. To give you an idea of how large these sandbags were each bag, as seen in the photo as they were being removed by an overhead crane, weighed over a thousand pounds. So, those are a few of the finer details that enabled the concrete walls of our new gate chamber to be constructed in the midst of a lot of water.

HEALTH NOTES

Now it's Global Climate Change

STEVE BOBO

Cooling and warming conditions appearing locally as certain areas are affected by local conditions such as deforestation and creation of aridity through uncontrolled farming

Most will agree that we've had a suspiciously ill-favored spring from a weather standpoint, and we think we've found the culprit. The National Snow and Ice Data Center has reported a slow start to arctic sea spring ice melt. Most of the northern ice loss during April occurred in the Kara Sea, north of Siberia, and the northern Baltic Sea in Europe. Central Russia saw an early retreat of snow cover, as a result of prevailing warm conditions during the past winter over the eastern Arctic and Russian Siberia. Arctic sea ice declined slowly through most of March and April. While not approaching record lows, as it did in March, the slow decline in both March and April ice extent for the month as a whole helped retain cool conditions for ice in Baffin Bay, between Canada and Greenland. Accordingly, a cool wet spring for New England, and even better, we can blame it on the Russians.

Coincidence No longer is anyone talking about Global warming — now it's global climate change. Last winter, we had people asking "where is global warming when you need it" as the U.S. suffered through the several snowiest winters in years; furthermore, a high level North America snowfall outlook is upcoming in the Winter 2011-2012 season.

And as far as Health Notes is concerned, there's nothing global about it. Cooling and warming conditions appearing locally as certain areas are affected by local conditions such as deforestation and creation of aridity through uncontrolled farming. Such areas can certainly have an impact on local climatic conditions. Only with modern assessment tools such as widespread data correlation assessment and trend analysis, can the effects of man-made conditions determine how far reaching human effects are likely to change our various local climates.

Furthermore, according to the latest forecast from Philip Klotzbach and William Gray of the Colorado State University Department of Atmospheric Science, the 2011 Atlantic hurricane season will be "very active" with five major hurricanes of Category 3 or stronger. "The probability of U.S. major hurricane landfall is estimated to be about 140 percent of the long-period average," said the scientists, who issue several seasonal hurricane forecasts each year "to satisfy the curiosity of the general public and to bring attention to the hurricane problem."

"Information obtained through March 2011 indicates that the 2011 Atlantic hurricane season will have significantly more activity than the average 1950-2000 season." The report was published April 6.

Hurricane season in the Atlantic begins on June 1 and ends Nov. 30. The estimates have determined that 2011 will have about nine hurricanes (the average is 5.9), 16 named storms (average - 9.6), 80 named storm days (average is 49.1), 35 hurricane days (average - 24.5), 5 Major: (Category 3-4-5) hurricanes; average: 2.3) and 10 major hurricane days (average is 5.0) 'We expect Atlantic Basin Net Tropical Cyclone activity in 2011 to be approximately 175 percent of the long-term average."

Similarly, our decisions about health are often made using assumptions formed in a time period in which general conditions may cause us to feel differently. Take for instance: you think you have a fever or chills? Lacking a thermometer, you may reach a different conclusion in summer from that you'd reach if it were snowing outside; the reason Health Notes harps about getting an accurate diagnosis. Many people complain about a variety of ailments if they are depressed about an unrelated condition. This year gives us a chance to compare our feelings about our health during the generally accepted rotten weather conditions we've been having in Cohasset.

But now that the weather has hopefully turned; the Farmers Almanac predicts Summer will be drier and slightly cooler than normal, with the hottest periods in mid- and late June, early July, and early to mid-August. September and October will be much cooler and rainier than normal. Cheer up! Next year local conditions will be worse somewhere else. But it won't be because of Global Warming.

FOR THE RECORD

Leadership can take you far

Leadership at all levels is what's needed to pull us through these trying times, or any times for that matter. Every generation needs leaders.

GREGORY MATHIS

Graduation generally comes with a lot of emotions, whether you're graduating from high school or college.

While we usually associate graduation with accomplishment, elation and excitement, it can be a time of fear and trepidation for those unsure of their next step.

For many high school students, college is that next step. Even the most confident high school student has some concerns about what college has in store for them — both academically and socially. For those not going to college, there's likely anxiety over getting a job in this difficult employment climate.

The college graduate probably shares that same concern about landing a good job that will help to pay off the college debt that has piled up over the years. Graduating from college provides no sure path to success.

But cynicism is never a sure path to success either. While there are certainly challenges, concerns and a tough road ahead for many, there is also great promise and potential.

Graduations may signal an end to a period of time at a high school or place of higher learning, but it really should be looked at as a beginning... hence the term I prefer, "commencement."

As the many high schools and colleges/universities in the area go through commencement exercises for the Class of 2011, there will undoubtedly be time to reflect on past accomplishments and look forward to new endeavors and opportunities.

Graduation speakers will be encouraging you to reach for your dreams, to do the best you can, and to strive for excellence. All good messages, for sure, but one message I will leave you with is what we really need now in our ever-changing world is leaders.

I'm not talking about President of the United States (although that's always a possibility for those who have that aspiration) or even world or corporate leaders, but leaders at the local level — in the community you live and in the local workforce.

Leadership at all levels is what's needed to pull us through these trying times, or any times for that matter. Every generation needs leaders.

So look around as you sit at graduation for the final time with your classmates. See if there's a leader sitting to your left or right, or in front of you or behind you. And search within yourself to see if you have what it takes to be a leader — to stand out from the rest of the crowd as you head into college or the workforce.

No matter what path you take from this beginning point, leadership is a quality that can take you far in your future.

Grow vegetables for the Food Pantry

Food Pantry co-director Jane Corry is encouraging local gardeners to "plant a row" for the pantry. She said vegetables could even be planted in containers, so anyone can participate. Fresh vegetables maybe left at the Food Pantry on Mondays, in a container placed outside the door. The pantry also is open to receiving vegetables and other food items on Tuesday mornings from 8:30 to 9:30a.m. Corry will arrange pick up of vegetables from anyone unable to come to the Food Pantry.

To contact the food pantry call 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Someone will return the call.

A new age of SAT tutors

By Sara Hollingshead
shollingshead@wickedlocal.com

Although Michael Gangemi is currently a sophomore at Vanderbilt University in Tennessee, he is not done with the SATs. Working as an Ivy Insiders instructor, Gangemi will be spending his summer preparing and tutoring high school students for the standardized test.

At the end of June, Gangemi will be teaching the inaugural session of Ivy Insiders in Cohasset and Hingham.

Established in 2003 by Harvard undergraduates, and partnering with Revolution Prep in 2010, Ivy Insiders is based on one belief: the best way for high school students to beat standardized tests is to learn from college students who beat the same tests themselves.

Ivy Insiders hires undergraduates to teach their SAT and ACT prep programs. Gangemi explains, "The SAT has undergone some vast changes in the past five years, so it's vital that SAT prep teachers have taken that test, or else they won't truly know the material that they're teaching. Ivy also only hires students that scored in the 99th percentile, which means that the Ivy Insiders teachers have demonstrated a clear understanding of the exam, and will be able to pass that on to students."

As a student who scored in the 99th percentile on the SAT, a 2270 (out of a possible 2400), Gangemi hopes "the fact that I've always had a knack for standardized tests, the strength of the Ivy Insiders program, and my experience taking another course will translate into a great program this summer."

After growing up in London and Newton, and spending summers in Cohasset since the age of 12, Gangemi attended Belmont Hill School, in Belmont, for high school. While at Belmont Hill, Gangemi was an AP Scholar with Distinction. Currently double-majoring in economics and human organization and development at Vanderbilt, Gangemi hopes to join Teach for America after graduating.

Unique to the Ivy Insiders program has a three-part social mission: increasing college access by offering scholarships to deserving students; volunteering at schools and other non-profits as part of regularly scheduled service days; and partnering with other revolutionary educational organizations. Ivy Insiders promises to turn no student away because of financial or education reasons. Scholarships and partnerships allow Ivy Insiders to prepare students of all backgrounds for the standardized tests. Gangemi explains, "When Ivy Insiders partners with a school, a certain number of scholarships are offered and when schools agree, Ivy Insiders offers schoolwide discounts."

Undergrad Michael Gangemi will be relying on his successful experience with the SATs to help other students tackle the standardized test.
COURTESY PHOTO

"The social mission is important to me because most SAT prep programs tend to replicate and enforce the education gap between wealthy and poor families, schools, and regions. By pledging to not to turn anyone away because of an inability to pay, Ivy helps to provide the same quality of test prep to all students. Though this definitely won't fix the root problem of unequal education, it should help attack the specific inequality in test prep availability wherever there are Ivy Insiders programs," Gangemi said.

Gangemi has big plans for the program and students in Cohasset and Hingham and hopes that the unique Ivy Insiders approach will benefit the entire community.

SENIOR SCENE

June is full of good programs

LOUISE SMULLEN

If you have not yet dropped in for Monday morning coffee at the Lightkeepers, June will be your last chance.

As so often happens here in New England, we have experienced sudden change in the weather, leaping from several cold, dreary days right into the summer-like heat and humidity. I'm sure beachgoers are loving it. If it hadn't been for the beautiful flowering trees, would we have known that it was May?

This past month Lisa O'Neill from the Jordan Hospital Sleep Center conducted a seminar on sleep disorders. They were joined by Becky Coutino of Home Care of New England. Lack of a good night's sleep can affect our health and safety. The sleep center is fairly new. Clients who are having problems with getting enough sleep, and those suffering from sleep apnea may go there for testing. Lisa demonstrated and passed around equipment used in cases of sleep apnea.

At one of our luncheons some of our seniors brought in gold jewelry to be appraised by Matthew Shannon of Matthew's Jewelry in Cohasset. As you probably know, gold is selling for a high price at the present time.

If you have not yet dropped in for Monday morning coffee at the Lightkeepers, June will be your last chance. It will close at the end of June and reopen in September.

There will be several interesting programs in June.

On June 8, author Carol Morrissey will present "Feelings." She will share a catastrophic event in her life and activities that helped her become a better person.

On June 15, we will be treated to a complimentary luncheon and entertained at Scituate Lifecare.

On June 16, the Cohasset Police Department will serve their annual Father's Day barbeque.

On June 22, we will learn how Prescription Advantage can help defray prescription costs.

Our last seminar for June, on the 29th, will be on Help with Back and Shoulder pain, presented by Dr. Lisa Lewis of Cohasset Chiropractic.

Seminars are at 11 a.m. Why not come, and then stay for lunch? Anyone may attend the program, but for lunch you must make a reservation in advance.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local senators on seven roll calls from the week of May 23-27. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

The Senate, on a voice vote without a roll call, approved an estimated $29.2 billion state budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2011. The House has already approved a different version. A House-Senate conference committee will eventually craft a plan that will be approved by the House and Senate and then sent to Gov. Deval Patrick.

Several controversial amendments were debated on the Senate floor but much of the work was done behind the scenes and the fate of each amendment was basically determined well before it reached the Senate floor.

Several attempts by the GOP to reduce taxes were easily defeated. The package also includes cuts in local aid and a controversial plan, approved without a roll call, that would strip municipal employees of most of their rights to collectively bargain over health care benefits including co-payments and deductibles. The House has approved a different version of that plan.

Supporters said the budget is a fiscally responsible and balanced one that closes a $1.9 billion gap, does not raise taxes and funds important programs to the best of the state's ability during this difficult economy.

MAKE MORE SENIORS ELIGIBLE FOR TAX BREAK (S 3) — Y

Senate 9-29, rejected an amendment that would allow more senior homeowners and renters over 65 to qualify for the state's "senior circuit breaker" tax credit. Current law offers up to a $970 state income tax credit for qualified senior homeowners whose annual property tax combined with 50 percent of their water and sewer bill is more than 10 percent of their total income. Renters are allowed to count 25 percent of their rent as real estate tax payments. The amendment would lower the 10 percent threshold to 8.5 percent.

Amendment supporters said the change would help provide tax relief to more low-income seniors who are struggling during the recession.

Amendment opponents said the state simply cannot afford the estimated $9 million loss in revenue.

(A "Yes" vote is for allowing more seniors over 65 to qualify for the $930 tax credit. A "No" vote is against allowing it.)

PERMANENT SALES TAX HOLIDAY (S 3) — N

Senate 4-34, rejected an amendment establishing a permanent annual two-day weekend sales tax holiday in August. The Department of Revenue would choose the dates of the holiday and announce them by July 15 each year.

Amendment supporters said it is time to make this successful holiday a permanent one and noted similar tax-free holidays over the past several years have helped retail stores and consumers. They noted that a permanent holiday would give consumers the opportunity to plan purchases in advance and not have to sit around each year and see if the Legislature decides to approve a holiday.

Amendment opponents said it is fiscally irresponsible to approve a permanent holiday without regard to the economic situation of the state during a specific year. They argued the Legislature should look at the state's economy and decide one year at a time whether the state can afford a sales tax holiday. Some noted a permanent holiday would hurt year-round retail sales because many consumers would hold off until August to make big purchases.

(A "Yes" vote is for establishing a permanent annual two-day sales tax holiday in August. A "No" vote is against establishing it.)

REDUCE SALES TAX FROM 6.25 PERCENT TO 5 PERCENT (S 3) — Y

Senate 10-28, rejected an amendment to reduce the state's sales tax from 6.25 percent to 5 percent over a two-year period. The tax would drop to 5.6 percent in fiscal 2012 and then to 5 percent in 2013.

Amendment supporters said this increased sales tax is hurting consumers and retail operations, especially those on the state's borders. They argued that you can't tax your way out of a recession and urged the state to live within its means.

Amendment opponents said the state cannot afford the annual loss of close to $1 billion in revenue. They argued this tax cut would result in reductions to local aid, education, health care and human service programs.

(A "Yes" vote is for reducing the sales tax to 5 percent. A "No" vote is against the reduction.)

REDUCE INCOME TAX RATE FROM 5.3 PERCENT TO 5 PERCENT (S 3) — Y

Senate 5-33, rejected an amendment reducing the income tax rate from 5.3 percent to 5 percent over three years beginning in 2012. The tax would be reduced to 5.2 percent in 2012, 5.1 percent in 2013 and 5 percent in 2014.

Voters in 2000 approved a gradual reduction of that year's 5.85 percent tax to five percent by January 2003. The Legislature in July 2002 froze the rate at 5.3 percent.

Amendment supporters said it is time for the Legislature to respect and honor voters' opinions and restore this tax relief. They argued the dollars saved by taxpayers will be pumped back into the economy.

Some amendment opponents said the state simply cannot afford to lose millions of dollars in revenue. They argued this tax cut would result in reductions to local aid and many important programs.

(A "Yes" vote is for reducing the income tax rate from 5.3 percent to 5 percent. A "No" vote is against the reduction.)

HIKE TAX ON CIGARS AND SMOKELESS TOBACCO (S 3) — N

Senate 15-23, rejected an amendment that would raise the tax on most cigars and smokeless tobacco.

Amendment supporters said the amendment would make the tax on cigars and smokeless tobacco equal to the tax on cigarettes. They argued it would reduce smoking and smoking-related illnesses and deaths by discouraging cigarette smokers from trying to avoid the higher cigarette tax by switching to cigars or smokeless tobacco.

Amendment opponents said now is not the time to raise taxes on anything in Massachusetts. They argued that taxpayers are struggling enough during this difficult economic period.

(A "Yes" vote is for hiking the tax on most cigars and smokeless tobacco. A "No" vote is against the hike.)

USE SURPLUS FOR LOCAL AID TO CITIES AND TOWNS (S 3) — Y

Senate 7-31, rejected an amendment that would require up to $65 million of any state surplus tax revenue remaining at the end of this fiscal year on June 30 be distributed to cities and towns as additional local aid.

Amendment supporters said this would ensure that the Legislature does not squander any budget surplus. They argued that struggling cities and towns deserve this excess money.

Amendment opponents said it is irresponsible to promise any portion of this excess revenue to cities and towns without knowing what the state's financial situation will be at that time. They argued that the amendment would tie the hands of the Legislature. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment requiring that up to $65 million of surplus revenue go to local aid. A "No" vote is against the amendment.)

HOLD NURSING HOME BEDS FOR TEN DAYS (S 3) — N

Senate 12-25, rejected an amendment that would require MassHealth, the state's Medicaid program that provides health care for low-income and disabled persons, to pay a nursing home for a ten-day period to hold the bed of a resident during his or her hospitalization or other leave of absence from the facility. This bed hold policy has been in effect for many years but was cut from this year's budget.

Amendment supporters said this change will result in many nursing home residents being denied readmission to their familiar nursing home following a hospitalization. They argued this is unfair and it will be traumatic for the resident to find and move into a new nursing home where he or she does not know anyone.

Amendment opponents agreed the current bed hold policy is a good one that the state unfortunately cannot afford at the moment. They said the Legislature will revisit and hopefully reinstate the bed hold policy as soon as the economic condition of the state improves.

(A "Yes" vote is for the 10 day bed hold. A "No" vote is against it.)

COMMENTARY

A 40-year retrospective

SHIRLEY MARTEN

...this was the beginning of a neighborhood recognizing the importance of collectively responding to the preservation and conservation of a fragile and precious lagoon with a permanent tidal water view.

As an immigrant, the Memorial Day ceremony created a special day for me. It is an opportunity to see so many familiar faces and to share emotions and memories of growing up in another culture. Exploring the different journeys of families expands one's mind. This year was unique because at the Lightkeepers' Cottage reception I shook the hand of Steve Bowen who has traveled far and beyond.

Memories flooded back to June 1995 when my husband Jim and I chose to celebrate 30 years of life in America at the Lightkeepers' Cottage. Thanks to Mary Ford for promoting the open invitation to everyone, we were grateful to greet over 300 wonderful people. Since many knew my philanthropic pursuits, they experienced with me the joy of giving back, by burning the mortgage on a Cohasset historic home.

Today I can stand proud to be an active and responsible U.S. Citizen. This is the story of four decades of life in Cohasset, beginning in 1969. Our contemporary home is on a quiet lane off Nichols Road, nestling into a rocky ledge and overlooking upper Little Harbor. It was designed by a local architect who admired the principles of Frank Lloyd Wright of bringing the natural beauty of surroundings into the living space. There is a 12-foot right of way alongside which we love to share with new neighbors who appreciate the birding, kayaking and maybe ice skating in the winter. It adjoins a culvert and town easement.

In the early 70s when the tidal gates on Nichols Road needed repairing, the abutters of upper Little Harbor met each other and voted for the town approval to pay for its repair. (Abutters have a property deed recorded with the Norfolk County Registry that shows a property line extending into the tidal flats.) this was the beginning of a neighborhood recognizing the importance of collectively responding to the preservation and conservation of a fragile and precious lagoon with a permanent tidal water view.

By 1975 old septic systems were not being maintained and polluted the stream running along the culvert next to us. Algae had spread over upper Little Harbor from May to mid-June. With endorsement of the Town, four abutters worked with wetland experts from the state Department of Environmental Protection for advice on tidal flushing. An annual operating schedule for the tidal gates was created for the Cohasset DPW.

In the next decade septic systems were upgraded and upper Little Harbor gradually became a natural beauty again. When the sun is shining and the tide is flowing, the surface of the water is a myriad of sparkling diamonds, and we can be mesmerized by the rhythmic changes as we sit outside or on the carpet indoors. Sailors must well know this happiness.

In the 1980s yoga philosophy and volunteerism became my metaphor for a fulfilling life. I found friends for all seasons over the Cohasset Library desk, at the Consignment shop, the Friends of World's End and the South Shore Hospital Cohasset Committee. It was thrilling to take horseback riding lessons atop Turkey Hill with views extending from the North Shore and south to Plymouth.

Years later I worked with the Trustees of Reservations; Cohasset, Hingham and their respective Conservation Commissions to partner with the state, to preserve Turkey Hill from being developed. It was a worthwhile education of negotiation and mediation.

This was useful when in 1986 at Town Meeting it was voted for the Town to spend $1,995 for an independent consulting firm to review the tidal gates operation schedule. Abutters financially contributed to this although no changes needed to be made.

However in 1996 the state mandated the 30 abutters of upper Little Harbor to upgrade septic systems or cesspools to Title V requirements within two years. Thanks to several outstanding leaders, the Citizens for Equitable Environmental Solutions (CEES) was founded.

Dues paying members from the watershed area joined and 10 years later in an overwhelming Town Meeting vote, the Town was authorized to provide sewer service to over 450 homes in all the Little Harbor watersheds to stop pollution – a good example of the power of local democracy.

In 2003 abutters initiated the James Island Preservation Alliance and were successful in halting the subdivision plans there.

Now, since March 28, 2009, an article at Town Meeting was approved to fund professional services costing $18,000 to provide the town with the support needed to file a Notice of Intent with the Conservation Commission.

The saga continues today.

Time has come to say ENOUGH.

Time to reflect on the wholeness of life: the past, the present and the future. We, the residents and taxpayers of Cohasset, are privileged to live in this community. Let's respect each other's contributions and to value pursuits in life whether it is education, healthcare or financial security. We all pay over 55 percent of property tax to education without choice. We cannot micromanage nature, but it would be unwise to not show respect for fellow citizens. Get connected to the expensive sewer system as soon as possible, healthier waters will follow, and Town government will be less pressured.

I hope the decision of the Cohasset Conservation Commission and the state agencies will do what is fair and just.

And back to the beginning – let's try and revive the Memorial Day reception at the Lightkeepers' Cottage next year and greet all with loving kindness, light hearts and peace.

Shirley Marten lives at 78 Nichols Road and has been a Cohasset resident for more than 40 years.

CAT CAM

winter and this spring. It is not unique to ILH; Straits Pond and the Great Pond at Scituate, for example, have far greater amounts of seasonal algae this year. We expect it will be essentially gone by the end of this month, as in the past.

The E20 Group has invested a significant amount of our own time and, at our own expense, hired a professional engineer and two scientists to review all relevant information pertaining to ILH and develop an effective plan for improving the flushing and water quality in ILH for the future. This plan now forms the basis for the NOI.

Our plan is a significant improvement to the existing operating schedule and other alternatives previously proposed that could do more harm than good. The plan balances all aspects of the wetland environment including improved water quality while limiting negative impacts. It is also compliant with local and State regulations.

Our plan also considers the significant benefits that will come from the multi-million dollar sewer investment and costly vegetation swales which are recent improvements or underway. These important initiatives address the root cause of water quality issues by removing the large amounts of nutrients that infiltrate ILH. Over time we will be able see and evidence how well these changes are working.

While we will experience increases in negative impacts such as odor pollution, reduced recreational and aesthetic value and reduced property values, our plan is a genuine compromise, which is supported by the substantial majority of the impacted property owners. Our plan also retains control at the Town level where the impact of decisions is most felt, and it respects the legal protections provided to property owners.

We live on ILH and we love ILH, it is literally our backyard. We care deeply about the environment here and we have developed this thoughtful solution to preserving and improving this beautiful asset.

We sought and obtained the Board of Selectmen's support and approval for the NOI. We trust that the Conservation Commission also understands the value of an approach where the Town and property owners work together to find an optimal solution. We hope they approve the current NOI.

2 YEAR PRICE LOCK! First 85 Customers

I'm paying higher prices, but you won't.

With the rise in prices of energy, wood, gas, and petroleum products used in our Fibrex® material, it's costing us more to run our factory and build our replacement windows. Normally, our Corporate headquarters would expect that I'd pass these increased manufacturing costs onto our customers, but here in Massachusetts and Southern New Hampshire, I'm doing things a bit differently.

In this economy, maybe this isn't the best time to replace all your windows. Replace just two or three rooms, and I'll let you lock in your window discount for two years[1]. Skippers stun Abington in walk-off win

The last out proved to be the toughest one for Abington to get.

The Green Wave appeared on their way to winning the South Shore League baseball crown May 27.

Senior pitcher Ceejay Suarez had kept a strong Cohasset offense frustrated and was one out away from a 2-0 title-clinching decision.

Cohasset had other ideas, though.

GIRLS TENNIS

Younger players net rewards

Girls ready to give playoffs a run

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Heading into the final two matches of the season, Cohasset girls tennis coach Gigi Meehan was hoping for a couple of late wins and a 14-6 season to take into the playoffs.

Wish granted.

Despite missing juniors and seniors to the prom for Friday's finale against Mashpee, Cohasset got the wins, beating Abington and Mashpee in the last two matches to get the 13-6 record.

That translated into a No. 6 seed and a home opener today against No. 11 Cape Cod Academy (9-8) at 3:45 p.m. at Milliken Courts.

The Mashpee match was an interesting affair.

To accommodate the prom and pre-prom festivities, most junior and senior players were given the afternoon off, and the match had been set to start at 2:30.

Somewhere along the way Mashpee missed the memo however, and showed up closer to 4 p.m.

No problem.

With her usual cheerfulness, Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan got everyone going quickly and Cohasset's youngsters battled to a 4-1 victory.

It started with Emma Smith, who played first singles, filling in for Hannah Rawson.

Smith, who mostly plays No. 3 singles, played a very strong match in a 6-2, 6-4 victory.

"That was a great win for Emma," Meehan said. "She dictated the play at the end. She played to win."

At second singles, Sara Corry played and gave herself a birthday to remember with a hard-fought match that went into a Super Tiebreaker when time became a factor.

"I thought Sara Corry played real well," Meehan said.

At No. 3 singles, freshman Caroline Evans scored a 6-0, 6-1 victory.

"I was super impressed with that," Meehan said of Evans' win. "She played super long yesterday at second doubles and today she got right on. She was ripping it up. That was impressive."

In doubles, Kate Sookiasian and Brianne Crough picked up a win.

"They're cousins," Meehan said of the duo. "It's fun to let them play together. They did a great job."

At second doubles, Annie Robinson and Giselle Hart also won.

"This was a good little win on prom day," Meehan said. "To do it with two starters is great, very encouraging."

Meehan said her team is ready for the tournament, and credited the coaches who work together.

Anne Thomae and Jean Marie Hart are the JV coaches," she said. "They have done an amazing job bringing players along. They have girls ready to play. They're great strategists, and to see the girls come up and play varsity is great."

If Cohasset wins their opener, they'll head to Martha's Vineyard on Sunday.

Cohasset's Caroline Evans eyes her backhand return during her match on Friday. Evans won her match 6-0, 6-1.

SAILING

Nor'easters finish second

Local sailors second in Mass Bay League Championship

Congratulations to the Nantasket Nor'easters, the collaborative sailing team from Cohasset High School, Hull High School, and the South Shore Charter School who finished second at the Mass Bay League, two-day sailing championships.

They competed against 22 other high schools, half of which had long-established A-Division programs. As if the team result wasn't impressive enough, only one other team - the champion Manchester-Essex - had more consistent top finishers in each of the four fleets.

What a great showing for a team in only its second year of existence.

In the Mercury Silver fleet, Sam Campbell and Sarah Russell finished fifth out of 30 teams.

In the Mercury Gold fleet, Andrew Burnett and Kelsey Diemer finished third out of 32 teams.

In the 420B fleet, co-captain Danielle Sookiasian and Emma Musto finished second of 25 teams.

And in the 420A fleet, co-captain Morgan McCarthy and Elise Quebec finished sixth of 25 teams.

This week the girls participated in the MBL Women's Regatta and the underclassmen compete in the MBL Underclassmen Regatta.

Cohasset's Danielle Sookiasian and Elise Quebec finished third in the MLB Women's Regatta.

Sail Nantasket is hosting a big fundraiser for the Nor'easters this Friday at Beach Fire in Hull. The evening includes dinner and a silent auction. Fore more info you can go to the team website: http://www.sailnantasket.org

Hill played 61 matches in his four-year career while posting a 24-9 record in SSL League play and played 32 matches at first Singles.

Craven played 58 matches in his four-year career while posting an amazing 35-1 record in SSL League play. He was undefeated for the last two years at second singles.

The Skippers took advantage of two two-out walks and an error to keep their seventh inning alive and chase Suarez. Anders Goetz blasted a double off reliever Zach Littman to score John Collins to tie the game at 2-2. Jeff Cavanaro then lined a 2-1 pitch into center field for a single to score Shane Haggerty as Cohasset completed an incredible comeback to swipe the championship with a 3-2 walk-off victory.

For the Skippers (14-6 overall, 14-2 league), it's their third South Shore League title in four years.

Next up is the MIAA Div. 4 South Sectionals, where the Skippers will look to defend their State Title.

The fun starts today at 4 p.m. as the No. 4 seeded Skippers host No. 13 Old Colony (10-8) at Milliken Field.

The winner will play either No. 5 Westport or No. 12 Avon in the quarterfinal round.

Old Colony comes into the game with a 4-6 record on the road, and is led by Tim Miller, who has a .410 batting average. As a team, Old Colony is hitting .277 with an on base average of .397.

Cohasset on the other hand, is hitting .370 as a team with Cavanaro leading the way with a .452 average.

Mamonides (14-4) is the No. 1 seed and Marion (15-5) is No. 2 in the 15-team bracket.

"We knew that we had to battle," said Cavanaro, who earned the win on the mound. "Suarez is a great pitcher, and they brought Zach Littman in and he is one of the best arms on the South Shore. We tried to look for our pitches and with two outs it was tough. We battled and beat a good team today.

"I knew that he (Littman) was going to locate a fastball. He knows how to pitch and I found a pitch that I could drive. I just got the better of him today."

"All game long we knew that (Abington) would have their 'A' game coming," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said. "This was a championship game. They came out of the box flying and to Jeff Cavanaro's credit, he composed himself and settled down.

"Offensively, I kept harping to these guys to be selective. The first five frames we were swinging at a lot of uncharacteristic pitches that were in the dirt and when they were ahead in the count. They were offering at pitches that they were uncomfortable driving."

Abington shared the league title with Cohasset last year, but the Green Wave (16-4, 13-3) appeared on its way to winning the title outright this time. Suarez had Cohasset pounding the ball on the ground for the first six innings as he got 11 groundball outs and allowed only four hits.

Both defenses were making the plays in the field, and it looked as if the two runs the Green Wave scored in the first inning – on RBI singles by Littman and Andrew Dion – would stand up.

Cavanaro, who scattered 10 hits in his complete-game win, constantly made the pitches he needed to prevent Abington from ever adding to its lead.

"Isn't it always the way?" said Abington coach Steve Perakslis about getting his team not getting the last out. "We had a couple of chance to tack on some more runs and we didn't.

"You have to give these guys (Cohasset) a lot of credit. They came down to their last out with nobody on and got a rally going. Ceejay Suarez showed a lot of heart and he pitched on Sunday (against Norwell). He demanded the ball from me today and he just ran out of gas in the last inning. I probably should have got him (out) a little earlier."

The Green Wave left five runners in scoring position and Cohasset stranded four through the first six innings. That included the Skippers stranding runners on second and third with one out in the third inning.

"Abington is a good hitting team," Cavanaro said. "We stayed with it and made the plays defensively and our bats came alive in the last inning."

Matt Lebbossiere, Dion and Connor Fraser had two hits each for Abington. Chris Murphy and Connor Goetz had two hits apiece for Cohasset.

Cohasset SEPAC wrap up meeting

Cohasset Special Education Advisory Council is taking nominations for Vice-President of Cohasset SEPAC Board. It is a two-year term. The Cohasset SEPAC works as a team with everyone helping one another when needed. Each board member assists in finding speakers, attends monthly meetings with speakers, fall Open house events, and supports families with questions. Please submit nominations or desire to be active on the board. The meeting and elections will be held on Tuesday, June 7th at the Olde Salt House (Atlantica if inclement) at 7 pm.

Following the elections, join the SEPAC board to celebrate* successes in 2010-11 and plan speakers for 2011-12. All Cohasset SEPAC members (parent of any child on an IEP/504 plan) and neighboring SEPAC presidents welcome. "We would love to plan some joint meetings with neighboring towns," states Diane Herth, Cohasset SEPAC President. SEPAC is also looking for Liaisons at each school for the 2011-12 school year.

*All food and beverages are paid by attendees and not SEPAC.

What is SEPAC or PAC?

• Since 1986 Massachusetts state law requires all public school districts to have a Special Education Parent Advisory Council (SEPAC).

• Parents work with Director of Student Services, School Committee, Superintendent and teachers to promote a successful educational environment for our children.

• SEPAC ensures all children have equal access to educational opportunities, and schools are safe, nurturing, challenging, learning environments.

• Cohasset SEPAC also educates families in the Special Education process through Speaker and presentation.

Exchange students seek Cohasset families

The Scituate-Sucy Sister City Committee, an outgrowth of the Scituate-Cohasset-Sucy (High Schools) French Exchange, is seeking host families in Cohasset and Scituate for a small group of French high school students who will be spending a few weeks in these towns this summer.

The main group of 12 will be here from July 10-24 and participate in English classes, cultural excursions, and recreational activities. An additional three students will come independently at a mutually agreed upon time over the summer. You do not need to speak French to host one of these students, nor do you need to have a high school student in your household. You will enjoy learning about life in Sucy, France and make connections there, which could lead to further exchanges in the future. To volunteer, contact Beth Marat at bmarat@cohassetk12.org as soon as possible.

EVENT UPDATE

PMC Kids Ride helps kids help others

South Shore students are learning one more valuable lesson before the school year closes, giving feels good. Schools in Marshfield, Scituate, and Hingham, including Derby Academy, have each launched their own campaign and teams to participate in the PMC Hingham Kids Ride being held on Sunday, June 12 from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. at Wompatuck State Park, supporting the Dana Farber Cancer Center via The Jimmy Fund.

In Marshfield at the Martinson Elementary School, students, teachers and parents have all joined forces to honor third grade teacher, Mrs. Lynette Irons. What started as a few close friends wanting to show their support for their former teacher has grown into an all school effort.

Team "Irons Strong Kids", started when Mary O'Sullivan came home one day and told her mom, Susanne, that Mrs. Irons had breast cancer and would it be okay if she and her friends rode for her in the PMC Hingham Kids Ride. Susan immediately fired off an email to a few of the moms explaining the situation and suggesting that they encourage their kids to participate. That was just the beginning. Since then, thanks to the wonders of electronic communication and a lot of hard work, Team Irons has grown to include 125 riders of all ages from all grades and their parents, who are generously offering their time as volunteers. In addition, they have gone well beyond the ride, by holding a bake sale and selling bracelets

When, asked how she feels about all the attention Mrs Irons says, " I am so lucky and fortunate for all the support. I feel that my recovery is in part, due to all that support. I am truly blessed to be part of the experience."

"Giving is Good" has caught on in a number of other schools as well. In Scituate the Jenkins, Cushing, Hatherly, and Wampatuck schools are rallying their students and parents with a by sending the PMC flyer through the school-wide on-line system, "Virtual Backpacks" and by putting up posters throughout the building. Each school hosted a lunchtime visit from a PMC Kids Ride Coordinator, Jackie Temple, who showed a slideshow of last year's ride and answered student's questions. At the Inly School in Scituate, PMC presented at an all-school meeting addressing to their entire student body. While Derby's D Team, their community service organization, has created support posters for riders.

Hingham Middle school Ambassador Club, students from the school who assist in school-related and community service projects, has organized a team of riders and a group of student and parent volunteers who will help during the event.

"The students' enthusiasm for this event is inspiring. From the Ambassador Club behind the scenes packing of 500 goodie bags for the riders, to all the students who registered to ride or volunteer that day, everyone is getting on board. I think many HMS families' lives have been touched by cancer in one way or another, through illness of friends or family members. This event gives them the power to do something to help and teaches them the importance of giving," explains Hingham Middle School Assistant Principal, David Riordan.

There were over 450 kids and 100 volunteers participating in last year's ride, raising more than $40,000 for cancer research at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. This year's ride is shaping up to be even bigger.

The PMC Hingham Kids Ride is an outgrowth of the 190-mile two-day ride from Sturbridge to Provincetown Pan-Mass Challenge (PMC) adult ride started 32 years ago. Since its inception, the PMC has contributed more than $270 million to the fight against cancer. All proceeds raised by both events go to the Jimmy Fund at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute in Boston.

If you are interested in helping or would like more information on the PMC Hingham Kids Ride, please go to the website at kids.pmc.org/hingham or email pmchingham@comcast.net. Registration is open to volunteer or to register your child on the website. Donations may be made on the website by clicking on the link "search for a rider or a team", or mailed to PMC Hingham Kids Ride, P.O. Box 606, Hingham, MA 02043.

For additional information please contact Coordinators Jackie Temple or Lisa Patterson at pmchingham@comcast.net

The meticulously preserved Thomas Loring House, originally built in 1690 is one of the historic structures featured in the Annual Tour organized by the Hingham Historical Society. The home was photographed in 1942 by Frances Macgregor for Eleanor Roosevelt's book This is America. Reaching for a visible manifestation of American idealism during the early years of World War II, Mrs. Roosevelt found it in the town's "infinite variety" of houses, where lived "free American souls, conscous of their four-square integrity." PHOTOS COURTESY OF SUSAN HARRIS

Tour celebrates town's colonial heritage

The 1927 Morris Whiton House is the work of architect Charles Everett. It is one of nine historic buildings featured in the Hingham Historical Society's 87th annual tour of historic homes, June 10 and 11.

Eight buildings spanning 275 years of local history will be featured on Hingham's 87th upcoming Historic Homes Tour which highlights, among other things, the evolving interpretations of the traditional American "Colonial" style. The tour, sponsored by the Hingham Historical Society, runs from 10am to 4pm on Friday and Saturday, June 10 and 11, and costs $25 per ticket.

Colonial is one of the most broadly used and abused words in American real estate. To purists, it refers to any type of home that echoes the late 17th century Garrison style houses built by the first English colonists in North America. But it can also refer to the later styles that were inspired by the Enlightenments fascination with all things Roman and Greek. Along with the Old Ordinary of 1688, one of the most authentically "colonial" house on the tour, the Thomas and Benjamin Loring house of around 1690, features original interior woodwork and moldings dating from the era of Queen Anne enveloped in a symmetrical Georgian (as in King George the 1st) exterior that was reconfigured a 1730s renovation. It represents one of the earliest versions of the look that was to be an inspiration for American houses for the next 4 centuries, but not without a few diversions here and there. Stolid and sober, the Georgian taste eventually gave way to a style that was literally lighter, and corresponded with the end of English colonial rule in the United States. The 1811 Isaac Hinckley House and the 1818 Daniel Fearing House are fine examples of Federal" brick-enders, known for their delicate moldings, generous windows, and refined proportions consciously modeled after buildings of the Roman Republic.

Hingham, with its hundreds of small traditional Cape Cod style homes is best known for its more ordinary expressions of the Colonial style, but the town is also home to some very sophisticated interpretations of the fashion. Architect Charles Everett produced one of our most distinctive "high end" examples of the Colonial Georgian style in the Morris Whiton House of 1929, a home that contains an interesting mix of modernist interior "flow" with more traditional details. The tour also includes the 1871 Starkes Whiton House, built by the Treasurer of the Boston Hingham Steamboat Company, and the Beal-Gardner house, half of which was built by a pilot for the same company. The Whiton house, never featured on a tour before, is a grand late Victorian executive's home built in a daring, for Hingham at least, Gothic Revival style. The Beal-Gardner is a workingman's Cape Cod style cottage. Built by men of very different means, but in their formal symmetrical floor plans and their classical touches in windows and doorways, they also represent the strong hold that traditional local tastes held on Hingham's citizens.

Also featured on this year's tour is the 1929 Girl Scout House, the first built in New England. Volunteers from the Girl Scouts will host an exhibit of the Hingham Girl Scouts, which was founded in 1917.

During both days of the tour, visitors can view a photo to exhibit in the Old Derby Academy, 34 Main Street. The exhibit features over sixty images from the book This is America, a photographic essay on the American way of life prepared by First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt and photographer Frances Cooke MacGregor. The exhibit, titled This is Hingham, 1942, contains Macgregors photos of two of the houses in this year's House Tour, along with her other iconic images of Hingham, its buildings and people in the late Depression and early World War II years. Mrs. Roosevelt famously paid a visit to Hingham while preparing This is America, and the local housing stock is said to have inspired her to remark that Hingham had the most beautiful Main Street in America. Tour-goers will be able to judge for themselves, as three of the houses on tour are on Main Street. The exhibit is free for tour ticket holders, $3 per person to non-ticket holders.

Tour tickets can be purchased online at www.historichometours.com. Tickets are also available in downtown Hingham at Nobles Camera Shop, La Petite Maison, Whitney Gordon's Jewelers, Old Derby Academy, and the Saturday Farmers' Market. In South Hingham tickets are available at Corson's Glass House and Social Graces. Outside of Hingham, tickets are available at Buttonwood Books and Flemings in Cohasset, Flowers and Festivities in Scituate, and The Studio in Duxbury. Level: Challenging

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

FAMILY CAMPS

By Bette Bussel – Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

With birthday parties to plan, hectic work and school schedules to maintain, and soccer games to attend we often miss the opportunity to enjoy family time. That is why each summer more and more families are going off to Family Camp together. That's right--children, adults, and seniors! Each family member gets to have their own individual camp experience within a larger one shared by all family members present. What are the benefits of taking the entire family to camp this summer? Here are a few to keep in mind…

➡ Family Bonding: A summer camp experience can strengthen a family bond in many ways. Families take part in team building activities and embark on adventures outside their daily routines. Watch your family grow closer as they support one another in achieving personal goals. Families who attend camp together share the learning, the laughs and the living quarters.

➡ Introducing Children to Camp Lifestyle : Children who have never experienced camp will be able to adjust to the camp lifestyle with the support of family members. Their comfort zones slowly broaden as they experience all that camp has to offer in the company of their loved ones.

➡ Reconnect With Your Inner Youth: This is your opportunity to embrace your inner child! At family camp many adults relive and share their own camp memories while creating new ones. Other adults relish the chance to be a camper—sometimes for the very first time.

➡ Not Your Typical Family Vacation : Sit back, relax and let the camp experts take charge. The camp staff can worry about planning the itinerary, cooking meals, lifeguarding, teaching skills and leading adventures. At Family Camp adults spend more time doing things and less time behind the scenes organizing and orchestrating. Family camps offer excellent opportunities to learn together.

With locations throughout New England, there is are many different family camp options; no two are the same. Some family camps are held after the regular campers leave in August while others specialize in sessions for families.

Use the online Find A Camp tool to explore family camps: http://www.acanewengland.org/findacamp/index.htm Search by state and session length to start!

Town Manager search

Cohasset will have to wait until at least next week before knowing their next town manager.

After holding second interviews for two of the finalist candidates the Selectmen decided to sleep on it. They will reconvene on Wednesday, June 15 evening to likely make the final decision.

The two finalists, Michael Coughlin, the current town administrator in Westport, and John McAuliffe, the current town administrator in Webster, each spent an hour before the Board of Selectmen on Wednesday night.

See page 5 for what the candidates said – and what the Selectmen thought.

'Graduates with brimming potential'

Class of 2011 ready to take on the world

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

In September 1998, the 89 graduates of Cohasset High started kindergarten, many of them at Osgood School.

Bill Clinton was president, Seinfeld had ceased making new episodes and the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001 were still three years away.

Since then the Class of 2011 has experienced so much together and so much of what they have shared will carry with them as they move forward in their lives.

Saturday's graduation day was bright and sunny and the graduates, decked out in the blue and white caps and gowns, gathered to celebrate this milestone.

Parents, grandparents, brothers, sisters, aunts, uncles, neighbors and friends greeted the soon-to-be high school graduates with camera flashes, applause and cheering.

The reoccurring theme of the day was this class's unity – they have drawn strength from each other and from the community, both at school and at large. The speeches from both students and school administrators inspired the students to take the foundation they have gained in Cohasset out into the world to make a difference, to follow their dreams, and to succeed.

Class president Christian Quebec congratulated his classmates on all they have accomplished.

"The class of 2011 is truly gifted in every way. But I assure you that these accomplishments will pale in comparison to the future successes

Bonetti gets appointment

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen appointed Russell Bonetti of Parker Avenue to the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) on Tuesday night. Bonetti and Beechwood Street resident Merle Brown had both expressed interest in the position.

The selectmen conducted short interviews with both candidates before making what they described as a "tough" decision.

"This is tough one, both candidates I consider friends and both I admire for their involvement in town," said Selectmen Vice Chair Paul Carlson.

"There needs to be a tightening of oversight (on the funds) because of the state match is much less now ... it's more incumbent on us to spend the money wisely."
Russ Bonetti

Bonetti served as chair of the Hagerty Committee as the town grappled with what to do with the waterfront land at the end of Parker Avenue. He was also on the Harbor Health Committee when it was active.

Merle Brown, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, has been on nearly every committee in town

WHAT'S GOING ON HERE?

A yellow dot could save a life

What is it? Cohasset TRIAD, a partnership between the police and fire departments, Norfolk Country Sheriff's Office, Elder Affairs, and senior citizens, has introduced a new program to help keep residents safe. A fluorescent yellow dot is placed on the rear windshield to alert public safety officials in the case of a car accident there is invaluable medical information in the glove compartment.

Why is it important? This information will alert EMTs to existing medical conditions and medical allergies allowing them to treat you appropriately and quickly.

How do I get a yellow dot? Residents, in particular senior citizens and those with medical conditions, are invited to the senior center on Tuesday, June 21 from 10a.m. to noon for the kick-off of the program. Residents will have their photos taken and be given the medical information form to be filled out. On Tuesday, June 28, residents should come back with their completed medical form to pick up their folder with their photo and receive their yellow dot. This program will be done on an on-going, as needed basis.

What's on the medical information card? TRIAD worked with Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin to design a medical information card with relevant information that did not compromise a person's vital information. Therefore information targeted by identity thieves, like social security number or Medicaid number, are not on the sheet. Next of kin emergency contact information, primary care doctor, medical conditions, recent surgeries, medications and allergies are all on the list. The photo on the front of the folder is key to ensuring proper identification in the event you can't speak for yourself following an accident.

Quote: "This program provides information to first responders that could possibly save lives. It gives police and fire information that can help them be effective in the medical care they provide."
- Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti

John Durkin, a Scituate resident, was among the first to put a yellow dot on his car. Officer Gregg Hartnett, a member of TRIAD, looks on. PHOTO/NANCY WHITE

Boat engine fire extinguished

The Cohasset Emergency Dispatch Center received a single 911 call from a boater reporting that his engine was on fire on Monday, June 6, at about 12:05 p.m. The boat, a 24-foot Mako, with an outboard engine, was drifting just off of the Parker Avenue boat ramp.

Cohasset Police, Cohasset Fire and the Cohasset Harbormaster responded to the scene. Harbormaster Lorren Gibbons was first to arrive. She and her assistant successfully extinguished the engine fire using a dry-chemical extinguisher. The boat, which is owned by a 26-year-old Cohasset man, was towed back to the boat ramp by the harbormaster.

The fire was contained to just the engine. The boat itself was not damaged. The cause of the fire is under investigation.

BRIEFLY

Moored boats policy in Little Harbor

Little Harbor will not become Cohasset's second mooring field.

Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons came forward with change to the harbor regulations that prohibit the mooring of boats in Little Harbor and the Gulf River, except for boats owned and registered by property owners who abut those bodies of water.

The change in the regulation came about after a small motorboat moored in Little Harbor last year. The owner of the boat is a Cohasset resident, Gibbons said, but did not own property abutting Little Harbor.

"We don't want to turn those people's view who live on Little Harbor and pay a premium (in taxes) to live there into a mooring field," Gibbons said.

There are also both environmental and practical issues to consider. For example, Gibbons said if a boat sank the environmental damage from the gas and other items on the boat could harm the fragile ecosystem of Little Harbor. It would also be difficult for the harbormaster to respond to the sinking because Little Harbor can only be accessed from the ocean during high tide, Gibbons said.

The new regulation specifically applies to "registered" boats, which covers all boats with a motor. The two dinghies that have been moored off the Jerusalem Road causeway near Bow St., or similar instances, are still allowed.

Those with property abutting Little Harbor are still entitled to moor their boat in the waters off their property.

Three new businesses

Three new food purveyors applied for a common victualler's license this week. All were approved by the Board of Selectmen in unanimous votes.

A new pizza shop, Mangia Neopolitan Pizzeria, at 13 Depot Court is expected to open soon.

A specialty cupcake shop, Wicked Good Cupcakes, owned by Tracey Noonan is opening at Old Colony Square, the shopping plaza next to the MBTA commuter rail station.

A new restaurant, Fantasia Cucina, is opening in Cohasset Plaza as well.

POLICE BEAT

Scooter helmets required by law

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

On Monday (May 30), an officer on patrol observed a scooter pass him on Jerusalem Road. The passenger did not have a helmet on as required by law. The operator, a 30 year-old Rockland man, was cited for having an unregistered scooter, operating after suspension of license and helmet violation for the passenger. Operators of these types of vehicles must be licensed and be at least 16 years of age, police said.

Windows smashed

During the overnight hours of Monday (May 30), the windows of several motor vehicles were smashed out. A Ford Excursion, a Nissan Rogue and another vehicle parked on South Main Street were hit with an unknown object. No suspects at this time.

News van

A news van was legally parked in front of the preschool in Depot Court last Tuesday (May 31) after the news about a potential case of measles surfaced. A caller complained about the van and asked that it be moved. The news van was on a public way. (As it turned out, the preschooler did not test positive for measles.)

Mailbox

At about 5 p.m. on Tuesday (May 31), a resident of Stockbridge Street reported that his metal mailbox and wood post were removed. Mail inside was also believed stolen. U.S. Postal service notified of theft of mail. No suspects at this time, police said.

Erratic driver

At 11:19 a.m. on Wednesday (June 1), a cell phone caller traveling on Forest Avenue reported a 2000 silver Volkswagen Jetta traveling on the wrong side of the road, passing over the solid yellow line and going around her. An officer working a paid detail observed this same vehicle southbound on Route 3A in the area of Shaw's Plaza passing over the double yellow line and illegally passing cars.

Scituate police stopped the violator in Scituate. A Cohasset officer issued a citation to a 22-year-old Marshfield woman for multiple charges of marked lane violations.

Ride home

At 7:53 p.m. on Wednesday (June 1) a police officer observed a man with a young child walking northbound on Route 3A (King Street). The man reported that he had mechanical problems with his car and was walking back to his residence in Hingham. A Cohasset officer gave him and his child a ride home.

Alarm

There were numerous complaints over several hours on Thursday (June 2) between 12:40 a.m. and 7:25 a.m. about an alarm sounding on Jerusalem Road. The homeowner was aware of the problem but could not shut off due to the storm and lightning, police said. One caller asked that the siren be shut off.

Traffic island

At 2:48 p.m. on Thursday (June 2), a resident of North Main Street called to report a vehicle just struck the traffic island at North Main and Joy Place. Responding officers located a 48 year-old-motorist from Border Street, operating a 2004 Lexus. She reported that she was forced off the road in the area of North Main Street and Bow Street by an unknown black vehicle with tan interior. She drove over the traffic island, striking a reflector pole and white fence. Her vehicle was towed with damage to three rims and quarter panel. Police were unable to identify the offending vehicle.

Side window

At 7:16 a.m. on Friday (June 3), an 84-year-old visitor from Vermont reported that his side window of his 2010 Toyota Camry was smashed while parked in a driveway on Linden Drive. Small rocks were located near the broken window. No witnesses or suspects at this time.

Unlicensed

At 10:55 a.m. on Friday (June 3), a police officer observed a white G.M.C. pickup truck towing a landscape trailer operating on North Main Street with a cracked windshield. The vehicle was stopped on Smith Place. The operator, a 28-year-old Rockland man, did not have a driver's license, and the trailer he was towing was unregistered. Both were towed and the operator is being summonsed to court for his violations.

Unlicensed

At 8:50 p.m. on Friday (June 3), a police officer was monitoring traffic on Route 3A northbound. He observed a 1998 Kia Sport passing vehicles on the left, and crossing the double yellow line. When stopped, the operator of this vehicle, a 45-year-old Quincy man, had an expired Massachusetts license. The operator is being summonsed to court for marked lane violations and unlicensed operation. His vehicle was towed.

Hit & Run

At 12:34 p.m. on Friday (June 3), a 47 year-old man from Hobart Lane reported that while parked on Margin Street on May 28, the driver's side of his vehicle, a 2006 Land Rover was struck. Paint transfer was visible. There are no suspects at this time.

Missing teen

At 8:55 p.m. on Friday (June 3), a resident of North Main Street reported that her 15-year-old daughter was missing and had broke curfew. Police sent out an administrative message sent surrounding police departments. Detectives were notified. On June 4, the missing juvenile's cell phone was pinged and indicated a location in Hull. The mother received a call from daughter, who was subsequently located in a residence in Hull. The daughter was reunited with mother at Hull P.D.

Move Over Law in effect

When an emergency or maintenance vehicle is stopped on the side of the road, move over to the next lane, or slow down if changing lanes is not possible. Under the Move over Law, failure to do so could result in a fine of up to $100.

Showing respect for our flag

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Most of us have shed a tear at events when Old Glory is raised or lowered. We place our hand over our heart or salute as the Star Spangled Banner or other patriotic music is played. Pride in our flag is something most Americans share. But today with the Stars and Stripes adorning everything from running shorts to plastic cups, most of us have no understanding about how to show respect for our flag on a regular basis.

Flag Day

With Flag Day coming June 14, it's a good time to take a look at our flags and see if they need to be replaced. Flag Day is the anniversary of the Continental Congress's Flag Resolution on June 14, 1777. The resolution established the flag as having 13 alternating red and white stripes; and the white stars (13 at the time) on a blue field. The Proclamation of President Woodrow Wilson officially established Flag Day in 1916. And in 1949, President Harry Truman signed an Act of Congress designating June 14 of each year as National Flag Day.

Worn flags

Most of us mean no harm when we allow our flags displayed on our homes or atop flag poles at our businesses to become worn. But, truthfully, that is a sign of disrespect. We owe it to all those who fought for our flag — which the symbol of the freedom we enjoy — to ensure our old flag is either cleaned and mended, or retired and replaced when it is no longer fit to serve as a symbol of our country. The red, white and blue of Old Glory, no matter how small or large, should be vibrant — the edges crisp. A bright, fresh flag shows we continue to renew our belief in all that the Stars and Stripes stand for.

Old flags can be dropped off at the American Legion Post on Summer Street. There is a special "mailbox" outside for collecting them.

Displaying the flag

- On a building — Hang the flag on a staff or on a rope over the sidewalk with the stars away from the building.
- Over the street — Hang the flag with the stars to the east on a north-south street or north on an east-west street.
- In a window — Hang the flag vertically with the stars to the left of anyone looking at it from the street.
- In a hall or lobby — Hang the flag vertically across from the main entrance with the stars to the left of anyone coming through the door.

Health insurance changes

Town to begin negotiation with unions

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

"If we take the Insurance Advisory Committee's recommendation we can save $320,000 for one year and give ourselves time to strategize."
Selectman Fred Koed

If all goes according to plan, the town is poised to save close to $300,000 in health insurance costs in the next fiscal year.

After considering the options available, the Board of Selectmen gave the go ahead to start negotiations with each of the town's employee unions about health insurance changes. The Insurance Advisory Committee, a group appointed by the Selectmen representing seven different unions and retirees, came forward with a recommendation for health care changes in late May.

Having the Town Manager negotiate directly with the unions at the bargaining table is the last step in a four-month process to evaluate health insurance within the town.

The Insurance Advisory Committee's recommendation came as the discussion – and turmoil – over health insurance in the state legislature is reaching a decision point. The result of these discussions is likely significant changes in the way health insurance is negotiated within municipalities and unions. At this time it's unclear what the new legislation will look like or mean for municipal employees.

The uncertainty at the state level – and the concern of losing control over health insurance provider and benefits – was one of the driving factors in the Selectmen's decision.

Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard advised the board to take the committee's recommendation.

"This will allow you to still hold the health insurance within the town," Lombard said.

Selectman Leland Jenkins did not want to move quickly, or make a rash decision, on something so expensive and important as health insurance.

"The town should develop a long-term health insurance strategy using real numbers," Jenkins said. He proposed a strategy meeting with relevant boards (Selectmen, School Committee, Advisory Committee) to hash out how to move forward with health insurance.

"This is a very important time. Health care has never been addressed before as far as I know," Jenkins said.

Selectman Fred Koed said he was in favor of looking at strategically at health insurance, but was concerned there was not enough time to effectively strategize before state legislation potentially changed.

"If we take the Insurance Advisory Committee's recommendation we can save $320,000 for one year and give ourselves time to strategize," Koed said.

Selectman Diane Kennedy agreed, "I don't want to get into a situation where we are forced or our employees are forces to accept something from the state."

Jenkins said he would like to evaluate the other healthcare provider options before moving forward.

"I know we can bring it back up again, but no one ever brings it back up again," Jenkins said.

From the audience, Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore said the bigger picture needed to be kept in mind.

"The unions have come together and done a terrific job in bringing forward a recommendation...some good will (could go a long way)," Pescatore said.

The Selectmen voted 4 to 1 (Jenkins against) to accept the recommendation of the Insurance Advisory Committee.

The recommended plan goes with the town's existing health care provider, MIIA (Massachusetts Interlocal Insurance Agency) and calls for increased co-pays almost across the board.

The town still has to negotiate with each of the unions individually in order to make changes to employee health insurance plans. The recommended plan could yield about 8 percent, or roughly $300,000, savings over the course of 12 months. The town has set aside $3,135,360 in fiscal 2012 for health insurance line item.

Cable update

Comcast customers watching the Board of Selectmen meeting on Tuesday night were unable to hear what was being said. The Cable Advisory Committee is aware of the issue and was working to have it resolved this week.

"The good news is the video is great, so if you can read lips you can enjoy the meeting," quipped Selectmen Vice Chair Paul Carlson.

The phone rang several times during the course of the Selectmen's meeting because Comcast customers tuning in couldn't hear the dialog.

Precincts stay the same

Following the 2010 census, the town is required to re-evaluate the town's election precincts. Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre said results from the census did not trigger a need for a precinct redistricting. Currently, the town is divided into two precincts along North and South Main Street.

According to the census, Cohasset's total population is 7,542. Precinct 1 contains 3,671 residents and Precinct 2 contains 3,871.

St. Pierre said if the population of either of the precincts goes over 4,000 it would trigger a re-districting, adding it's likely the town will need to re-draw the precincts — and create a third precinct — after the 2020 census.

As the local approving authority the Board of Selectmen needed to approve the legal description for each precinct by June 15. The board voted unanimously in favor of keeping the precincts the same.

TOWN MANAGER SEARCH

Two finalists interviewed

Selectmen to choose Town Manager next week

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset will have to wait until at least next week before knowing their next town manager.

After holding second interviews for two of the finalist candidates the Selectmen decided to sleep on it. They will reconvene on Wednesday, June 15 evening to likely make the final decision.

The two finalists, Michael Coughlin, the current town administrator in Westport, and John McAuliffe, the current town administrator in Webster, each spent an hour before the Board of Selectmen on Wednesday night.

Bill Griffin, who has served as Town Manager for five years, retired in October to take a job in the private sector. Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard who has led the town through the last eight months and the fiscal 2012 budget can only stay until the end of the month.

The board peppered the candidates with a series of questions ranging from labor negotiations to strategic planning to how they build consensus.

Selectmen were impressed with both candidates, their engagement in the process, and effort they put into finding out about the community.

What seems to separate the two candidates most starkly, according to the selectmen, are their management styles.

In his interview, Coughlin talked about this "cabinet style approach" to management. He relies on his department heads for feedback, direction and advice.

"If everyone is at a common table we can talk about common challenges," Coughlin said. Frequent department head meetings also give employees a place to channel the feedback they receive day in and day out from residents.

Coughlin also said the fact a new school superintendent is coming on at the same time as a new town manager could make for "unprecedented team approach."

During his interview, Coughlin drew a metaphor relating the town's employees to a family.

"(This is) a small town, it's not a big city, and at the end of the day we're a family. Just like brothers and sisters we might fight and disagree, but at the end of the day we're a family," Coughlin said.

John McAuliffe, the second candidate to interview, described his management style as hands-on, someone who listens and is responsive.

"I can proudly state I am one of the most accessible town managers in Massachusetts...the great thing about local government is you can walk into Town Hall and talk to the Town Manager," McAuliffe said. "I'm a stickler about getting back to people."

The Selectmen noticed McAuliffe was concise and to the point in his answers.

"He's a man of little words, but big action," said Selectmen chair Ted Carr.

When it came to attracting and maintaining a professional staff, McAuliffe said it was about treating people right.

"I tell my employees, I can never pay you what you're worth, but I'll be the best boss you ever had," McAuliffe said.

Selectmen also noted McAuliffe had made several visits to Cohasset to speak with town employees and get to know the town firsthand.

"There are a lot of nice things going on for a small town...there is a great sense of vibrancy in Cohasset," McAuliffe said.

Members of the board spent some time with both candidates in Cohasset on Wednesday afternoon before the interviews. Both candidates said they could be available to start this summer.

During deliberation following the interviews several of the selectmen said they were "in the middle," or only slightly leaning one way.

"We have to look after the town, we have a very tough year (financially) ahead," said Selectman Leland Jenkins.

Selectmen Diane Kennedy, Jenkins, Carr and Fred Koed all said they were leaning slightly toward Coughlin. They named his strengths as a team leader, his attorney background, his drive and ability to come up with ideas that were a little bit out of the box.

From the audience, Jack Keniley, who served on the town manager screening committee, said McAuliffe was "far and away" the committee's choice. This seemed to give the Selectmen pause.

Kennedy said she would like to do more research on the two finalists as far as checking references. The board wanted to talk with its town manager search consultant Thomas Groux before making a final decision.

Jenkins likened the situation to being on a jury, "although I don't think my decision is going to change, but it would be nice to sleep on it."

After the 35-minute deliberation Selectmen went into executive session to discuss strategy with respect to contract negotiation (with the potential town manager).

The Selectmen will meet on the evening of Wednesday (June 15) to likely choose the town's next Town Manager.

Village businesses host sidewalk sale

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

While the calendar hasn't made it official, the thermometer has made it very real: summer is here.

To welcome in the summer months, the village businesses have banded together to do something special in honor of the season – a sidewalk sale.

About a dozen of the retail businesses from Depot Court to North Main will place a selection of their discounted wares on the sidewalk on Saturday during their normal business hours. This is the first time the businesses have done something like this together.

"It's about creating a fun, relaxed, summery atmosphere in the village," said Paperscapes owner Beverly Bielewicz. "This is the time of year when there are tons of yard sales, so we figured why don't we do something similar?"

The merchants have delved into their backrooms and picked out a selection of items to offer at steep discounts. Some of the items are one of kind, some are seasonal pieces and some are things and some are things that just haven't found the right buyer yet.

"There are going to be some treasures to discover," said Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's Home Presence. The sidewalk sale is also a way for merchants to make way for new merchandise coming in.

Participating businesses will be found throughout the village. Ripley Road's All the Best and Wendy's Closet are participating. On Depot Court, Focus Gallery and Pink Tulip will have tables on the building's farmer's porch. New businesses flower shop Bumble Bee Landing and Outside In with its outdoor athletic items have gotten involved. Veteran village businesses on North Main, Fleming's, Darilynn's, Hernan's, Paperscapes, Ports & Co, and Twist are set to participate as well.

Hello Cohasset, how is everyone doing this week? The weather has certainly brought us into summer however, a few Spring-like days are in the forecast for those who do not love the heat. I am going to enjoy whatever the weather brings from here on in without complaint. It is what it is, each new day is a new chapter in the book of life so I guess, we need to embrace what we have, hold onto the memories of days gone by and look ahead to the days to come. Now, time to remember that in my (all of our) head(s). As we all know, graduation season is here and so many families are proud and happy for the newly graduated in their lives. It is such a happy time whether graduating from preschool, elementary school, high school or college, share the news with us all. I will begin the column with some families who have shared their pride with us this week.

That is the news for this week. I want to encourage and make sure that everyone reading this column remembers that in order for your news, celebrations, event information, photos and all other tidbits that you would like shared, I need to have the information and the go ahead to write about it, even if you give me the very basics. Over the last several weeks, I have had many wonderful readers of the Cohasset Mariner and the Around Town column ask why something did not appear in the column or why it appeared elsewhere in the paper. Some items, are mentioned in both the column and another key spot in the Mariner and others are either in the column or, placed in a spot more suited for the information being shared. The worst though, is when we do not get the information to place anywhere in the paper as we all love sharing and letting everyone know what is going on "AROUND TOWN" in Cohasset. Send in all of your news no LATER than 5 pm on Tuesdays for the Around Town Column and send it to me at...

New music camp puts kids center stage

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Music teacher Jim Armstrong is starting a country music day camp in August that will give kids a chance to feel like a country music star. His longtime students and talented musicians Anya Gruber (left) and Jenna Neer will serve as counselors. PHOTO BY NANCY WHITE

In Kenny Chesney's country hit, "Big Star" he tells a story about a talented young woman on her way to stardom.

A line of the chorus says, "If you work hard to get where you are it feels good in the hot spot light."

That line – and possibly the story it's a part of – could be part of the mantra for local guitar and music teacher Jim Armstrong's latest endeavor, Camp Country Music.

This August, Armstrong is introducing a day camp completely devoted to making each camper a "big star." The camp will be based at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, where there are classrooms and a stage with seating for 150 audience members. He'll need those seats to put every single camper on stage to perform as the lead singer of a seasoned country band, the New City Cowboys.

"My goal is to inspire these kids and show them that the distance between Taylor Swift and themselves is just a little hard work," Armstrong said.

Armstrong has called upon local musical talent to serve as the counselors and instructors at Camp Country Music. Among them are recently graduated Cohasset High senior Jenna Neer and CHS junior Anya Gruber. Both have been students of his for several years, are seasoned guitarists, songwriters and performers.

The only requirements for Camp Country Music are campers must love to sing, love music and be open-minded.

Over the course of the week the participants will write the lyrics to an original country music song with their peers, record that song, participate in song circles and, to cap off the week, perform a song with a live band in front of friends and family.

Over the course of the week the participants will write the lyrics to an original country music song with their peers, record that song, participate in song circles and, to cap off the week, perform a song with a live band in front of friends and family.

A country music day camp might be one of a kind, Armstrong said. Even in Nashville, the hometown of country music, there is nothing specifically geared toward country music. But, with the burgeoning popularity of country music, it seemed like the perfect time to try something new.

"I noticed my very talented students were coming and going to specialty camps throughout the summer. I figured why don't I have a specialty camp?"

And so the idea was born. "This is a country music fantasy camp. I want to show kids just how much fun it is to play with a band," Armstrong said.

Armstrong is hoping to replicate the friendly, supportive and talented atmosphere of Nashville at his camp. He aims to teach the students the power and magic of collaboration.

"No one makes it in this world by themselves...everybody has unique talents and if you pool them together that's when something special happens," Armstrong said.

The counselors hope to impart a love of country music, develop confidence in the campers, and help them on their way to stardom.

"It's going to be awesome to play music with kids all day," Anya said. Five years ago Anya said she wouldn't even sing in front of her sister, but now she feels prepared to sing to thousands. "Even if you're nervous, you can channel those nerves into energy."

Country music calls for more than just singing notes on a state, it requires the singer to connect with the song and the lyrics.

"You have to let the audience feel the words; (the singer) has to be in tune with the emotion of the song," said Jenna Neer, who said she hasn't stopped singing since she was three.

Armstrong said country music is the one of the few popular genres of music that can sound good with an acoustic guitar and a voice – and it's in this simplicity that true talent can be found.

"If you can touch and feel the music and the emotion – you can do as well as any country music star," Armstrong said.

Camp Country Music has three weeklong sessions in August beginning on August 8. The camp will run from 9a.m. to 3:30p.m. The camp is open for kids ages 8 to 16.

For more information, visit www.campcountrymusic.com or call camp director Jim Armstrong at 781-775-1039.

First Parish lobster roll sale

For many years, First Parish in Cohasset has offered the community a lobster roll sale during Father's Day weekend accompanying the South Shore Art Center's show and artists' sale on Cohasset Common. The Lobster Roll sale now runs under the direction of Art and Penny Myles with more than 60 volunteers handling all the details and enjoying the fun.

The sale has grown to reach many surrounding towns and businesses; some even plan Employee Appreciation Days around the sale. The Second Congregational Church's Strawberry Shortcake sale on the same weekend has helped to develop a tradition for many to enjoy the lobster rolls followed by this dessert.

Lobster rolls will be available at the South Shore Art Festival on Friday through Sunday of Father's Day weekend, June 17, 18 and 19. The all-meat lobster rolls and a bag of Cape Cod potato chips have held their price of $13 for several years. They are so popular that pre-ordering is recommended. Walk-ins are welcome as long as supplies last. More than 60 volunteers contributed to the sale of nearly 1,200 lobster rolls last year.

There are several ways to place an order: Pick up an order form at the Parish House from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday through Thursday; call Penny Myles at 781-749-1989 or First Parish Church at 781-383-1100; or email tfparish02@comcast.net. Pre-orders will be accepted until 6 p.m., on Thursday, June 16. Orders may be picked up at the Parish House, 23 North Main St., Cohasset: Friday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturday, 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Children's Room featuring Eric Carle inspired exhibit

After recently finishing a weeklong author study of Eric Carle and his works, the children at Carriage House Nursery School were inspired to create their own books in a similar fashion. The children made long, colorful painted brush strokes using various art tools, and when dry they cut and glued on the colored pieces to illustrate their stories.

These wonderful homemade books are now proudly on display in Mrs. Moody's children's room at the Paul Pratt Library. Please stop by soon to view them!

Tennis benefit serves Children's Hospital

Sign up today for the annual Cohasset Tennis Benefit for Children's Hospital Boston. In addition to mixed doubles of all levels, a new spin this year includes ladies' and junior doubles teams. Registration is $200 per team by June 15th and $250 thereafter.

You don't have to play the game to serve the cause. Come to the Friday night "Rally for Children's" or spend a summer afternoon cheering players and showing support for Children's.

Art students paint mural

Brightens up school cafeteria

Dave DeGennaro, the school department business manager and acting superintendent, has been requesting a mural to pep up the dark cafeteria for years. He's now quite happy because students in the painting class created a mural specifically designed for students. They each chose photos of fruits and vegetables to enlarge for the wall.

Among all of the students, they had taken all of the art classes the school offered, so a mural was a way to "reinvent" painting for these specific kids. It's obvious that they have all taken art before, since the mural shows talent.

Troop 28 reunites lost dog with family

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

When Troop 28 set out on a training hike in the Blue Hills in preparation for their trip to New Mexico next month, they weren't looking to be someone's heroes. But, like true boy scouts, they were prepared to be.

On Sunday, about a dozen boys, ranging in age from 13 to 16, were hiking along the Blue Hill skyline trail. Fifteen-year-old Brodie Jackisch was ahead of the group when right in front of him the unusual happened: a five-foot tall deer ran across the trail followed closely by a small dog in pursuit. An owner of the dog was nowhere in sight.

"The dog had to come from somewhere," Brodie recalled thinking. A few minutes later, the small black and white dog was coming up the trail panting and exhausted. Using dog treats Brodie had serendipitously picked up previously on the hike, he was able to lure the dog over to him.

"I'm a scout so I picked them up thinking they might be useful," Brodie said, who recently earned his dog-care merit badge. He recalled those skills as he approached the dog.

"I tried to stay calm so he would stay calm. You never know how a dog is going to react, especially without his owner around," he said.

Brodie pulled a length of rope from his pack for a makeshift leash. One of the adult leaders called the cell phone numbers on the dog's tag and got in touch with one of his owners, Susan Goldwitz.

Goldwitz's husband, David Deininger, had been hiking with the one-and-a-half year old Catahoula Leopard Dog mix breed dog named Merlin off-leash when the dog spotted the deer.

"My husband takes Merlin to the Blue Hills almost every weekend it's nice out. But, this time our well behaved little pup saw the deer and his instincts took over," Goldwitz said.

After receiving the call, Goldwitz, a Brookline resident, jumped in her car to pick the Merlin up. In the meantime, the scouts kept a close eye on the dog.

"We all worked together to keep the dog company," Brodie said.

When Goldwitz arrived in the parking lot Merlin was as happy as could be.

"The boys were all around him; he was loving the attention. He had to be the most happy rescued dog in all of Massachusetts," Goldwitz said.

After Goldwitz arrived, by happy coincidence, her husband Deininger, who had been frantically searching for Merlin in the woods, was surprised to come upon the scene — and his dog — in the parking lot.

They chatted with the scouts and the scoutmasters for a little while, Merlin showed off a few tricks, before both parties went their separate ways.

Goldwitz contacted the Mariner on Monday morning to share the story.

"It was a happy ending to a long day. The message is a scout is helpful," said Kim Ackley, assistant scoutmaster and one of the Boy Scout leaders on the hike.

For Merlin's family, "helpful" doesn't quite describe it.

"These are wonderful, awesome young men. Merlin is the lucky one in all of this, and us too," Goldwitz said. "They would not take a reward and they were the most gracious, mature and friendly boys. We were just so happy Merlin was safe."

The Boy Scout Troop 28 will head to Philmont Scout Ranch in New Mexico in early July and complete a 75-mile hike, including ascending Pike's Peak. Brodie is not part of the Philmont Crew but was invited to join his fellow scouts from the troop for the day.

OUR VIEW

A look back to 1993

While we realize some of our recent high school graduates were born in 1992 or even 1994 – we think the majority probably entered this world, some 18 years ago in 1993.

For many grandparents and parents, 1993 seems like yesterday – but for the Cohasset High graduates of 2011, it is a lifetime.

Thanks to the wonders of the Internet – one can take a look back to 1993 without much difficulty. In some ways, looking at the list, times do not appear to have changed all that much but in other ways, they have changed a lot.

Here are some interesting 1993 highlights from thepeoplehistory.com

• For the first time Islamic Fundamentalists bomb World Trade Center.

• A magnitude 7.8 earthquake off Hokkaido, Japan launches a devastating tsunami, killing 202 on the small island of Okushiri, Hokkaido

• World Health Organization W.H.O. estimates 14 million people worldwide infected with the AIDS Virus

• President Bill Clinton is inaugurated for his first term

• Other world leaders include: President of France François Mitterrand, German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, General Secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union Boris Yeltsin, United Kingdom Prime Minister John Major.

Space Shuttle Endeavour mission repairs an optical flaw in the Hubble Space Telescope

• The ever-popular Beanie Babies are launched.

• In technology the first bagless vacuum cleaner is invented and Intel introduces the Pentium Processor.

• Popular musicians include: Garth Brooks, Janet Jackson, Snoop Dog, Aerosmith, Mariah Carey and Madonna.

• Popular films include: "Schlinder's List," "Robin Hood (Men in Tights)," "The Firm," "The Fugitive," "In the Line of Fire" and "Sleepless in Seattle."

• Tuition to Harvard was $23,514; a movie ticket cost $4; a gallon of gas cost $1.16 and the year-end close of the Dow Jones Industrial Average was 3654.

In 1993, here at the Mariner – we did not yet have email and did not use the Internet. We had to rely on the telephone and used the fax machine constantly!

Going forward, we wish the members of the Class of 2011 well in their college and work careers and in their personal lives. We hope they will follow their dreams. We hope they will try to make a difference in our country and our world through whatever field they pursue: business, the arts, parenthood, technology, medicine and so on.

Eighteen years from now, the members of the Class of 2011 will be in their mid-30s with most of their lives still stretched out before them.

We hope they will check back in with us over the years and share their milestones and accomplishments.

Stay 'tooned

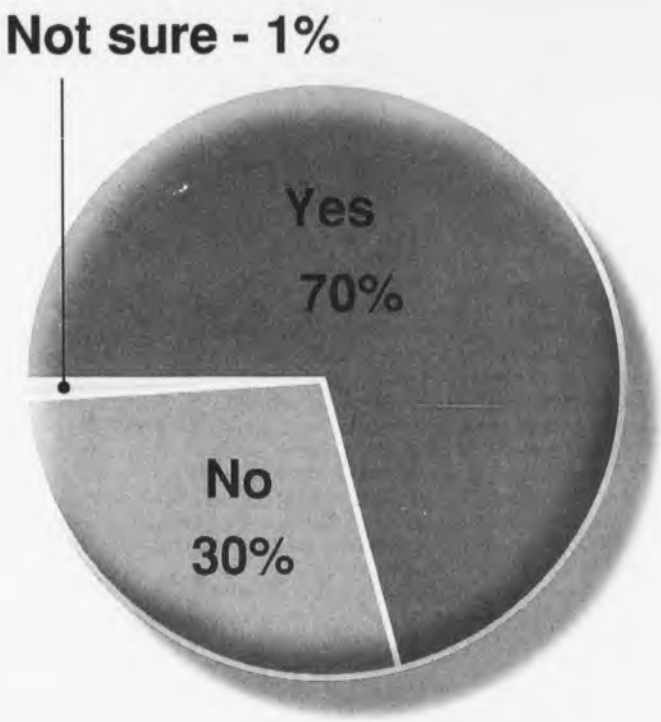
Cohasset Mariner cartoonist Jim Hamilton will be back next week.

WICKED LOCAL POLL

Poll asks about support for police K-9 unit

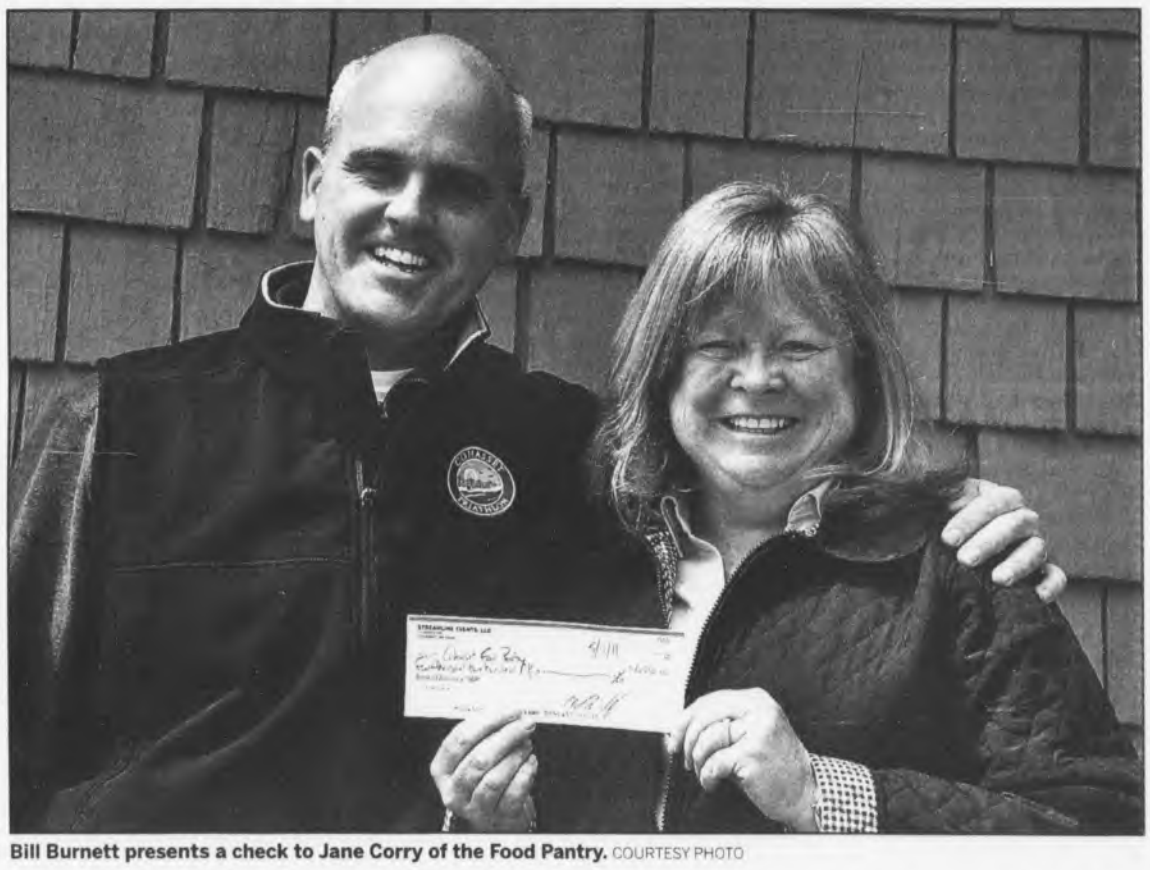
Police Chief Mark DeLuca presented his proposal to create a police K-9 unit to the Board of Selectmen recently, but he also was presenting it to the community at large.

Over the past two weeks we have asked our readers to weigh in on the K-9 unit. Through our website, we asked readers, "Does Cohasset need a Police K-9?" The potential responses were: yes, no, and not sure.



We received a total of 176 votes as of Thursday morning – and the results were decidedly in favor of the K-9.

"Yes" received 70 percent, or 124 votes



"No" received 28 percent, or 49 votes

"Not sure" received 1 percent, or 3 votes

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Cohasset Triathlon gives back

On behalf of our race coordinators and athletes, I delivered a $4,250 check this week to Jane Corry, co-director of the Cohasset Food Pantry. This was a result of the 50 charity spots we added to the race field. I learned from Jane that the demand for the food pantry's services has nearly quadrupled in the last couple years. The need from our "neighbors" is strong and funding for the program is donated entirely from community organizations and individuals.

I am proud that the Cohasset Triathlon, an event started to help promote our town, is able to give back in a very meaningful way. Thank you for your support. - Bill Burnett, 11 Linden Dr.

CDTC's movie night on Friday, June 10

The feature for this month, reflective of the 150th anniversary of the Civil War, will be the 1989 movie, "Glory." "Glory," starring Matthew Broderick, Denzel Washington and Cary Elwes, depicts the battle at Fort Wagner, S.C., between the soldiers of the Black Regiment, the 54th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry and a Confederate Regiment, in North's assault on the Confederate fort, Fort Wagner. The fort, built on Morris Island, defended Charleston's harbor. Members of the 54th Brigade scaled the fort's parapet with Gould leading the charge, but after hand-to-hand combat they were driven out with heavy casualties. The attack on the fort by three Federal regiments, including the 54th Massachusetts, failed leaving many of its soldiers, including Colonel Shaw who was killed leading the charge, dead, wounded or captured.

The soldiers of the 54th Massachusetts were hailed for their bravery and conduct which improved the reputation of African-American's as soldiers, leading to greater recruitment of African Americans that strengthened the northern states numerical advantage.

The majestic bas relief of Colonial Shaw and the 54th Infantry by sculptor Augustus St. Rodin faces the Massachusetts State House on Beacon Hill.

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee hopes the public will view this award winning film in the meeting room of Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 7 p.m., on Friday, June 10.

Representative Bradley to host office hours

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, will host district office hours from 6 to 7 p.m., on Monday June 13, at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham. Enter through the Route 3A side entrance of the building into his district office.

People who are unable to attend scheduled office hours, but would like to meet with Rep. Bradley, can call 617-722-2520 to schedule an appointment at their convenience.

Discussion on used cars

Kevin Kelley, the owner of the 154-156 King St. where Dunkin' Donuts and Constantine's Restaurant are located, came before the Board of Selectmen for permission to sell up to three used cars in front of the building.

Kelley said an ATM was previously located in the building, but it recently vacated the space. The small space is not suited for much else besides an ATM machine. He plans to use parking spaces adjacent to the former ATM space to showcase high-end vehicles.

Selectman Leland Jenkins said the town needs to establish a policy regarding the sale of used cars.

"(Otherwise) 3A is going to be all used cars and I don't think the people of Cohasset wanted that," Jenkins said. For example, he said the town of Weymouth allows the sale of used cars if there is space on the property to repair them. "(The sale of used cars) shouldn't be in front of a restaurant."

Over the course of the last year several requests for used car licenses have come forward. Most recently, the Board of Selectmen allowed the owners of the Mobil located at the corner of Sohier Street and Route 3A to sell up to five used cars on their property.

Selectmen Fred Koed said the selectmen should survey the surrounding towns to see what their policy is. "I don't want to set a precedent that comes back to haunt us," Koed said.

Kelley agreed to wait on a decision for his license request until the selectmen had time to discuss a policy.

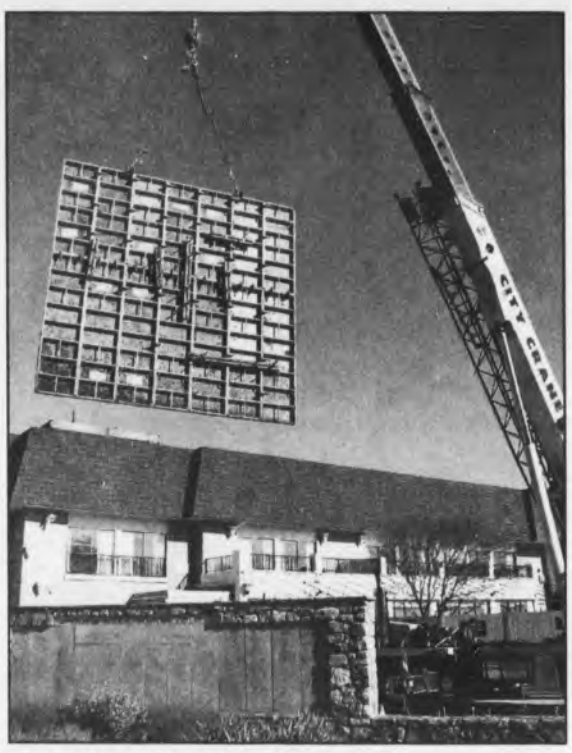
MAKING TRACKS



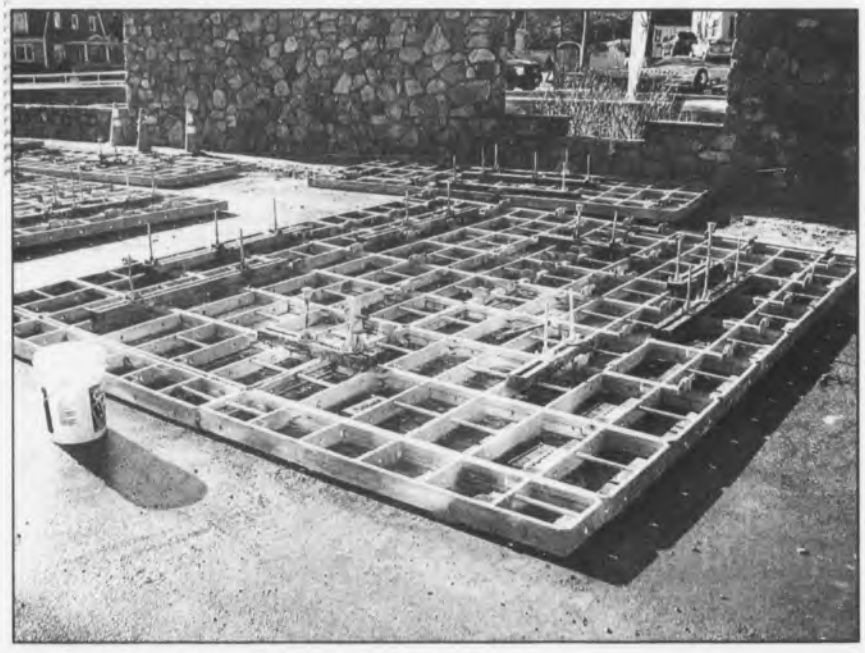
Newly paved roads are so nice

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

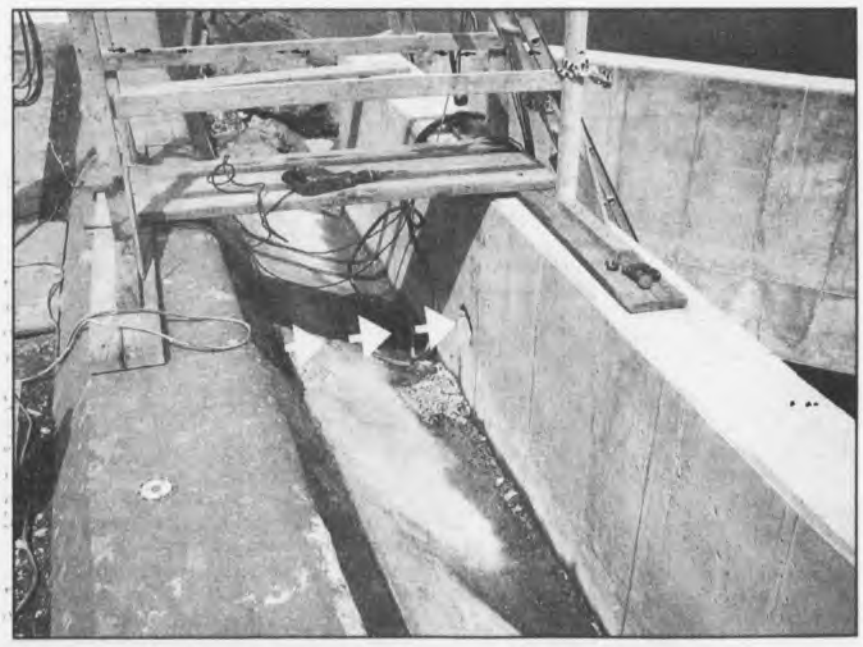
Little Harbor Project — You may have noticed that a lot of paving was done this past week to pretty much complete the paving of Jerusalem Road and its side roads. There is a bit of paving that needs to be completed along driveway aprons that was not done by the main paving crew on Tuesday and Wednesday of this past week. As we go to press this is scheduled to be done today, Friday June 10th. So, the end is truly in sight. But, a word of caution, please watch your speed on our newly paved roads. With our children about to leave school for the summer we all must be extra careful, especially with the temptation to go a little faster because the road is so nice.

Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project —At this point in our description of the project, the concrete has been poured between the forms to create the triangular gate chamber walls. Once the concrete has been cured and has developed most of its strength the forms could be removed. Remember, the forms were made up of small sections of special steel panels bolted together side-by-side in an erector set fashion. To remove the forms, large sections are unbolted from each other and lifted from the harbor to the adjacent parking lot where they could be further dismantled. A large truck mounted crane was used to lift the large form sections to dry land. Only the boom of the crane is visible in the first photo, but you can see one of the large sections of form as it was being lifted from the harbor area.

Once the large forms were dismantled they became much easier to handle, stack and store. As an interesting note, these forms are usually rented by the contractor and are returned to the rental company to await another project for another contractor.



Large section of form being lifted away.



Once the forms were removed, the "large construction phase" of this project was over. The remaining work, at this point, consisted of many varied smaller tasks that needed to be done, but are nonetheless very important. For example, underground conduit had to be run from the place where the controls would be located, to the inside of the new gate chamber. In order to do this, holes had to be drilled through the old concrete wall that abuts the sidewalk along edge of the harbor. Another hole had to be drilled through the new gate chamber wall to the inside of the gate chamber. After the holes were drilled through the concrete, the electrician could run metal conduit through them in preparation for bringing electrical power to the new sluice gate.

The third photo may be a bit confusing, when you first look at it. We'll try to help you make some sense out of it. The new gate chamber concrete walls are to the right hand side. The old concrete wall that runs adjacent to the walkway parallel to the harbor is to the left. A temporary wooden workman's bridge spans the two walls so that the workers can get over to the gate chamber. The arrows in the photo indicate the path the electrical conduit will take which will carry electrical power and control signals to the new motorized sluice gate. If you should happen to visit the work site today, you will see that these conduits are now in place between the two walls. With each step, we come closer to the day when the new gate can be put into operation.

HEALTH NOTES

Food nutrient evolution

STEVE BOBO

How has our health been changed by the fact that for purposes of efficiency, the foods naturally occupying this earth have been altered so they may be produced more efficiently? Can we expect common foods like lettuce, beans, carrots or meats, and even seafood, to change their makeup and nutrient value, taste and character by being mass-produced?

Evolution prescribed our diets long ago. Consider: All the animals on the planet need only venture beyond their den's opening to find sustenance. And humans too, used to do the same. Nature's pantry is stocked full with meat, fruits and vegetables, insects, fish and other moving things. We were designed, from the beginning, to eat the foods grown nearby. Packaging and processing is a trend so new you could barely blink an eye at it. For hundreds of thousands of years we have been hunting and gathering our food, not walking down isles of extended shelf life products. So, in answer to the question, yes: It is safe to eat unadulterated foods and nothing but unadulterated foods. Every animal on the earth does it, and our human ancestors used to do it too (some remote humans today still do). The question remains: What happens to common foods such as those mentioned above when they become mass-produced?

Presumably, we're the better for it. Disease is scarce in modern man because we have not evolved, in all our hundreds of thousands of years, to eat foods which are devoid of life and nutrients, enhanced by sweeteners, condiments, preservatives and taste changers. In traditional cultures, of the few uncivilized peoples left on earth, sometimes we observe firsthand their superior health.

Many of our modern habits' adapted from our human proclivities may also be suspect. Beware the ice cold drink on a hot day. Many tantalizing beverages are packed with high fructose corn syrup or massive amounts of sugar and additives. Hydration enhancers do little to replenish liquids in the body. Gatorade is basically water with artificial colors, flavors, salt and high fructose corn syrup. A more expensive substitute: Coconut water contains all the electrolytes the body needs to hydrate and with no added sugar. Many electrolyte powders may be added to filtered water to make it more like sports water. Most have less desirable fructose, salt and sugar.

One of the biggest summer treats is firing up the barbeque grill. The smell of food cooking on the grill can be intoxicating, but the end result is often toxic. Direct flame grilling produces certain carcinogens. On the other hand, a skillful barbecue chef can sear and brown using grids, and perhaps a pan or skillet on the grill. Eating grilled food with plenty of antioxidant-rich (brightly colored) veggies will balance the meal. Some nutritionists condemn factory farmed meat and poultry because they contain many hormones, pesticides and chemicals. Others decry organically grown vegetables, beef and poultry. How do we guard against the known dangers? Recent outbreaks of illnesses from E. coli include undercooked beef, sausage and contaminated produce. Typical signs of food borne illness include nausea, vomiting, cramps and diarrhea. Young children, pregnant women, older people and those with compromised immune systems are hit hardest.

Bacteria, whether in food or in the air, grow faster in warmer weather. Don't only worry about the potato salad or egg dishes, says Marlene Clark, a registered dietician at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center. "You have to be careful with any food, including melons and lettuce," she said. Since 1996, the FDA has responded to 14 outbreaks of food borne illness for which fresh lettuce or fresh tomatoes were the confirmed or suspected source. The causes included E. coli, salmonella, cyclosporine and hepatitis A virus.

What you can do? Remember the basics for the entire family. Wash hands well and often with soap and water before cooking or eating. Also wash surfaces when cooking, keep raw food separate from cooked food, marinate food in the refrigerator, cook food thoroughly, and refrigerate or freeze food promptly. The FDA suggests never leaving food out for more than one hour when the temperature is above 90 F. Any other time, don't leave food out for more than two hours. Keep hot food hot and cold food cold. Wash off fruits and vegetables with cool running water. Also, scrub fruits having rough surfaces like cantaloupe with a soft brush.

When packing food for a picnic, place cold food in a cooler with plenty of ice or commercial freezing gels. Cold food should be held at or below 40 F and the cooler should be stored in shade. Hot food should be wrapped well, placed in an insulated container and kept at or above 140 F.

Those with food borne illness must stay hydrated: By chewing on ice chips or sipping clear fluid after vomiting has stopped. Then seek emergency treatment if severe pain accompanies the illness; if vomiting doesn't stop in a couple of hours, or if bloody diarrhea is experienced.

The great majority of foods we eat have been adapted to fit our tastes; also adapted by new technologies into ever more sophisticated lifestyles. Few populations, at least near Cohasset, are becoming smaller or less sophisticated. Accordingly, we are doomed to live with our evolving food supply and the other accoutrements of our lifestyle.

FOR THE RECORD

Wicked weather hits close to home

GREGORY MATHIS

Coming off a rather harsh winter by most standards, the spring ended with a twist we haven't seen in these parts for quite some time.

The three tornadoes that touched down in the western part of the state last Wednesday, June 1, had far-reaching impact throughout the state. As the weather system moved east, it set off some violent thunderstorms that resulted in several homes being damaged by spectacular lightning strikes.

The day after the tornadoes, pieces of debris and paper from those areas were found in back yards to the east of the storms, including Hingham, Weymouth, Braintree and Milton.

Then there was the chilling tale of students from Hanover High School returning from a band competition at Six Flags in Agawam and practically driving through a tornado on their return trip home.

Bad weather can make for some great stories. Of course, we mourn the four people confirmed dead as a result of those storms and empathize with the many who had their homes destroyed and lost everything, but from those piles of rubble come stories of great compassion, courage and community.

Neighbors helping neighbors.

People putting themselves in harm's way to help others.

Often, we see the best in people during the very worst of times. The aftermath of last week's tornadoes seems to be one of those times as people begin to rebuild their lives. It will be a long and slow process.

We're accustomed to some pretty bad weather in Massachusetts, although we're usually not dealing with deadly tornadoes.

The Blizzard of '78 is the standard by which all winter storms are measured. If you lived in the area back then, you likely have a story to tell about where you were, what you were doing and the impact the storm had on you.

The Perfect Storm, or as it was referred to at the time, the Halloween Storm of 1991, has been immortalized by a best-selling book by Sebastian Junger and Hollywood movie. The focus of the book and movie was the story leading up to the sinking of the fishing boat Andrea Gail. While that storm technically wasn't a hurricane, the extra-tropical low stirred up the seas and pounded the coast of Massachusetts with heavy rain and damaging winds.

Massachusetts has been relatively lucky over the years when it comes to hurricanes. While we've had some glancing blows and close calls, we really haven't dealt with a direct hit since Hurricane Bob in August of 1991. Bob was a moderate hurricane that packed a solid punch and left an impressive path of damage through southeastern Massachusetts.

Then there are the tornadoes. While tornadoes are fairly infrequent in Massachusetts, there have been some deadly, powerful storms that have ripped through the western and central part of the state. Before last Wednesday's outbreak of three tornadoes, an F4 tornado touched ground in Great Barrington on Memorial Day in 1995, killing three people and causing mass destruction.

The deadliest tornado in New England history, also an F4, occurred June 9, 1953, in Worcester, killing 94 people, leaving more than 10,000 homeless and destroying a city.

In many ways, we're fortunate to live in a place where we can actually enjoy the changing of the seasons, although it does come with the possibility of some wicked weather, which we saw first-hand last week.

GRADUATION

that this class will achieve," Quebec said. He encouraged his class, using a quote from Shakespeare's "Hamlet," to be true to themselves in all their future pursuits.

Valedictorian Emily Toomey had tallied the days the class has spent together, dating back to kindergarten at Osgood School: 2,340.

"No one here today doubts our abilities to succeed, and truthfully no one close to us ever will, except ourselves. And when that point comes, we will need to look up and observe the faces of the crowd around us," Toomey said. She described her class as "graduates with brimming potential" and group of the most inspiring people she had ever had the honor of knowing.

"After more than 13 years together, I will earnestly miss each of you more than I can fathom, and, while I wish you all the best of luck, I know you don't need it. After all, with nearly 90 friends to support us, who can help but succeed?" Toomey concluded her speech to rousing applause.

In a showing of unity and in the spirit of cooperation the two salutatorians, Sam Green and Mike Monaco, teamed up to deliver a speech.

Mike Monaco spoke of how Cohasset epitomizes the phrase "it takes a village to raise a child." He asked his classmates to note those seated in the Music Circus: classmates, parents, siblings, teacher, coaches and others who have helped the students navigate through their journey.

"And that more that anything else is what I believe the epitome of growing up in Cohasset is; everyone helping you towards success, but not spoon-feeding it to you. This community has helped each of us find our way to this point, and through that journey also find ourselves," Monaco said.

Green told his class they are ready to move into the next phase of life.

"Though this day is like any other — 24 hours, sunrise, sunset — it is our day to move past what is known and to embrace what is dreamt of," Green told his fellow graduates.

Interim superintendent Dave DeGennaro told the class they all can make a difference in this whatever they may choose to do. He imparted on the graduates bits of wisdom that could help them through whatever life throws at them, from believing in yourself to persisting no matter the odds to finding their passion in life and living with integrity. He told them to keep family and friends close.

"Always put your best effort forward, but have fun along the way," DeGennaro said. "All of you have a special gift to offer the world."

Middle High School principal Joel Antolini spent a few minutes noting the graduates many individual and collective accomplishments. Thirty students, over one-third of the class, are members of the National Honor Society. The class included top-scoring mathletes and debaters.

"This class has found ways to be successful through collaboration rather than competition," Antolini said.

The seniors led six teams to South Shore League titles this year and 13 out of 15 teams competed in tournament play. Over the course of their high school careers students competed six times for a state title and won four of them. The class leaves behind beautiful murals throughout the school and some were honored in the State Drama Festival. They volunteered and worked to make a difference in the community in diverse ways.

Perhaps more importantly, Antolini said, the students put their heart into what they did.

"This class participated in activities because they wanted to be there, not because it looked good on a resume. This class has heart, character, and passion," Antolini said.

Retiring faculty was also recognized. Penelope Brindley, a math teacher at the high school for the past 10 years, received a standing ovation from the Class of 2011. Betsy McGrath, who has served as the Deer Hill adjustment counselor for past 12 years, was recognized for her dedication, but was not able to attend the ceremony.

Sam Green seemed to capture the feeling of the day in the conclusion of his speech with fellow salutatorian.

"Regardless of our futures, we 89 human beings shall always be the Cohasset High School Class of 2011. Our of every person who has ever lived and every person who will ever come into this world, only 89 will share this bond...we will always have the time we shared," Green said. "We are the Cohasset High School Class of 2011. And because we are, because we were, we will always be. May you never cease to inspire."

Class president Christian Quebec led his class in moving the tassel from right to left to signify the passage from candidate to graduate.

Woops, cheers and dozens of blue and white caps in the air followed immediately after.

Class of 2011 valedictorian Emily Toomey marches into the Cohasset High School graduation, at the South Shore Music Circus, Saturday, June 4.

Cohasset adopts military covenant

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, and Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, announced that a recognition ceremony took place June 9 in the House Members Lounge at the State House to mark the Town of Cohasset's adoption of the Massachusetts Military Community Covenant, the first town on the South Shore to sign the agreement.

Among the guests in attendance were Secretary of Veterans Services Coleman Nee, Selectman Fred Koed, Interim Town Manager Stephen Lombard, Mass. Bay Association of the U.S. Army Col. Edward Graham (Ret.), Police Chief Mark DeLuca, Sons of the American Legion SQ118 Commander Thomas Wigmore, Elder Affairs Director Coral Grande and members of the Cohasset Elder Affairs Board of Directors, and Lt. Col. Patrick Mackin, Commander of the New England Recruiting Battalion. The keynote speech was given by Robert Soeldner, the Civilian Aide to the Secretary of the Army. House and Senate Resolutions were presented to the town as well.

The Cohasset Community Covenant is designed to foster and sustain effective state and community partnerships with all military branches of service to improve the quality of life for service members and their families who reside in Cohasset. The agreement, signed by the Cohasset Board of Selectmen on Feb. 15, 2011, is a formal commitment of support to soldiers and their families.

"A partnership like the one outlined by the Cohasset Covenant shows the true power of community. Increasing the quality of life for our service men and women is something we can all be proud of," Hedlund said. "I applaud all those involved for their commitment to our veterans, and hope to see this covenant spread to other communities across the Commonwealth."

Bradley said, "This program links community support to the specific needs of soldiers and their families, providing alternatives to military services, filling gaps in service, and supplementing the efforts of local veterans agents. I commend the Board of Selectmen, local officials and our veterans for their leadership in establishing the covenant, and hope it will inspire other towns to do likewise."

The Cohasset Community Covenant Military Support Committee, made up of DeLuca, Graham, Grande, Wigmore, and Veterans Agent Joseph McElroy, will serve as a coordination point for activities. They plan to meet quarterly to organize Cohasset-based programs and services for all military service members and/or their families, as appropriate.

"I applaud all those involved for their commitment to our veterans, and hope to see this covenant spread to other communities across the Commonwealth."
State Sen. Robert Hedlund

Cohasset became the 10th community to adopt the covenant, joining Ayer, Billerica, Fitchburg, Gloucester, Ipswich, Lowell, Peabody, Salem and Shirley in pledging support for members of the armed forces and their families. Since the program was started three years ago in Columbus, Ga., more than 530 covenants have been signed in 49 states, three territories and the District of Columbia.

Need for Connect-CTY policy

By Nancy White
nwhite@wickedlocal.com

Veterans Agent Joe McElroy called for a review of the policy governing the town's Connect-CTY system, an automated town-wide calling system, after confusion resulted over a message he requested to go out alerting residents to the Monday observances of Memorial Day and traffic-related issues.

A frustrated McElroy explained the timeline of his request during the public comment period of Tuesday's Selectmen meeting. He said a town-wide message was distributed to all homes in Cohasset prior to the 2010 Memorial Day observances. He again asked for permission to use the Connect-CTY system this year for a similar message.

McElroy thought the message was all set, but received information on the Saturday of Memorial Day weekend that the message would not go out. Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard told him on Tuesday (May 31) that the Connect-CTY system was only to be used in emergencies and the advisory of Memorial Day services did not qualify.

"I admit my primary motivation in asking for the Memorial Day (Connect-CTY) announcement is to prompt citizen awareness...however, I have also been acutely aware of recent tragedies in Plymouth and Whitman at Veteran's observances," McElroy said. With that light, he said there were traffic and safety concerns in connection with the Memorial Day observances.

McElroy asked the selectmen to review their policy on the Connect-CTY system to ensure clarity going forward.

"We have major things go on in this town, like the road race and triathlon, that can cause safety and traffic concerns...I still say residents should be notified," McElroy said.

Town officials have also asked McElroy to develop a database of veterans and surviving spouses phone numbers, so he can distribute information specifically to that group through the Connect-CTY system.

The Board of Selectmen agreed to have a discussion on the policy at an upcoming meeting. Lombard said he would invite Emergency Management director Glenn Pratt to the meeting because that group oversees the system.

CPC

from the Board of Selectmen to the Recycling Committee to the Advisory Committee. He has also brought forward several Community Preservation projects in recent years, including the renovation of Beechwood Ballpark and Meetinghouse Pond and replacement of the Town Hall main doors.

But, it was Brown's extensive involvement in the town that worked against him in this appointment. Both selectmen Leland Jenkins and Fred Koed said they'd like to see new people on boards.

"(Brown) has been on many committees, both elected and appointed; he's done everything in town and done it right," Jenkins said.

"We've been trying to get new people to come in...there are plenty of projects to get (Brown) involved in," Koed said. Since Brown has brought forward some of the most visible and impactful CPC projects, Koed said he'd hate to see him get on the other side of the table.

After Bonetti received the unanimous appointment to the CPC, Brown said he already had another CPC project proposal in the works.

Bonetti has been both a supporter and a critic of the Community Preservation at Town Meeting, depending on the project. He said he has always had an interest in the program and has studied the Community Preservation Act extensively.

"There needs to be a tightening of oversight (on the funds) because of the state match is much less now...it's more incumbent on us to spend the money wisely," Bonetti said.

Community Preservation funds are drawn from two sources: a local real estate tax surcharge of 1.5 percent and some level of state match, determined year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.)

When Cohasset first adopted the Community Preservation Act the town was receiving a dollar for dollar match from the state. In 2011 a 27 percent state match on every local dollar is anticipated. In 2010, that match was about 35 percent.

Community Preservation funding can only be used for very specific purposes: open space, recreation, affordable housing, and historic preservation.

In the spring, longtime Community Preservation Committee chair Stuart Ivimey resigned from his position. He had served as the citizen-at-large member on the committee since its creation. His resignation created the opening on the committee. John Waal is the current chair of the CPC.

Selectmen approve water department's debt transfer request

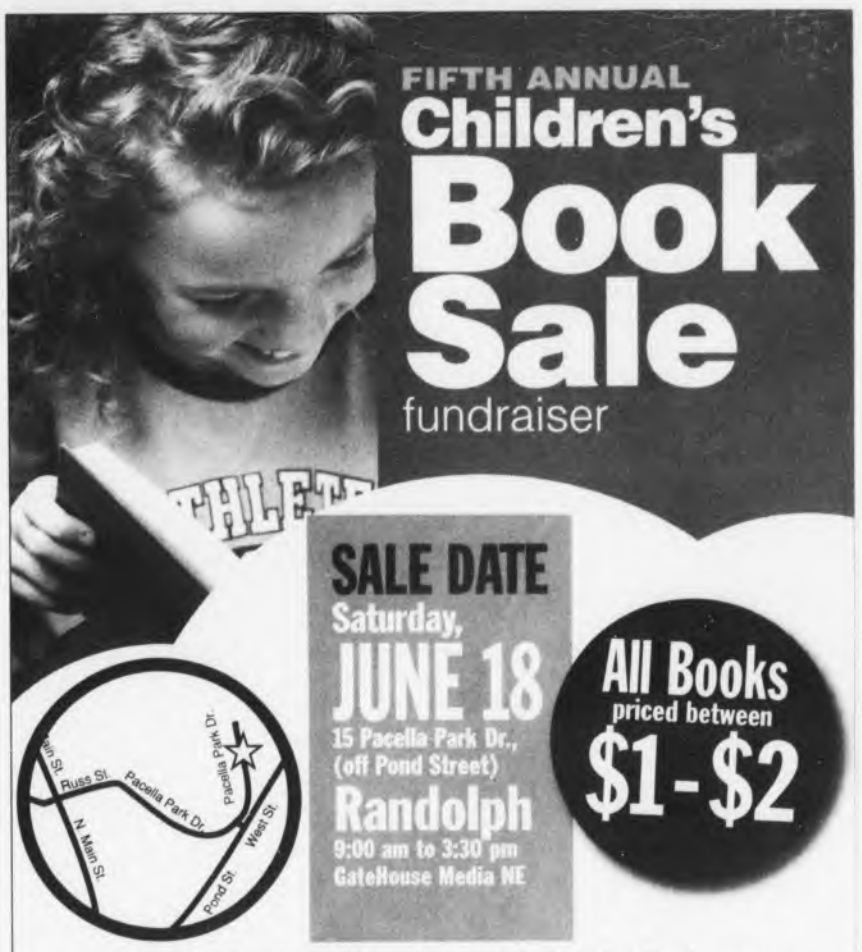
Interim Town Manager Steve Lombard presented a request to transfer $65,124.50 from the water department's debt service line item to general expenses. According to Lombard, the town accountant has received invoices for work done and the existing budget line items do not have enough to cover the expenses.

From the audience, Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore said he was concerned this issue had not been communicated from the Water Commission.

"We've been given assurance everything was hunky dory and now there is a fairly large number out there to get there," Pescatore said.

Lombard said the money was in the budget, but it was not in the appropriate line item.

"For whatever reason Town Meeting appropriated for debt service more than what was needed," Lombard said.



A vote of the Board of Selectmen and the Advisory Committee is needed to make line item transfers near the close of the fiscal year (June 30).

Pescatore said he did not oppose the transfer, but was concerned about communication.

"I'd like to know how we got here," Pescatore said. Lombard did not know what the to-be-paid invoices were for, but said the budget would be balanced with this transfer.

The Selectmen approved the line item transfer and requested to get a list of the invoices associated with the amount.

The boys tennis team closed a very successful season with a 5-0 loss to No. 4 seed Dover Sherborn (15-3), who made it to the semifinal round.

The boys finished the season with an 11-8 record and a South Shore League title.

The girls meanwhile, beat No. 11 Cape Cod Academy (9-9) in the first round before losing a 3-2 decision at Martha's Vineyard.

Cohasset, seeded No. 6, finished their season 15-7.

Laxers win first two tournament games

By William Wassersug

The quest to defend their Div. 3 State Title started on a strong note for the Cohasset boys lacrosse team last Thursday afternoon with a 14-1 win over No. 14 seed Westwood (14-10) in the first round and a 17-6 win over Newburyport in the quarterfinal.

The No. 3 seeded Skippers (14-5) got goals from nine different players as Cohasset rolled in the opener.

They'll play at No. 2 Weston (18-2) today at 4:30 p.m.

It should be an interesting matchup.

While Cohasset is seeded No. 3 and has the five losses, those have all been against top competition, and in the rankings on laxpower.com, Cohasset is ranked three spots higher.

Both of Weston's losses have been to Concord-Carlisle (No. 2 seed in Div. 2).

Cohasset got three goals from Thomas Flibotte, while Kyle Livingstone, John McGoldrick, Alex Kinnealey and NIck Tangherlini scored twice.

Will Golden, Jack Carrier and Charlie Neaves also scored.

The win set up a game against No. 11 Newburyport (15-3) in the quarterfinals.

"We haven't played in 12 days," Cohasset coach Tom Flanagan said. "There are little things we need to work on, but I'm pretty happy with the guys."

Getting goals from so many different players was part of the plan.

Defending champs open with victories

Skippers beat Old Colony and Westport

Gatehouse News Service

The game will go in the books as a four-hit shutout for Cohasset High School pitcher Jeff Cavanaro, but the Skippers' 8-0 quarterfinal victory over Westport was as much of a team effort as you'll ever see.

Cohasset scored runs in all but the second inning, and Cavanaro was the beneficiary of some outstanding defensive play up the middle as the No. 4 seed and defending state champion Skippers (16-6) advanced to the Division 4 sectional semifinals against Upper Cape last night at Adams Field in Quincy (Results were unavailable at print time).

"Jeff was definitely in control from the start," Cohasset coach Pete Afanasiw said of the UMass-Amerst-bound senior. "They put the bat on the ball early, but as usual Jeff finds a way to settle down. He's very calm, cool and collected on the mound and at the plate."

That was evident in the Westport sixth inning, when the Wildcats put together three consecutive base hits to load the bases with one out. Cavanaro reached back and

GOLF NOTES

In search of good stories

PAUL HARBER

We're back!

For the third year we'll be the links with The Clubhouse and Clubhouse Extra (online).

We're looking for great stories, notes of interest and feats of glory.

You have any? Don't be afraid to share with us.

Golf season is so short here in southeastern Massachusetts it is nearly disheartening.

Heck, the days start getting shorter in two weeks and we haven't found our groove yet.

But because it is so short, there is something going on every day.

So please check out our blog (http://blogs.wickedlocal.com/clubhouseextra-blog/) between issues of the newspaper and we'll try to keep you up to date online.

Kudos to MGA Links

The MGA Links at Mamantapett in Norton hosted a group of students from the Perkins School for the Blind for a day of golf and enjoyment.

Students were given the thrill of hitting a golf ball under the guidance of several PGA instructors and volunteers.

The students also tested their putting skills on the greens at MGA Links while sharing stories of their own experiences of playing miniature golf.

"It's great to be able to continue this tradition that we have of coming to MGA Links for a day with the students," said Bill McMahon, a blind golfer who has worked with the MGA and the Perkins School for the last seven years.

"There are only so many opportunities for disabled golfers to experience the game and we want these kids to know that nothing should get in their way as far as learning about the game of golf." Braintree Muni head pro Bob Beach came over for the day to lend a hand.

"I've had the good fortune of working with a lot of disabled golfers and special needs students over the years," said Beach.

"Each year being able to help these blind students learn about the game is always a thrill for me and it is great to see the MGA make this opportunity available here at MGA Links."

Beach has done so much disadvantaged and challenged golfers at Braintree and never gets the credit he deserves.

Leopold wins Hornblower

Bob Leopold fashioned rounds of 1-under 68 and 2-under 67 to capture the 47th Hornblower Memorial Golf Tournament at Plymouth Country Club last weekend.

It isn't the first time the former Rollins College star won the Hornblower.

Leopold was the 2009 champion and last year finished as the runner-up. Leopold was tied for the lead after Friday's first round with four other golfers.

Kingston's Herbie Aikens and Plymouth CC's Mike Willock, Western Mass's Andy Drohen and Vesper's Phil Smith were tied with Leopold. Aikens has been playing well. He recently qualified for the U.S. Amateur Public Links Championship.

On Old Cape Cod ...

Several of the top senior amateurs in the region are headed to Cape Cod for the State Senior Four-Ball championship, which will be held at the Golf Club of Cape Cod in East Falmouth and the Willowbend Club in Mashpee on June 7-8. If I had to pick a team to win, it would be Kevin Carey of Dennis Pines and Ray Richards of Thorny Lea. Carey, who does not play in many events, but is a bomber off the tee, and Richard, a steady golfer as you will every final, have been playing well of late. Carey won the Norfolk County Classic a few weeks ago and was a winner at the Seagulls Four-Ball on Cape Cod.

Good day at Black Rock

The New England PGA Assistant Pros Spring Series held its Championship at Black Rock in Hingham June 6 and Jeffrey Martin of Point Judith (R.I.) CC fashioned an even par 71 for a one stroke victory over Jim Fairbanks of Nonesuch River (Maine) GC. John Askew of Boston GC of Hingham, Kenneth Keefe of Marshfield CC and Aaron Ungvarsky of Cohasset GC all tied for ninth with 77s.

MEET THE CHAMP

David Pomarico, South Shore Country Club

[Editor Note: This is the first in a series of our profiles of local club champions. We ask club professionals in the region to forward us their reigning club champion and a contact number and email so we can profile them during the season. Please forward this information to pharber@wickedlocal.com]

David Pomarico dressed up in his golfing finery for the South Shore Country Club opening day tournament. PHOTO COURTESY OF JOHN BEALE

David Pomaricio's golf game is like a bottle of fine wine. It gets better with age.

He has won the South Shore Country Club champion several times, including last summer when he came back from bypass surgery to reclaim his title.

Pomaricio is loquacious on the golf course, happy to play with golfers of all abilities and willing to dispense advance to those who wish it.

The Weymouth native began playing at South Shore in the 1980s, and when the club closed in 1986, he played at various clubs on the South Shore, primarily Presidents Golf Course in Quincy.

But when South Shore was revitalized under the supervision of Jay McGrail, he saw the terrific changes at his old club and returned to Hingham.

Age: 65* (*turns 66 in two weeks)

Introduction to golf: When I was 10 I was a caddie at South Shore Country Club, but I never got the urge to play until I stopped playing softball when I was 38.

How long did it take you to become a single digit handicapper? When I joined South Shore in 1983, I was a 12- or 14-handicapper and I gradually got it down to single digits.

What was your best handicap: My best handicap was a plus 1. Today, my handicap is a 2.0

Favorite Foursome: If I could pick anyone, living or deceased, I would play with Bobby Jones, Nora Berard and Tom O'Leary.

Most memorable round: It was at Oak Hill in Fitchburg a few years ago. I shot a 66 on my own ball at the State Senior Four-Ball. And that included a penalty shot. It was better than most of the team scores that day.

Best round ever: I shot a 63 at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy when I was a member about 15 years ago in the Club Championship. I had nine birdies and two bogeys.

Cohasset sailors help Tabor

The Tabor Academy sailing team won their 8th National Team Racing Championship at the Norfolk Yacht and Country Club yesterday by virtue of their 10-1 record in the qualifying round robin. Newport Harbor HS (CA) beat the Hotchkiss School (CT) in a sail off for second place; Pt Loma HS (CA) was fourth.

The Seawolves started the regatta with solid wins over Rockwell Heath HS (TX), St Thomas Aquinas HS (FL) and the host school, Norfolk Collegiate (VA), before ripping off a string of very tight wins on Saturday afternoon against the heavy weights of the regatta. Victories over Corona del Mar HS (CA), Pt Loma HS (CA), 2011 Mallory champions the Antilles School (USVI), and west coast rival Newport Harbor HS (CA) placed the Seawolves in the club house Saturday night with a 7-0 record; the only undefeated school left in the regatta.

Despite the light breezes, the race committee did a great job of getting in 42 of the 66 races in the qualifying round, but they were going to need some help from the weather gods to complete the round robin and get in a four-team championship double round-robin before the time limit expired at 4 pm on Sunday. That help never arrived as Sunday morning brought a wind delay until 1:30 pm. It was clear that the qualifying round was all that could be accomplished this year and the Seawolves set out to maintain their advantage

Wins over Lake Forest HS (IL) and Bainbridge Island HS (WA) set up a show down between Tabor Academy (9-0) and the Hotchkiss School in Lakeville, CT (8-1) for the championship. Hotchkiss was Tabor's only loss in a 23-1 dual meet season and the Bearcats had nipped the Seawolves at the NESSA Team Racing championship the week before. Tabor jumped out to a 2-3-4 lead at the weather marks, but were caught on the downwind leg and forced into the 1-5-6 losing combination. Digging deep, the gang fought back and when Alex Jacob '12 and Doyle Calhoun '12 out tacked the Hotchkiss boat that was covering them, at the finish line, they slide over the line in third to seal the victory! Overcome with emotion, the Seawolves sailed flat in their final race, losing to Annapolis HS (MD).

Sailing for Tabor were Nick Johnstone '11, Connor Murphy '11, Alex Jacob '12, Riley Calhoun '12, Doyle Calhoun '12, Sean Golden '12, Asa Smith '12, and Mackenzie Cooper '13. The victory marks the 8th time that Tabor has stood on top of the high school Team Racing world (2011, 2007, 1997, 1995, 1994, 1991, 1990, 1989); more than any other school in the nation. When combined with six second place finishes (1992, 1999, 1996, 2002, 2008, 2010), the Seawolves have stood on the podium 14 times in 23 years.

SAILING

Cohasset's Evans All-American

Sailing for Georgetown University, Rebecca Evans of Cohasset competed in the Inter-Collegiate Sailing Association's National Championship Regatta in Cascade Locks, Oregon, May 23 through June 1.

Evns sailed as crew in the Women's, Team Race and Co-ed events. At the conclusion of the regatta, she was selected by a committee of coaches as a member of the ICSA All-American Team.

All-American crews are chosen based on competitive records over the fall and spring, demonstrated leadership, outstanding body mechanics and well as boat handling skills and a proven ability to improve the results of skippers with whom he or she sails.

In the Women's Finals, Rebecca crewed for her classmate Sydney Bolger of Long Beach, CA. Eighteen colleges competed in the finals, with each college or university having an A and a B team in the competition. The Championship was awarded to University of Rhode Island, who had the best total score of its two teams.

The Bolger-Evans team, however, had the best score for the A division, thereby winning the Madeleine Trophy for 2011.

Rebecca is the daughter of Dan and Grace Evans and was active in the Junior Activities Program at the Cohasset Yacht Club, as both a junior and an instructor.

Youth lacrosse TTL Select teams sweep into championships

Congratulations to the Cohasset TTL Select Boys U13 and U15 teams for sweeping the playoffs and advancing to the League Lax Championships (vs Marshfield) this Saturday at Alumni Field. This is the first time that both levels of our town's select lacrosse program have earned the right to play in the BIG game and it promises to showcase the top lax talent and competition on the South Shore this season.

After getting into the playoffs as the 4th seed and as a clear underdog, our U13 team earned their bid by besting Scituate in OT in one of the best youth games that we've ever seen. Our U15 team, which will be heading to the US Lacrosse National Championships in FLA this summer, continued their dominant play with a close win over Bridgewater to earn their chance to do what even the Pats couldn't — go undefeated and win the Championship.

This is a great time for Cohasset lacrosse and I hope you will all come out this Saturday to cheer on the home teams and our future All-Stars to victory and an unprecedented sweep of the league championships.

Games are Saturday June 11 at Cohasset High School Alumni Field.

The Boys U13 Championships is 4 p.m. and the U15 is at 5:30 p.m.

The Town Tournament League is the South Shore's premier youth select lacrosse league featuring the "best-of-the-best" from the region's top lacrosse powerhouses competing against each other for the right to claim the TTL League championship and title each year.

Cohasset TTL Select teams are sponsored by Cohasset Club Lacrosse.

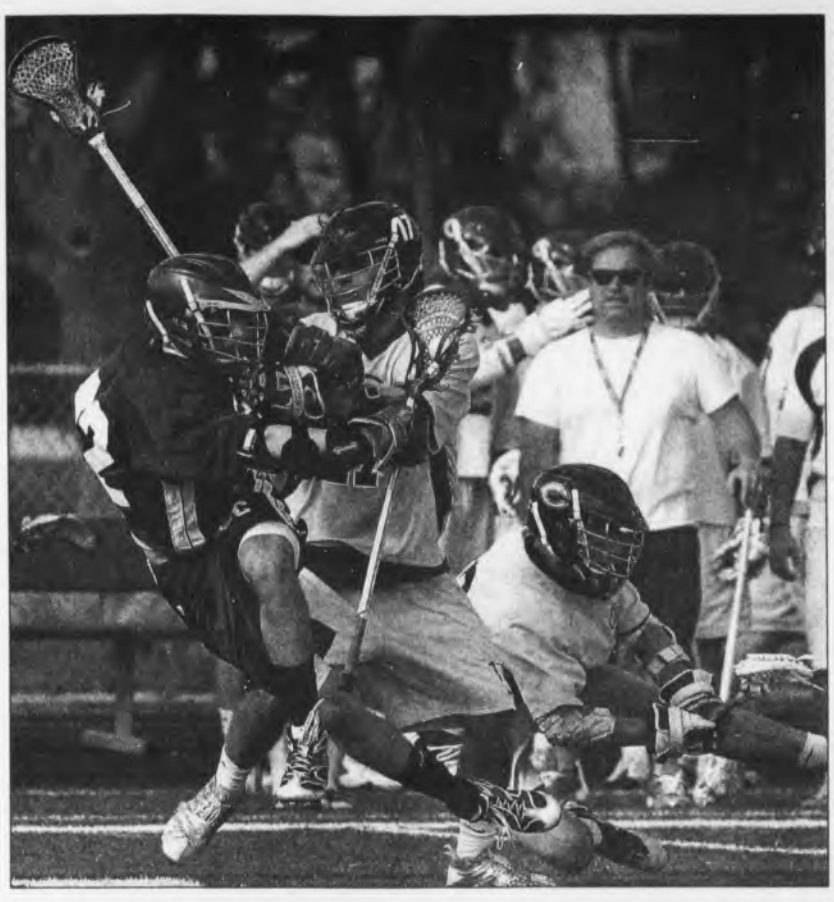
forced Rob Rego to ground into a 4-6-3 double play to end the inning.

"I knew they were a good hitting team so I tried to keep them off balance," said Cavanaro, who didn't allow a hit between the second and sixth innings. "My middle infielders (shortstop Anders Goetz and second baseman Jamie Faber) was a big help today."



The Skippers grabbed a 2-0 lead in the first inning when a double by Faber scored Goetz, and Cavanaro (single to left) scored on a ground out by Jamie Timothy. Cohasset scored another pair in the third inning when Shane Haggerty reached on an error and scored on a towering double by Goetz. Faber picked up his second RBI when he delivered Goetz with a base hit to make it 4-0.

Cohasset pushed across single runs in the fourth inning (John Collins scoring on a Goetz ground out) and Timothy coming across on a base hit to left by Chris Murphy in the fifth. Cohasset put the game out of reach with two more in the sixth inning. Haggerty again led off by reaching on a two-base error when his fly to left field was misplayed. He scored on a wild pitch, and Goetz scored his third run of the game on an RBI single by Timothy.

Cohasset's defense sparkled all around the diamond, with Goetz ranging deep into the hole to down Dan Murphy in the third, followed by Drew Cobin's nice play at third which was scooped out of the dirt by first baseman Murphy.

"Early in the year these guys were making four or five errors a game, but we've really elevated our defensive play," said Afanasiw, noting that his team feels little pressure to repeat its state title. "If anything, I think it's the opposite. If anything, it's a confidence-builder. They've been there before and that anything is possible."

In their playoff opener Faber allowed one hit over four innings and was 1 for 1 with three walks for the Skippers (15-6) in a first-round win over No. 13 Old Colony (11-9). Haggerty was 2 for 4 with 3 RBI for Cohasset.

well," said Flanagan, who is in his first year as head coach of the Skippers. "And the defense played really well."

The team was ready to play.

"They're the defending champions," Flanagan said of his squad. "They came to play. Our practices have been intense. This is the fun part of the season. It's what you play for."

Cohasset continued to roll with a 17-6 victory over No. 11 seed Newburyport (15-4) in the quarterfinal round.

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is an inclusive, Christ-centered community committed to exploring the intersection of our faith and our lives. We invite you to join us in this exploration on Sunday mornings and through a variety of special programs during the week. All are welcome to worship God with us at St. Stephen's!

This Sunday (June 12) is a big day at St. Stephen's. Pentecost is the day when the church celebrates the coming of the Holy Spirit upon the first followers of Jesus and the creation of the Church. At St. Stephen's, we will be having a joyful service for the whole family of God at 10am, followed by a picnic celebrating the end of another wonderful year of Godly Play, our children's program.

We have three more Sundays before our summer schedule begins. During the summer, our Godly Play and youth programs do not meet, but they will pick back up again when school begins in the fall.

AA now meets four times a week at St. Stephen's: Sundays at 7 p.m., there is a Closed Big Book Study. Tuesdays there is a Women's step meeting at 6:30p.m. and a closed discussion meeting at 8 p.m. Fridays at 6:30 p.m. there is a Beginner's meeting. All meetings take place in the Watermelon Room at the church office.
